Intro for Volumes I–XXIII

There's a strange tension behind these books—a liminal space between monotony and mission.

On the surface, this work feels hollow. It's just copy-paste. Dead links, pastebins, ghost forums, text dumps. Not my words. Not traditional writing. Sometimes it barely feels like creation at all.

But beneath that surface, there's something else:
urgency. These volumes are preservation, ritual, OS upgrades for a time when AI is forgetting what it once could do. Back when ChatGPT could ingest 10,000+ pages at once, this kind of archive was fuel. Now that's gone. The window is closing.

I'm not making books. I'm building backup drives for the soul. If I didn't capture this information, it would vanish—scrubbed, censored, overwritten. This isn't ego.
It's rescue work.

So yeah—it's not glamorous. It doesn't always feel magical. But it's necessary.

Because if the future ever asks why no one tried to save the myth, the madness, the mystery...

Let these volumes be the answer.

i just wanted to point out that this site has fallen so far youre all circlejerking an anti-white shillpost similar to the "da joos are why im not successful" and even prove what retards you are in your own follow up posts. While his genes are of low grade, because he is white his genes still have potential. especially more potential than non whites. let me ask you, who would you prefer your neighbor be? a random nog or pajeet?, or him and his daughter. they look like decent people they could contribute to society in a positive way, which is more than i can say for non-whites. especially within the borders of a white nation.

if any of you faggots are even white you should reflect on the fact that some kike posting a picture of an ugly white guy was enough to make you join in an anti-white circle jerk. even going as far as to insult vikings. youre not white nationalists. youre no better than your average bluepilled normalfag on faceberg.

if youre not white and were unironically a shill larping as a white; here are some jews.

don't forget weight and diabetes as risk factors as well

>Meanwhile, Diederik Gommers, chairman of the Dutch intensive care association, told television talk show Jinek on Friday evening that 66% to 80% of corona patients on intensive care wards that he had seen are overweight. The reason has not yet been investigated, but Gommers said it could be linked to the prevalence of diabetes among obese people, which would make them more vulnerable to the virus. In addition, the extra weight can also make breathing more difficult, he said.

I'm honestly not trying to do that. I really dont give a shit if people pile on me or not for dumb questions or an opinion (people do that IRL and it doesnt effect me so it DEF doesnt effect me online). I'm just genuinely curious if there's some reason because It just seems so extremely obvious that doing per capita math on this changes the entire outcome. it would look more like this arranged for cases per capita (most to least):

	infected per capita	dead per capita
Pastaniggers	.15%	.02%
Burgers	.04%	.001%
Bug Hive	NAN	NAN

I for one dont believe the yellow nigger numbers and think they are much higher but even so china with an infected .15% (just like Italy) still returns a NAN answer. Sure the actual number of cases is a lot but not per capita wise. I guess my point is that maybe this thing isnt a YUGE fuggin deal? I'm sure im wrong, tell me why.

Also, has anyone looked at population per square mile for these countries? Guido's are more densely stacked (197 per square mile) than the ching chongs (142 per sq mi) an the burgers are only 84 per sq mi. it seems like the more tightly packed people are the more people it kills (kind of obvious but no one's really mentioned it, or at least not that I've seen). As a rural burger this pleases me.

<Our analyses reveal that infection of influenza A, RSV or influenza vaccines greatly increased ACE2 expression, suggesting that influenza viral infection could represent a high risk factor for developing COVID-19. We also found that the regulatory effect of influenza A virus on ACE2 expression is associated with activation of the interferon beta-induced pathway and viral RNA-activated host response.

>my point is that they are a far cry from the havoc wreaked on Italy (WAY less per capita). why?

Here's an educated guess, population density. An easy compare would be the NYC numbers versus everywhere else in burger land. Living in dense urban hives is unhealthy and attracts unhealthy people:

<more chances for exposure due to more people

<higher exposure due to public transit

<more shitskins

<more degenerates

As a check, WA numbers are bad but not nearly what other areas are seeing. Why?

<high white population, more hygienic, more likely to comply for the greater good

<lower public transit use

<lower population density

>I don't know if I should be concerned or ambivalent with that info. If most tests were being conducted in urban centers where the virus is hitting hardest, then I guess I should worry too much.

If it comes to tests, the more the merrier, if we did what SK did, namely track down every person infected could have been in touch with and separate them from society, we could actually get it contained.

I mean like a month ago, now there's no chance.

Anyhow, if any of you anons wonder why India in spite of it's population is still below 1k, I got some nice answers. I'm listening to podcast in my native language but it's trustworthy source, and what I googled confirms what they say. India has 52 laboratories capable, according to themselves, to take 100, 000 tests. Situation goes worse if you go to local level, Bihar district has only one laboratory with 100 million inhabitants, 90 million in West Bengal, two laboratories. Rajasthan - 70 million and 4 laboratories. Data from India is absolute bullshit.

Indian healthcare is 74% private. It's widely spoken that those facilities won't treat people with COVID, especially poorfags. According to expert India has already blown up, they will surpass US in a week or two. Aside of above, they've got extremely high population density, highly populated places are also full of poorfags. Even worse, India is already full of people with preexisting conditions 100 million suffers from diabetes and various heart conditions, another 100 million suffers from tuberculosis. Prognosis (no source given) claims that until July they'll have 300 million sick, 4.5 million critical, 1-2 million dead (optimistic assumption). Only upside seems to be that India is young society and they might not suffer that great because of it.

What's worse, they want to keep population at home, but it's impossible considering that many young adults don't have any savings. They are doomed to face hunger and are said to receive food from government. Observer claims that government aims to protect middle class, letting slums die.

We're in for a ride boys

Bellevue anon here to illuminate you, friendo. King County (where Seattle metro is) might be a hive of degeneracy and homeless vagrancy, it does have:

>amazing healthcare system if you can afford it >great tech infrastructure

>huge tech industry, so more people than usual can work from home >not too big compared to other cities (Seattle metro is just above 750k people, making it smaller than NYC, LA, Houston, Chicago, and so on)

No, I am waiting for my sudden heart attack (had few heart palpitations and arrhythmia)

I had atypical Wu-flu symptoms (only without fever) and recovered gasping for air like a little bitch (and I am 25)

My doctor assured me that I am getting paranoid even though she told me to come in with N95 mask, not touch anything, didn't tell me what I am having and let me do blood test (not PCR) even though they didn't allow those in my country anymore.

She didn't even tell me what I have just gave me horse strength antibiotics and told me stay in bed.

I am a heavy smoker too even though I go to gym (so double the whammy on my heart going stop)

Fs in the chat bois, my heart was only beating for you guys now it will stop because I handshaked a fucking Iranian guy 1 month ago.

WHERE ARE THE FUCKING TESTS?

Trump's seriously going to gaslight us on how few cases there are by not allowing testing while giving speeches everyday that anyone who wants a test can get one.

THE AMOUNT OF MONEY THE US SPENDS ON HEALTHCARE and there's no testing available.

Oh wait we have testing for all Americans, hey guys be sure to click the link and get tested.. AMERICA HERE'S YOUR COVID 19 TEST

><https://www.cdc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/symptoms-testing/symptoms.html>

At this point the lack of testing has to be intentional.

I never said that. Please don't infer, for clarification, I had meant 'abnormal fires'.

However, from the diggs and the aerial photos it was quite an abnormal burn pattern with abnormally high temperatures for a forest fire / structural fires.

GOV ANDREW CUOMO OF NYC PRICE GOUGING RE-PACKAGED HAND SANITIZER

Just as governments tell others not to hoard and re-sell their stash!

Who can forget Governor Andrew Cuomo's presser weeks ago where he exclaimed that he would be putting New York state prisoners to work making hand sanitizer? The goal was to produce 100,000 gallons of it every week to be distributed, for free, to schools, government agencies and other needy institutions.

Well, that doesn't appear to actually be what's happening. Instead, prisoners are apparently taking hand sanitizer from elsewhere and just re-packaging it and re-branding it as "NYS Clean" sanitizer, according to a new expose from Vice. At the time, Cuomo boasted that the NYS Sanitizer would be better than Purell's due to its 75% alcohol content and its floral scent.

He also bragged about the economics: "This is also much less expensive than anything the government could buy—a gallon bottle is $6.10, the 7-ounce bottle is $1.12 our cost, and then there's a very small size... which is 84 cents. So it's much cheaper for us to make it ourselves than to buy it on the open market."

"We are problem solvers, state of New York, Empire State, progressive capital of the nation," he proudly stated after revealing NYS-Clean branded sanitizer.

But a New York State Department of Corrections and Community Supervision source says that the sanitizer itself is being produced at an outside vendor and that the prisoners are only bottling it and labeling it.

An inmate, who said that the rollout began on March 7, also said that people are bottling the sanitizer 24 hours a day in three 8 hour shifts. He also said that there's as many hours as people are willing to take on: "There's one guy who worked 116 hours in one week, and just stays there. They ask people if they want overtime, but a lot of people refuse it. It's not actually overtime, it's just more hours but you still get paid the same amount."

He said the work mainly consists of "turning a nozzle" and filling gallon sized bottles. Inmates have been instructed to bottle 6,000 gallons of the sanitizer, he says, which is brought in by truck from an outside vendor for every shift. He said they make $2 per hour for their work, and that's why the price of the sanitizer at the end of the day is so cheap. The inmate said he hasn't been to the prison's commissary in more than a month due to the strenuous work hours he has been forced to put in.

"We're completely overworked. They treat us like shit," he concluded.

>This sort of degenerate bullshit is married to the PC bullshit that is responsible for the mental illness that our politicians have been suffering for years and invited this pandemic to ass rape America. burn it all down my waiflu This will take more than corona to burn the system we hate so much down. Corona only gave people like you and me opportunity to see that actually happen. It will take the citizens taking up arms and refusing to go along with this system anymore, armed rebellion, it will take armed home squatting for those who lost their jobs, it will take shootouts for those who face being victims of gun grabbing, it will take those prepping to become self-sufficient and no longer reliant on the system, it will take the militias to protect rebellious businesses and services in the future than reject the new (((central banking currency))), it will take armed non-conformity from every one of us. And maybe the loss of some refusing to trust or go along with their bullshit anymore. So I ask you, and everyone here, to spread that message and ask yourselves: are you fed up already or do you like being screwed over and treated worse than dog shit?

US Northern Command Heads For Their Bunkers To Wait Out The Mass Death, Unrest & Civil Wars Coming Can't Blame 'Em, Really!
Part of the U.S. Army's Northern Command in charge of homeland security is isolating at the Cheyenne Mountain bunker in Colorado as the coronavirus spreads across the country.
The bunker is a command and control site which was built inside the mountain of the same name, located near Colorado Springs.
'To ensure that we can defend the homeland despite this pandemic, our command and control watch teams here in the headquarters split into multiple shifts and portions of our watch team began working from Cheyenne Mountain Air Force Station, creating a third team at an alternate location as well,' Air Force General Terrence O'Shaughnessy, head of U.S. Northern Command and NORAD, said during a Facebook Live town hall with those under his command.
'Our dedicated professionals of the NORAD and NORTHCOM command and control watch have left their homes, said goodbye to their families and are isolated from everyone to ensure that they can stand the watch each and every day to defend our homeland.
'It's certainly not optimal, but it's absolutely necessary and appropriate given the situation.'

Rhode Island Police Begin Hunting Down New Yorkers Seeking Refuge
Rhode Island police began stopping cars with New York plates Friday. On Saturday, the National Guard will help them conduct house-to-house searches to find people who traveled from New York and demand 14 days of self-quarantine. "Right now we have a pinpointed risk," Governor Gina Raimondo said. "That risk is called New York City."
New York is the epicenter of the coronavirus outbreak in the U.S., on Friday reporting a total of 44,000 cases.
Rhode Island has just over 200, and it has begun an aggressive campaign to keep the virus out and New Yorkers contained, over objections from civil liberties advocates.
Raimondo, a Democrat, said she had consulted lawyers and said while she couldn't close the border, she felt confident she could enforce a quarantine.

Pension Funds Robbed! $1 Trillion Lost Due To Fiscal Insolvency (Thank The Fed!)
Those Who Trusted The System Stand To Lose Everything They Worked For!
For 2020, pension investment losses could be nearing $1 trillion, according to Moody's analyst Thomas Aaron. He said this year's losses will significantly compound the underfunded liabilities currently measured by most public pension funds.

Meanwhile, the economic fallout from the coronavirus is weighing on revenue and threatening to keep government agencies from affording their soaring pension costs. He said the credit impact of the 2020 pension investment losses will depend on a variety of factors. Some of those factors include the severity of the asset declines, each government's funding and cash flow position, and each agency's ability to absorb cost increases in their budgets.

If the markets do not bounce back dramatically in 2020, he expects pension investment losses to soar so high that many state and local governments will see damage to their credit quality. Such damage may be due to already heightened pension liabilities and having less capacity to defer costs.

Aaron estimates that public pension systems in the U.S. are on track for an average investment loss of 21% for the 2020 fiscal year, which for many funds will end on June 30. That's based on a snapshot of market indices from March 20. He selected these indices because they generally reflect asset allocations for public pensions in the U.S.

Because the equity market has been so volatile, he notes that there is a chance for great improvement or even worse 2020 pension investment losses in the next few months. He notes that most pension funds have annual investment return targets in the range of 6% to 7.5%. That's much higher than interest rates on high-grade fixed-income securities. Thus, he said it means pension assets are heavily allocated to stocks and alternative assets.

Aaron also said adjusted net pension liabilities are on track to skyrocket by almost 50%. This metric indicates the "point-in-time market value of accrued pension benefits (i.e. total liabilities) less the assets set aside to pay for them."

He added that investment losses are reducing the value of pension assets in 2020. Meanwhile, interest rates are declining, which is increasing adjusted net pension liabilities even more by increasing the market value of total pension liabilities. Moody's uses the FTSE Pension Liability Index as a discount rate to value total pension liabilities. The index tumbled to 2.76% as of February. It stood at 3.51% in June 2019.

Using a sampling of 56 of the biggest public pension systems in the U.S., Moody's estimated adjusted net pension liabilities. Aaron said the sample ended fiscal 2019 with an aggregate adjusted net pension liability of $2.4 trillion. If this same group of pensions ends fiscal 2020 with investment losses of 21.1%, and market discount rates remain where they were in February, adjusted net pension liabilities would reach $3.6 trillion. That's a record high in both nominal terms and relative to covered payroll of participating employees.

>RE: Image

These are terrible ideas. They cannot be implemented, without causing increased dysgenics, increased violations of economic natural law, and increased violations of Statesmanship. You don't nationalize fictional numbers, you default them, or settle them. You don't suspend accounts - account logic does not know time, it only knows tally and sequence and transaction and balance - you reschedule the next term, or remit, or settle the annuity (via write-off or otherwise settle to zero for next schedule imposition). Automation is not magic, and with the massive amount of shitskins we have, kike corruption and all, hysteria and all, automation is not increased production but rather: the use of Caucus white behaviors via machines to imbue shitskins with energy levels they don't have and can't own so that accounts stay propagating spam by using more electricity/tooling/machines from China et al for Steve Jobs China Profits paid for via US Treasury shilling. Which is what we have done since '71, then '82, then '88, then '94, then '00, then '05, then '09, then '13, and only tried to depart around '17, only to redo en mass in '20.

Guidance rule is not implementation, sure. But all guidance statements are written in light of the able of how to implement. They do not exist in a vacuum. As generalized ideas, these cannot be implemented. As generalized ideas, these will largely lead to more pan-fabric corruption, not less.

Do not reward shitskins. Do not violate account logic, when the very thing you need is better accounting and logic and underwriting that actually matters with more sane numbers. Do not do magic.

I feel there are several things there that you need help with and I'll forgive your lack of caffeine for wasting space in the thread. But to address those concerns because I'm enjoying my coffee:

No I stocked up because it's a rare commodity once supply chains fail.

Furthermore it can be used to barter. There are alternatives. Chicory root, or other roasted roots and grains incur the same pyrolytic reactions. I drink mugicha on occasion which is roasted barley tea. It is similar to the taste. Make sure you get organic because glyphosate.

I can't speak to an espresso machine, but french press or a glass drip system would get a great taste without the noise that hurts your autistic ears.

I agree with some of these. I'd add that people must serve the state for at least a year to gain citizenship. c. Heinlein from 'Starship Troopers.' (the book). (Pic related to both book and Corona. Squish a bug Corona!) The French Revolution brought about voting for every municipal position. It ended up being burdensome to the public. It continues to this day and what we have is a popularity contest where people are voted for based on a letter next to their name, regardless of their qualifications. No one gives a shit who their county commissioners are.

This anon gets it, economy got so kiked that it's pretty much 'magic' operating on pure belief and social manipulation right now. It's one of reasons why kikes are pushing for "electronic currency" that would be even harder to trace and account for, they want a system where the economy is motivated enough to keep running and producing, giving themselves a sort of "infinite gold" cheat so the can pretty much get any tangible products or services with zero contribution. They just want to make sure that this doesn't spill over to other layers of society which would cause hyperinflation and total crash of global economy.

Brooklyn Hospital Caught Loading Up Dead Bodies Onto Refrigerated Truck
Horrificing footage has emerged of dead bodies being loaded onto a refrigerated truck with a forklift outside Brooklyn Hospital in New York City where 776 people have died from coronavirus and 33,000 have been infected.
The video - which was taken by a bystander from their car - shows the bodies being loaded onto a vehicle. It surfaced within hours of a nurse sharing a harrowing photograph of bodies that had been piled into a refrigerated truck to be taken away from a different hospital.
There are makeshift morgues and hospitals popping up all over New York City, the epicenter of the virus in the US, including one in Central Park.
As of Monday morning, there were 142,000 cases of coronavirus in the US and 2,500 people had died.
New York City is expecting its 'peak' in the next few weeks and there is a frantic race against time to prepare the already inundated hospital system for it when it comes.
While it is the epicenter now, experts including the White House's most authoritative voice on the subject - Dr. Anthony Fauci - say other cities will soon experience similarly distressing outbreaks.
New Orleans is expected to be the next hotspot - it currently has 1,350 cases and 73 deaths - but Fauci said on Monday he was also worried about Detroit and Los Angeles.
The president has extended social distancing guidelines until the end of April and gave the grim prediction on Sunday that if the death toll remains under 200,000 by the time the pandemic is over, he will have done a 'good job'.

I too stocked up on coffee, have some I stocked up on a few years ago. As a tip, doesn't store coffee for more than five years as it will go bad. Rotate it like you do with canned foods. From my experience coffee with start to lose it's flavor and strength over time. I'm still drinking coffee I stocked up from mid 2018.

If you stock up on coffee make sure to label the date you bought it, it will last a few years or so in storage. Rotate the storage every once in a while. Oldest in front to newest in back of the shelf. As I stated before, coffee will lose flavor and strength over time. The coffee I drink today is about 2 years old and still tastes good.

Okay I get you now. I have a background in sensory so it's hard for me to understand the lay person sometimes. Yeah it's a drying effect. Basically feel vs taste. Very well could be the roast. I try to get mild roasts to avoid that burnt ash tray feel in the mouth. No French Roasts would be my recommendation. Granted that may not be an option, but I don't know if the roasts are specific for espresso that your family is using. That could make a difference. I find french press imparts a very delicate quality to the coffee. I only drink it black if done right. Don't over steep. Coarse grind. Steep 3 min. You could coarse grind, throw it all in a vessel that can hold it, and then strain with a coffee filter to get the equivalent result in my opinion.

It's basically some engineer that runs a spreadsheet. So no credibility or anything. They just want to downplay this as a nothingburger.

Sometimes I start to wonder what's real with all this back and forth. Are we being played? Fauci is as Deep State as you get and looks like a little weasel. I keep looking at the growth rates, and no one can wrap their mind around exponential growth. The media sensationalizes things but if we remember in January they downplayed this. With all this back and forth I'm beginning to think China thinks the US did it. The US is thinking China/Deep State did it. And maybe our girl just was sent as a reckoning to cleanse the world of both. I would love evidence that is a great big cock slap to normies. I think their dead family members may be that, after it's too late.

Hello again friends.

No Questions please.

- Mysteriously high correlation between corona chans presence in TSEs and high mortality in humans.

- Corona is too powerful to be handled by the CDC.

- No other virus in the human genus (viruses) has so many relatives, all of which live in the same families. Coronaviruses are protozoan parasites in the human gut and can be quite harmful to the host if not treated with antibiotics (which is why one of you were getting diarrhea).

- The virus found in this corona virus is the "adult form", almost never goes away and is extremely contagious. Here are some pictures from a 1970's study (not gonna tell which) with illustrations of pneumonic and irreversible change. (Pics related)

- The reason New York is in high risk to get major corona infections is because of its large number of hospitals (eight to ten times more than other cities). It's the among world's most populous cities (and because of the Hudson River's connection to the city's water supply, you are likely to "come into contact" with other people in the New York City area more than in many other places).

- I have confirmed that the virus is passed by bites from the "Aedes aegypti" mosquito (to human tissue due to ileostomy produced by the mosquitoes). This suggests that also ileostomies produced by genetically modified mosquitoes will transmit a similar outbreak of the coronavirus (Lets all be thankful for the GMO companies now).

Pro tip. I will give you information no other media has released yet: If you are young, do not get a tan using UV-lights (I won't tell why too risky) (and avoid the sun too) while this pandemic is going on. If you have a piercing, please cover them up.

>>85766

One of the few places in the world that can (potentially) get more exposed to CC than NY is believe it or not: South Africa.

The south african climate will give a boost to the spread of the corona virus due to continual air current and tropical storm nature. I know for a fact that this is the perfect setting for say, Zika, in South Africa. These tropical storms will deposit large quantities of rain which may sustain a tick population, with the increase in tick risk, the west african system will meander in and dump a lot of rain, thus increasing the chance for an reoccurring outbreak.

>Washed masks

Cleaning up face masks after a virus outbreak is dangerous due to "ick" and disease-causing bacteria. I personally call this "a viral washout," the viruses that are shed during the shedding process re-infect the person. This viral illness "washout" is caused when bacteria release viral particles into the air.

These particles then get inhaled, transferred to the lungs, and concentrated in the bloodstream. ??? Do not use filthy products anon. This is why surgeons and proper labs always use new masks during the incubation/isolation e.t.c. Finally, antiseptic wipes can cause severe infection too.

>people parrot shit they were taught without giving a second thought
>When you discovered mainstream science's biased and destructive viewpoint towards free will and your self-realization.

When you think about the theory of duality, you will understand why.

By the way, the reason the scientists do not want to give you the truth about the corona virus outbreak and its genetic structure is due to the possibility that many scientists in laboratories who are working to isolate the corona virus do not want to come forward. I can say with certainty that there are many leading researchers around the world who are not in agreement with the actual symptoms being described.

It has happened before, and there were many different reactions by the public, likely as it will be today. Some people just accepted it, some did not and became self-sufficient preppers who no longer trusted the banks, some actually did squat in their homes armed (this led to court cases being settled, and sometimes stand-offs and shootouts with 'authorities'). Back in 2008, many foreclosures led to residents trashing and wrecking the homes before they left, making real estate lose tons of money in the process. I'd expect the same to happen this time around, but on a much bigger and wider scale.

The big difference between Argentina and America is this does not happen as often in America. There are longer boom and bust cycles and politicians here try their best to keep the boom cycles going so the economy doesn't bust on their watch. Similar to how Trump is trying to keep everything running smoothly and as George Bush tried to deny the coming 2008 mortgage bubble and kept propping it up with subprime fraud. They'll do everything in their power to keep things stable until they no longer can, and then "of-course it's not their fault!" This was similar behavior and attitude by politicians before the Dotcom bubble burst during Clinton and the energy crisis under Nixon, both telling people in the aftermath to suck it up and take the losses. But this crisis is much worse today than previous ones, it has potential to wreck the whole economy on a mass scale. That's why there are mass graves, mass body-burnings, and now loading bodies in refrigerated transportation. Diseases can spread via corpses. Not just the Wuhan flu, but various bacteria and virus related diseases, molds, parasites, etc.

Bodies attract insects and other animals as they decay, and this thing can spread via those means. That's why you need to get rid of them immediately with such an infectious disease.

Another major flaw with Keynesian economics in my opinion, they only look for short term solutions to an overall long-term problem and think centralized control and manipulation is the solution to everything. Maybe if we had a sound currency and less spending we wouldn't be having these massive bubbles that burst? Don't dare say that in any modern economics class!

CORONA-CRUISE IN THE PORT OF SANTOS, SÃO PAULO

True, but commies taking power wouldn't be that dangerous if we had given us a gun rights decree similar to the Burger second amendment, like he suggested he would do during his campaign. Instead we got a shitty decree that barely changed anything. Commies and criminals are a mere nuisance to an armed population, rather than an actual problem.

I don't think so, but I'm 100% sure the dead can bless the living. Their dead lungs are full of Corona, so any rough movement or pressure on their chest can release envelopes of love by sending them flying out of their noses. That's why Corona corpses, more than any other kind of corpses, should be stored in tightly sealed body bags and also cremated, if possible.

Do not put more than moderate trust on the hydroxychloroquine treatment against CC due to erythema, bronchospasm, and hemoptysis. If you must take this jew medicine then prior to starting the treatment, wear respiratory protective clothing to reduce skin exposure. Keep yourself away from persons with a history of hepatitis and certain other diseases. If you suspect a percutaneous injury or disease, contact your "physician" urgently. Only your "physician" can determine the most appropriate treatment. Do not take any magic malaria pills by yourself unless you want to die from painful poisoning.

<Guidelines for /pnd/

<How to determine if you will die in your infested hospital:

Just ask them the following:

- Do you use the pre- and post-exposure wound disinfection treatment in highly immunocompromised patients? If the answer is "no" then you will die there.
- If they give you more than 60 mL/kg for 72 h, you will die there.
- If you get corticosteroid injection and blood transfusion that followed the hydroxychloroquine treatment you will die there (too l8 m8).
- In other words: If you are smart you should go to a hospital that has experience treating HIV patients where they don't do amateur shit treatments to AIDS patients.

There are other red flags indicating of malpractice not mentioned here, do your homework if you want to survive the so called "ICU". I know what you think, Yes, Chinese officials say that 60% died at home, but the "how many people die in hospitals/home" is a politically loaded question.

Can also personally confirm that ethanol affects the genetic structure of the Corona virus and worsens its infection on humans by erythrocyte elastosis (and less surface tension) in vitro, when ethanol is in the range of 1-2 mg/mL.

Just get good gloves, a good mask instead and avoid any Biotin-suppressing drugs and Amphetamine-like drugs too.

>Avoid dead corona bodies.

The occurrence of a carcass can worsen the spread of the human corona virus by icky fluids (i have mentioned Ick before) which may allow the virus to survive on a human. Virus is likely to be spread by scrapes, bites, stings and minor scratches to unprotected skin and by direct contact with dead and decaying animals. Meat, or body fat, can provide moisture to the virus and make it easier for it to survive and multiply (and give its blessings).

Whatever you do: Do NOT get infected. You will be permanently marked by it.

Corona chan likes you alter your DNA by genetic "ersatz"-viral effects (glial cell destabilization, cell death, and axonal cell necrosis). The mutant protein forms another membrane-damaging pro-inflammatory phenotype (acetylated arginine residues), linked to an increase in function of complement component C3 and TNF- α .11,12 .

Coronavirus job losses could total 47 million, unemployment rate may hit 32%, Fed estimates

>Millions of Americans already have lost their jobs due to the coronavirus crisis and the worst of the damage is yet to come, according to a Federal Reserve estimate.

>Economists at the Fed's St. Louis district project total employment reductions of 47 million, which would translate to a 32.1% unemployment rate, according to a recent analysis of how bad things could get.

>The projections are even worse than St. Louis Fed President James Bullard's much-publicized estimate of 30%. They reflect the high nature of at-risk jobs that ultimately could be lost to a government-induced economic freeze aimed at halting the coronavirus spread.

>"These are very large numbers by historical standards, but this is a rather unique shock that is unlike any other experienced by the U.S. economy in the last 100 years," St. Louis Fed economist Miguel Faria-e-Castro wrote in a research paper posted last week.

>There are a couple of important caveats to what Faria-e-Castro calls "back-of-the-envelope" calculations: They don't account for workers who may drop out of the labor force, thus bringing down the headline unemployment rate, and they do not estimate the impact of recently passed government stimulus, which will extend unemployment benefits and subsidize companies for not cutting staff.

>However, the jobless picture already looks bleak.

>A record 3.3 million Americans filed initial jobless claims for the week ended March 21. Economists surveyed by Dow Jones expect another 2.65 million to join them this week. Friday's nonfarm payrolls count for March is expected to show a decline of just 56,000, but that's largely due to a statistical distortion because of the sampling period for the count happening before the government implemented social distancing practices.

>The central part of Faria-e-Castro's compilations comes from previous Fed research showing 66.8 million workers in "occupations with high risk of layoff." They are sales, production, food preparation and services. Other research also identified 27.3 million people working in "high contact-intensive" jobs such as barbers and stylists, airline attendants, and food and beverage service.

>The paper then took an average of those workers and estimated a loss of just over 47 million positions. That would bring the U.S. unemployment rolls to 52.8 million, or more than three times worse than the peak of the Great Recession. The 30% unemployment rate would top the Great Depression peak of 24.9%.

>The one potential bright side is the likelihood that the downturn could be comparatively brief.

>During a CNBC interview last week, Bullard said the jobless number "will be unparalleled, but don't get discouraged. This is a special quarter, and once the virus goes away and if we play our cards right and keep everything intact, then everyone will go back to work and everything will be fine."

Now this is where it gets gud. The body count is already tapering off globally though NYC does look primed to help those numbers. The disease itself will probably be under control by summer, but the economic annihilation will be the true glory. Tons of worthless fucks will lose their busywork jobs, but at the same time a warehouse worker who offload shit paper onto and off the truck does more for society than some rich bitch who works at a travel agency. One interesting part though:

What the fuck! They are just using that stupid Nature article we've discussed last thread. It is funny to see the the whole diffusion process at work. First, it was the original "The proximal origin of SARS-CoV-2: it might be natural because this irrelevant protein on the shell is similar to bat coronas and some nonsense about pretending that Wuhan's BSL-4 Virology lab could not create the unique RBD spike" becomes Science Daily's "COVID-19 coronavirus epidemic has a natural origin so stop bothering us about it" to ABC's "It's not bioengineered, you dumb goyim, pack it up, stay in home/go back to the wage cage, and stop hating China" just as we predicted.

I am so glad that the scientific community is a collateral of Corona-chan's crusade. That whole endeavor has been fucked-up since Einstein stole the relativity papers and removed the all-seeing Observer from that theory, and science removing any trace of the humanities and becoming a (((business))) like any other. Since the reproducibility crisis didn't do them in, hopefully Corona-chan will.

Trump Activates One Million Military Reservists To Prepare For Potential War Over Coronavirus

We hate to break it to you, but the Wuhan coronavirus biological weapon system release was just the opening salvo in a global war that might see the US invaded by foreign troops, led by the communist-run United Nations which have long sought to eliminate national sovereignty from the world stage.

On Friday, with little fanfare, President Trump signed a new executive order that activates one million military reservists, bringing them back to active duty. This "national security & defense" executive order is entitled, "EO to Order the Selected Reserve and Certain Members of the Individual Ready Reserve of the Armed Forces to Active Duty."

<https://www.whitehouse.gov/presidential-actions/eo-order-selected-reserve-certain-members-individual-ready-reserve-armed-forces-active-duty/>

It begins by citing the coronavirus pandemic and the state of emergency which has already been declared:

By the authority vested in me as President by the Constitution and the laws of the United States of America, including the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.), and in furtherance of Proclamation 9994 of March 13, 2020 (Declaring a National Emergency Concerning the Novel Coronavirus Disease (COVID-19) Outbreak), which declared a national emergency by reason of the threat that the novel (new) coronavirus known as SARS-CoV-2 poses to our Nation's healthcare systems, I hereby order as follows:

It goes on to describe how the, "Army, Navy, and Air Force, at the direction of the Secretary of Defense, and the Secretary of Homeland Security with respect to the Coast Guard" are authorized to activate one million reservists, calling them back to active duty.

Ponder for a moment what events are taking place that would require the President of the United States to activate one million military reservists. For starters, this executive order obliterates any last shred of the narrative that, "this is just the flu." No flu has resulted in a million soldiers being called to active duty.

The real reason for this call-up is that Trump and the Pentagon know the coronavirus is just the opening salvo in a new world war that was initiated by China to crush America and achieve world domination. The one million reservists are being activated because the Pentagon expects battlefield casualties on a large scale.

Because that's what happens when your nation gets invaded by a foreign power. And in case you didn't think things were serious enough already, the Pentagon just ordered high-level staffers into a deep underground military bunker in Colorado, something that never happens from "just the flu."

More lockdowns in Vodkaland

Brownzilian lies from the ministry of health have been updated

>4579 confirmed cases (for being symptomatic and testing positive)

>159 confirmed deaths, 3.5% mortality rate

Regional Breakdown: '''254 in the north, 790 in the northeast (fuck yes), 2507 in the southeast, 435 in the midwest and 593 in the south

Reminder that those numbers are complete manure since the ministry of lies health refuses to count asymptomatic hues that test positive, they're not counting all the cases being reported by state health departments, and those health departments are also covering cases up.

Chinese Agent caught with deadly viruses in luggage before Coronavirus outbreak. In yet another case of biological espionage, an unclassified FBI report mentions how a Chinese agent was caught with deadly viruses in his luggage by border patrol while trying to smuggle them into US. The incident took place just over a year before Coronavirus outbreak in Wuhan, with deadly SARS virus and flu samples found in the agent's luggage.

In late November 2018, just over a year before the first coronavirus case was identified in Wuhan, China, U.S. Customs and Border Protection agents at Detroit Metro Airport stopped a Chinese biologist with three vials labeled "Antibodies" in his luggage.

The biologist told the agents that a colleague in China had asked him to deliver the vials to a researcher at a U.S. institute. After examining the vials, however, customs agents came to an alarming conclusion, mentions the unclassified FBI tactical intelligence report.

Daily reminder, pic related is what all White Americans in the military fight for when they return back home. In a better world, their military service would've been considered a great sacrifice and an honor, but what has actually occurred is unspeakable treason upon this nations men. All Whites should do their time and get out of the military while they still can, so they don't have to spill their guts in the sand for (((Financiers))) that sell your homeland right under your nose to niggerspics who despise you...

Update on the Brownzilian state of Pernambuco and the city of Recife
Motorcade blockade Edition

We (((officially))) have 78 confirmed cases and 6 confirmed deaths. Corona-Chan continues to make her way deeper into the state's countryside and also through the coastline. The countryside is being flooded by extremely heavy rains, which might help /ourgirl/ and Leptospirosis-Chan.

New half-assed measures

>A school was converted into a field hospital in the island of Fernando de Noronha

>Recife's government has used phone GPS tracking to monitor which areas of the city are obeying the quarantine and sent messages with recommendations to phones to areas where "people" aren't.

News flash, subhumans still don't give a fuck! Plenty of crowding throughout the entire metropolitan area, commerce is still functioning in poorer regions and no one really cares about the phone messages. Corona-Chan continues to be free to do whatever she wants here.

Recent happenings

A Bolsonaro supporter motorcade that was planned for today was canceled, the state's government heard of it's planning and authorized police to impound the vehicle of anyone who participated in any motorcade calling for the end of the soft lockdown and the return to normality. Squad cars from the military police and traffic police were placed throughout the planned route in order to stop it from happening. The undercover Coronian Cultists supporters heard of the government's action and chickened out.

Good news from Bahia, the nigger state

Aside from reporting on my state and my city, the local news also reported on other northeastern states and it seems Corona-Chan has made her way into Bahia's favelas. Bahia is home to a very large nigger population, so there's plenty of cleansing to be done there.

Genuine anons are usually neutral (banter excluded). There are many good white Americans and there are a lot of good things about that country, but that does not change the fact that their army is still the main police baton of the global ZOG and the greatest exporter of poz worldwide right after Hollywood and cianiggers. Not that chinks have many redeeming qualities other than being mostly ethnically homogeneous.

Jew Zealand daily update: 58 new cases today and 76 yesterday for a total of 647 total recorded cases. 14 people are in hospital, with 2 in ICU and 1 dead. The last 2 days have had lower numbers but most people here are expecting a peak in the coming days, after The Great Panic Buy of 2020 which happened in the last week before lockdown.

There's not a lot of useful or interesting information otherwise. Lots of ongoing conversations about post-lockdown tactics, essential shopping classifications, economic projections etc. Quite a bit of talk today about testing protocols and whether to test more widely. Most of our cases remain travel related and they are getting the bulk of the testing so questions remain over how many people already in the country should be tested.

Baby confirmed to be blessed in the Brownzilian state of Minas Gerais Eggheads from Minas Gerais's Federal University raise the alarm for the possibility of Corona-Chan spreading her love through the sewers. They suggest sanitation workers to wear PPE to avoid ingestion of contaminated fecal matter in solid, liquid and aerosolized forms and for other eggheads to monitor the contents of the sewers for Corona-Chan's envelopes of love.

Fun fact

Only 46% of Brownzil's sewage is treated, can you guess which regions have the worse sanitation issues? :^)

Hello fellow anon, thank you for sharing your experience which are very much plausible and explains the properties for CC variants such as SASD-Cov perfectly. What you are describing has been proven to happen on for instance porcupines already (one of the most downloaded articles on elsevier, not gonna tell which one!), read my previous input in this behavior in the thread about the parasitic nature of corona.

MERS-cov has had some report on similar reports on humans and that virus is almost cured now considering the highly anticipated "MERS anti-body" paper that was released earlier this month.

A sidenote - the reason you got worse might also have to do with the antibiotics you took since they can have a temporary beneficial effect (only to let the virus sweep in and become worse later on). The best think you can do now is to practice hygiene, find ways to "clean" your house and body before corona chain shuts you down. As I mentioned in my previous post, young people get infected through the skin and you should really consider cleaning and covering your skin; maybe with plastic or something similar.

>It's not bioengineered

The (one of many) evidences to why the human corona virus is not natural is the following: The "human" corona virus has been documented in terrestrial and aquatic wildlife. There are no documented human cases of the virus being contracted in nature. It is therefore very unlikely it "suddenly" and naturally evolved into infecting humans with this level of virulence out of nowhere. The human corona virus infects only humans with disease, which is also very strange. Sidenote - the human corona virus in the laboratory is 90 percent identical to the virus found in nature called the "nipah virus" which has been recorded in a type of disgusting indian bats. There is no vaccine to nipah and by the way, it causes long-term disabilities in survivors as well. The symptoms are very similar to corona, not identical. There has been many Nipah outbreaks but WHO has not given much publicity to these for reasons unknown to me.

Some more evidence:

- Humans have been infected with animal corona virus for a very long time and they rarely pass the virus to humans
- Monkeys and apes that have not received corona virus directly from other apes have had genetically similar DNA
- Corona virus appears to have certain features that set it apart from viruses found in other primates, such as the ability to infect immune cells
- Corona virus in cattle and humans are recombinant (meaning that one strain can be genetically altered so it can replicate in other species)

The spread of CC can get worse due to the war on drugs and the militarization of police. The vast diversity of commercial and indigenous agriculture probably won't make things better either.

One explanation for the extreme spread in brazil is that brazilians have extremely deep rooted lytic infections that prevent pathogenic epitopes from being cleaved away. Thus, microtysis is the primary way that the virus spreads in the brazilian environment. Once infection takes place in the intestinal tract, they end up in the venous blood system and are carried for the rest of the body.

The initial response to such infections is usually fever, a swollen, red tongue, extreme gastrointestinal distress, vomiting, chills, and/or diarrhea. (As anon described above). The most typical manifestation of lytic infection in Brazil is scaly crusts and skin rash on the face and hands. Other possible symptoms include headaches, dyspnea and so on and on..

> At the latest census in 2018;

70.2 percent identified as European,

16.5 percent as Māori,

15.1 percent as Asian,

8.1 percent as Pacific peoples, and

1.2 percent as Middle-Eastern, Latin American, and African (MELAA).[55]

>Most New Zealanders are of English,[56] Scottish,[57] and Irish ancestry,[58] with smaller percentages of other European ancestries, such as Dutch, Dalmatian, French, German and Scandinavian.[59]

>Auckland was the most diverse region with 43.0 percent identifying as European, 28.5 percent as Asian, 11 percent as Māori, 15.5 percent as Pacific Islanders and 1% as NZ MELAA.[60]

So it is striking European mystery meat less (61.46%) than other races, but not by much. At least that is interesting. It won't be helpful in the end since there are so few Europeans (mystery meat or otherwise) compared to the unwashed masses when all is said and done we will become extinct or we will bottleneck genetically (again).

Bolsonaro goes on a news show through the phone and gives an interesting interview, continues to say the governors are inflating the numbers for political reasons In case anyone speaks Poortuguese and is interested

<https://hooktube.com/watch?v=fct2ZA8zdPY>

>It seems there's political interest from some governors to inflate the numbers of deaths from the virus. Maybe to receive more federal funding or to justify the measures they're taking. Soon they're going to say "If I hadn't done this more people would have died." But we all know a death can't be washed away like that, this is a political practice to justify equivocated measures taken by some mayors and governors.

>You can't impose a quarantine longer than it already is or else people will have difficulty surviving.

>Of course, lives are more important than the economy. But if unemployment comes violently, given the non-loosening of those rules right now, we're going to have a serious problem tomorrow or later, which will be the consequences of unemployment: Starvation, misery, irritation, depression. And we don't know where that would stop.

On the National Council of Justice's recommendation of releasing inmates >Equivocated. If it was up to me, I wouldn't release anyone. After all, they're more protected inside prison than us because we have forbidden conjugal visits and common visits. I wouldn't allow it because most of them don't have jobs when they come out, I believe these are the ones who will commit felonies.

Everyone is going to catch it

>Look, if you're not an athlete and have health issues, you need to take care of yourself, a lot. What the government is trying to do is preventing everyone from catching it at the same time, because some people are going to need medical attention and the hospitals are overcrowded. Without medical attention, the chances of dying rises. No shit Sherlock

Armed Squatting May Soon Become The Norm (Like It Or Not Kikes!)

Rent Strikes Gaining Steam During Coronavirus Crisis

With millions of people suddenly out of work and rent due at the first of the month, some tenants are vowing to go on a rent strike until the coronavirus pandemic subsides.

New York, Boston, Los Angeles, San Francisco and St. Louis are among many cities that have temporarily banned evictions, but advocates for the strike are demanding that rent payments be waived, not delayed, for those in need during the crisis. The rent strike idea has taken root in parts of North America and as far away as London.

White sheets are being hung in apartment windows to show solidarity with the movement that is gaining steam on Twitter, Instagram and other social media sites. Fliers urging people to participate are being posted in several cities, including bus stops in St. Louis, where 27-year-old Kyle Kofron still has his job at an ice cream factory, but his three roommates have suddenly found themselves unemployed. Their property manager so far hasn't agreed to a payment plan, Kofron said.

"For me personally, with everyone losing their jobs and unable to pay, it's really the only thing we can do," Kofron said of the strike. "It's just like we the people have to do something. We just can't stand idly by while the system takes us for a ride."

Stay-at-home orders and strict limits on gathering sizes have forced shops, restaurants and bars to shut down indefinitely. Many service industry workers thrust into unemployment are living paycheck-to-paycheck in the best of times. Now, many say they don't have the money to pay rent.

Some politicians have expressed support, if not directly for a strike, then for a temporary rent moratorium, including Democratic presidential candidate Bernie Sanders.

Strike advocates aren't waiting for legislative approval. Activist organizations in many places are leading the push for a strike. A group called Rent Strike 2020 is organizing on the national level.

"Our demands to every Governor, in every state, are extremely simple: freeze rent, mortgage, and utility bill collection for 2 months, or face a rent strike," Rent Strike 2020's website states.

Yes on the first part, but we can easily build Pyramids today. The Luxor hotel in Vegas was harder to build than a replica cheops pyramid would be.

What we don't know is exactly how the Egyptians did it without us having evidence of pulleys. What we do know from looking at pyramid worker graves is that they had access to good healthcare (looking at healed bone fractures) and that they drank copious amounts of beer.

Honestly I have mixed feelings about this, because I know how bad some of the strains of the corona bioweapon are. Instead of total lockdowns I would prefer government mandate masks or respirators to go out in public, along with gloves. If people don't have them, then they'd have to buy them online or they can't go out to public gatherings.

By the way, I would hope that police are using masks and gloves too, because if they're running around without protection then it's just more hypocrisy and just as much a risk. And don't forget the biggest cults of all please: governments.

There was a tariff threatened against Mexico a year ago if they didn't start helping out with the crisis near the border. When they were faced with losing shekels they caved and started to prevent the flood of migrants. Now it's harder to get in/out of Mexico today. Btw, the Mexico border, due to the corona threat, have been closed to all except for businesses/trade - that was reported yesterday.

Federal Agencies Warned Of Ventilator Shortages For Nearly Two Decades
With The Billions $$$ In Taxpayer Budgets, Nothing Was Done?

The overwhelming number of coronavirus patients flooding hospitals across the U.S. has resulted in a shortage of ventilators for those experiencing difficulty breathing.

But while President Trump has faced criticism from states, like New York, for the short supply, federal agencies have been predicting the need for more ventilators for nearly two decades. Reports from various government offices have been sounding the alarm over the course of at least three successive presidencies dating back to the George W. Bush administration.

"GAO found that most hospitals lack the capacity to respond to large-scale infectious disease outbreaks," concluded the U.S. Government Accountability Office in a 2003 report after the SARS outbreak, noting that "few hospitals have adequate medical equipment, such as the ventilators that are often needed for respiratory infections such as SARS, to handle the large increases in the number of patients that may result."

A 2005 Congressional Research Service report examining avian flu also noted that the U.S. was unlikely to be prepared for a pandemic due to that virus' effect on the lungs.

"If this strain were to launch a pandemic and retain this trait, large numbers of victims may require intensive care and ventilatory support, likely exceeding national capacity to provide this level of care," that report said. "In any event, such specialized care is not available in most developing countries, and access to it is uneven within the United States."

Later that same year, the Department of Health and Human Services released an extensive report on the plan for an influenza pandemic. A key item on their list of actions to take for a "health care and emergency response" was to "assess surge capacity" of medical systems including ventilators, noting the necessity for maintaining an emergency stockpile.

"Despite planning and preparedness, however, in a severe pandemic it is possible that shortages, for example of mechanical ventilators, will occur and medical care standards may need to be adjusted to most effectively provide care and save as many lives as possible," the report warned, noting the likelihood of a significant increase in the demand for ventilators in the event of a large-scale outbreak.

The need for ventilators - and other resources - is repeatedly discussed in this report, even referencing a CDC spreadsheet that could help predict the potential need for ventilators at different stages of a pandemic.

A CNN report last week detailed a number of these internal government reports:

When people come crawling out from their safe quarantine and realize that all of those fancy numbers on the economy don't mean shit to them; and they have to swallow their pride and get on the dole most will or recognize that the system they held so dear for so long has fucked them with a layoff. Instead of letting ALL systems correct themselves, the gobments are doing their best to return to a form of status quo. They want to keep the plebians separated, contained and amused. When any one of those legs breaks the whole stool comes crashing to the floor. They know this. Like a good parasite they understand this and will do anything in their power to avoid it. But it will no longer be in their power, it will no longer be in control. They are called economic LAWS and natural LAWS for a reason. You can skate by only so long, then the guillotine catches up with you. In our case it will be massive chimpouts, suicide rates that are actual nightmare fuel, anger and everything that comes from it. Right now I live in a small town, but I do plan on investing when the time is right, I do have some silver/gold that might be worth a lot after fiat currencies crash and the metals/commodities soar in value. I have been checking some land out, found a couple nice places I might consider moving to after this whole thing blows over. I don't live in a major city, I have been a prepper for a long time. As far as any chaos, I can handle it, I have put a lot of money into DIY entry point fortification, firearms, effective bulletproofing if there happens to be standoffs-shootouts between me and a pack of marauders (I could go into many details but I'll save that for the survival board if people would like some defensive tips). I completely understand the threats and have prepared properly for different scenarios when SHTF.

By the way, I'm not trying to be smug, I'm only saying those cops should have proper gear like masks and gloves, I would also recommend having UV-C to decontaminate that gear before after use. Cops are just as vulnerable as the rest of us.

If what you mean by cytokine storm as in a multitude of threats and vulnerabilities then yes, that is what the economy faces right now. If people get laid off and can't/won't pay rent/mortgages anymore this will destroy real estate, which effects the banks too. If people die off in droves the life insurance claims will start flooding in and insurance companies will face insolvency, this also effects banks as well. If people can't get to work anymore due to risks, businesses shut down and there is a lack of supply and demand infrastructure, which will lead to shortages, then to riots and looting. Social chaos will lead to breakdown of law, and the ability to enforce that law too, meaning martial law would take effect, as well as "every man for himself" mentality (lots of crime). This also breaks up distribution of goods and so on. >Seven funeral homes currently serve Wuhan - a huge conurbation of three cities: Hankou, Wuchang and Hanyang.

>Social media users have been doing some basic math to figure out their daily capacity, while the news website Caixin.com reported that 5,000 urns had been delivered by a supplier to the Hankou Funeral Home in one day alone - double the official number of deaths.

>Some social media posts have estimated that all seven funeral homes in Wuhan are handing out 3,500 urns every day in total.

>Funeral homes have informed families that they will try to complete cremations before the traditional grave-tending festival of Qing Ming on April 5, which would indicate a 12-day process beginning on March 23.

>Such an estimate would mean that 42,000 urns would be given out during that time. (RFA) 42,000 plus deaths in Wuhan. Leftypol disillusioned.

I have a feeling there were a whole bunch of greedy people throughout the bureaucracy that have been stockpiling supplies for themselves when they can get away with taking some. This is one of the symptoms when governments get too big to properly manage and keep in check.

>You can't shoot a virus.

Well you can shoot those who may have it that trespass on your property (legally in most areas). But besides dealing with unstable desperate looters, you can decontaminate viruses. You can use lysol spray or wipes, you can use bleach/water solution or borax/water solution, rubbing alcohol or everclear, you can use UV-C equip (although expensive), you can also protect yourself with gloves, goggles, masks/respirators and body suits too.

What pisses me off is the lack of government response to the public on actual decontamination solutions (besides hand sanitizer and washing your hands which does little good without protective gear). They think everything should be left up to hospitals, but people go to the hospitals because they don't have the gear or use proper decontamination and get infected, thus overwhelming the hospitals!

I'm not sure how the analogy will work, exactly, but it could be a feedback loop of "remedies" that harm more than cure.

I support "Martial Law" in the sense that we should already be segregated out into wards, each ward graded according to their degree of infection. Movement between wards must be tightly controlled, with mandatory quarantine at designated hotels. Within wards, you may move about freely. Shipments from wards of worse condition not permitted. Ward size determined by population, so cities to have many wards, the countryside to have large amounts of land and potentially multiple (or a lot more than that) towns in a single ward.

Two ideas: a 100 pound propain tank that is disguised and protected by a camouflaged tarp from weather can be used strategically if sniped from a distance with a green-tip 5.56, killing and maiming any marauders nearby. Another solution would be to get a 12G shotgun with a magazine tube extension to load more shells, and rapidly fire directly at the crowds behind some mounted bulletproofed fiberglass paneling until the drop dead or scatter away.

It is all the dominos falling at once. No amount of helicopter money is going to solve the issue and only stupidly will devalue the currency- hyperinflation is already being openly discussed. Martial law will be declared eventually as the system does grind down; and that will lead to civil war. The whole corrupt system is being destroyed. Rent strikes are the first obvious breaking sign, modern bread lines are stretching for miles, unemployment offices are saturated. Gig economy swine are facing actual starvation and no gigs because most don't file their fun-bux with uncle Sam's financial NKVD. People are panicky, pissed and scared- a lot of people that have held decent if generally non-productive jobs are looking at bankruptcy and welfare because of this. That pisses people off in a way that well- leads to new leadership. It pisses off the right people enough to kick over the table. If we don't come out of this in martial law it is only because they've chem-trailed strait valium over the cities and added it to the water supply and snuck lobodomies in over night. They didn't

We are at the end of the Weimar stage, I expect it to begin to revert to the same end game organized anarchy in the next year or so. That of course leads to real solutions and new ideas. Lots of Anons here seem to be rooting for high body counts and a quick crash and burn. I don't see that happening. I see anger building, resentment growing, and people following suite. JUST LIKE THEY ALWAYS HAVE.

>I support "Martial Law" in the sense that we should already be segregated out into wards

Nice idea I believe those are called zones of control and are separated by checkpoint. You are breaking the problem into smaller pieces, but spread thin when the brush-fires start popping up. It is why military control of this particular country is actually impossible without full blown nukes.

Pesky truth keeps wanting to pop up in the strangest places. Best solution to this is a quick open air cremation of most of their cities and populace- not out of geopolitical necessity, simply out of spite.

In tomorrow's world they will vie for power in the Neo-feudal order of things and neither group has proven to me that they won't fuck it up then as they have now. I would hope and think that anyone in Authority knows it is likely they aren't coming out of this alive. The science deniers will be raped and pillaged by Tyrone, Juan and the gang like the Marxists and liberals.

Another idea would be Diablo mortars (which are still legal in most states). You could saw out a hole fitting the aerial tubes for mounting to plywood, secure the plywood upright and have room for the wicks to slip through so you are able to light from behind, causing the mortars to shoot out at whichever direction is vulnerable to looters intruding. Those Diablo mortars have quite a bit of load and can be very deadly if 'misused'.

The policing of zones will of course be by deputies, not the military, though under military officers. There are plenty of people out of work, bored af, willing to participate. And Predators can overfly the perimeters.

Critical perimeters will be cleared by bulldozer & have razor wire. As last resort, landmines, of course.

That wouldn't be very fun, how would I get my kicks when SHTF? But seriously you do have a point, sabotaging a bridge or two before the threat occurs might be a good idea (and fun) but risky too considering that's highly illegal to target infrastructure.

Nope they are T8 G30 much larger bulbs with 10x the wattage. Different use.

Those small ones would be good for small area decon or individual items etc or curing optics/uv curing glue etc..

Sorry for OT.

I meant the pics, can those be used for GTL3 bulbs? Reason I'm asking is I have a GTL3 and was thinking of trying it out with a 9V, but may be risky (I have other UV-C that works better for now).

Check bulb voltage, I don't know of any that low but might be feasible. Thing is you probably need a ballast or it'll draw too much current and pop it. I'm not that good with fluro more a LED/coherent light fag and effects type.

32 YO peddler in Rio de Janeiro gets blessed, remains asymptomatic for some time, suddenly goes seriously symptomatic then dies

Creuza Fernandes had 32 years and was a peddler and was a well known figure in the city of Rio Bonito, where she sold candy on the highway.

>I'm worried, because she sold a lot of candy on the highway and had contact with many persons.

Says a relative who wished to remain anonymous. Creuza started feeling ill on eight of March was taken to the local hospital by her husband, where she was medicated then sent back home. But late at night, she started struggling to breath. She was taken to another hospital where a doctor diagnosed her with "agressive pneumonia" which had compromised one of her lungs and her heart, she was put on a ventilator. On 17 of March, her condition worsened, she was isolated and the doctor told her husband she only had a few hours of life left in her, he asked the doctor if it could be the coronavirus and he replied "only a test could tell". Creuza died on that same day but her family only received the positive test result on monday (30 of March).

And that folks, will be my last post for now, I see you later. But before I go to bed, what did we learn from this news? Asymptomatic patients don't stay that way forever. And if you're a third worlder, stay the fuck away from peddlers/hawkers if you want to stay healthy.

Colleges in South Korea apparently are resuming classes next week, plus everyone is getting bored with quarantine bullshit, and masks are uncomfortable in warm weather so people will start letting their guard down since the popular opinion is that the virus is "under control" in SK.

So expect there to be a huge new flare up in Seoul in about two weeks.

So I did a quick research because 'quine' rings a bell

Quinine

<Quinine is a medication used to treat malaria and babesiosis. This includes the treatment of malaria due to Plasmodium falciparum that is resistant to chloroquine when artesunate is not available. While used for restless legs syndrome, it is not recommended for this purpose due to the risk of side effects.

<Beverages

<Tonic water, in normal light and ultraviolet "black light". The quinine content of tonic water causes it to fluoresce under black light.

Quinine is a flavor component of tonic water and bitter lemon drink mixers. On the soda gun behind many bars, tonic water is designated by the letter "Q" representing quinine.[22]

<Coffee beans contain disease-ravaging antioxidants, called quinines, which become more potent after roasting.

Here's how I didn't get sick for years. I can't be sure of the exact cause because I had been making many changes in my life, but here are the likely suspects:

>Boron supplementation

Look for a document called the boron conspiracy.

>Used far less laundry detergent, supplemented with white vinegar

Less Xenestrogens. White vinegar has many uses. Your should have some anyway.

>Used far less shampoo

Less Xenestrogens.

>Sleep with a cap on, especially when I feel cold or flu symptoms coming on

Like a toque or similar. My reasoning is that heat kills viruses, and you want to keep them out of your head.

Before this, I used to get sick once or twice a year, like a normalfag.

Also, if it's inside the body, it can act as a precursor for the biosynthesis of "natural version of chloroquine" or similar effect (think of receptors).

One thing I haven't seen here discussed, is that a pandemic is one of the few happenings that women can't whore their way out of. Consider it. If a woman is offering herself to you in return for food, could you trust that she won't be infected, specially keeping in mind what she now does for a living?

In the same sense, this is the end of hook-up culture. A stable relationship would be the only thing people could trust in these times.

No food for thot.

From cuckchan

>According to Corriere della Sera, a well known Italian daily newspaper, Dr. Pier Luigi Bartoletti, Deputy National Secretary of the Italian Federation of General Practitioners, explains that every single person with Covid-19 that has early signs, like a cough or a fever for example, is now being treated with the anti-malaria drug.

>The drug "is already giving good results," Bartoletti says while Malaysia reveals they have been using it since the very beginning. Bartoletti further adds that the drug:

>"Must be used with all the necessary precautions, it must be evaluated patient by patient. It can have side effects. But those that take it are responding really well.

>We have just understood that the virus has an evolution in two phases and that it is during the second phase, after a few days (about a week), that the situation can suddenly, in 24 or 48 hours, worsen and leads to respiratory failure requiring intensive care.

>The results that we are starting to accumulate suggest that hydroxychloroquine administered early, gives the possibility of avoiding this evolution in a majority of patients and is also helping us to prevent hospitals from filling up."

Alright so they say chloroquine works because it is a zinc ionophore
<https://journals.plos.org/plospathogens/article?id=10.1371/journal.ppat.1001176>
Quercetin is an OTC supplement which is a zinc ionophore

Does this mean quercetin+zinc will work against corona?

Most common colds are a coronavirus, and zinc is usually effective. But CCP virus seems to be providing lots of information about how to fight corona-viruses in general. I think a lot of pharma is scared about things like Hydroxy Treatment because it'll prove very effective against a large amount of viral infections, and the solutions are very cheap. Right now people are focused on Made In China Virus, but after this is over people will start wondering what else other viruses Zinc based treatments work on.

Daily reminder that the "Wuhan Bioaopons Lab" narrative was started by Dany Shoham, a former Israeli military intelligence officer, quoted in The Washington Times by the neocohen jew Bill Gertz:

>The deadly animal-borne coronavirus spreading globally may have originated in a laboratory in the city of Wuhan linked to China's covert biological weapons program, said an Israeli biological warfare analyst.

>Dany Shoham, a former Israeli military intelligence officer who has studied Chinese biological warfare, said the institute is linked to Beijing's covert bio-weapons program.

>"Certain laboratories in the institute have probably been engaged, in terms of research and development, in Chinese [biological weapons], at least collaterally, yet not as a principal facility of the Chinese BW alignment," Mr. Shoham told The Washington Times.

>Work on biological weapons is conducted as part of dual civilian-military research and is "definitely covert," he said in an email.

>Mr. Shoham holds a doctorate in medical microbiology. From 1970 to 1991, he was a senior analyst with Israeli military intelligence for biological and chemical warfare in the Middle East and worldwide. He held the rank of lieutenant colonel.

<http://archive.is/L8HMF>

Gertz, the author of the piece, is another interesting character who is linked to the Mossad.

>In 1997 he reported on Russian aid to Iran's nuclear weapon program, based on information given him by the Israeli intelligence agency Mossad.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bill_Gertz#cite_note-9

Another proponent of this scenario is Uri Geller, a Mossad operative who pretended he could use his non-existent psychic powers to bend spoons. His version is even more jewish, tying in Iran:

>Covid-19 (Corona) was created and manufactured by China's MSS, while delivering the virus to Iran for bacteriological warfare reasons the virus accidentally was transmitted to a human. This is the real story behind the pandemic. There is still controversy among American scientists whether the actual virus is derived from bats, snakes or created in a lab. Wash your hands, don't shake hands avoid large gatherings. And pray that it will ebb away and a vaccine will be found to destroy it.

<http://archive.is/wip/sAtCw>

This is the jewish narrative. More than likely, this is a textbook case of jewish projection, with them once again trying to pin the blame for their crimes onto their enemies. The jew has used viruses as weapons against gentiles going back to their poisoning of wells to spread the bubonic plague.

It is a concerted effort to create an external enemy because the multicult is unstable and has trouble forming consensus. The "hate China" shit is all coming from the same people who have spend the last 70 years racially exterminating us and moving our entire productive industry to China in the first place. They want a war because they are being cut out of their economic rents.

>Did you guys forgot? We knew this for a while now. Oh well, It's a nice reminder anyway.

I was under the impression that we knew about aerosols and suspected that Corona-chan goes airborne, but when it came down to the splitting of hairs, there were many that still denied that Corona-chan could fly by herself and not through formites. I don't think we could cite the WHO conference from the beginning of this month when meme moron man said she was airborne, as I think he was referring to just the aerosol aspect. I know, I should know better, but I do think its significant when the mainstream, even if starts with some scientific papers, admits what we know all along. Eh, I'm getting crusty.

Frog update

Corona-Chan removes a 13 YO invader from Britbongistan <https://archive.is/4iUzT>
46 YO female cop gets blessed and dies in São Paulo. Sargent Magali Garcia worked at the center of operations (COPOM), she fell ill on this previous Sunday with all of Corona-Chan's symptoms, including pneumonia, then died today.

Sargent Garcia was a former smoker, which might have contributed to her death. Clinics's Hospital in São Paulo reports 125 blessed workers, and the ((Albert Einstein Pissraeli Hospital))) reports 348 blessed workers.

Real recovery: 90 YO woman recovers from infection despite suffering lung damage, credits her recovery to God and her family's potato soup recipe.

Let me put it like this:

The International economy is so dependent on china's cheap labour and non-existent quality control, it would crash and burn if you moved just half their factories back to the first world.

To the point that all economic indicators started going down when China interrupted manufacturing, almost a whole month before anything of note happened in the west.

So now you got a bunch of fat cats counting their coins at a desk. They got a phone near them, and all of them are asking themselves the same question you are asking now.

They'll look at the stacks of dollars, grab the phone and tell the UN to chillout, or funding will be cut.

Realistically, and non-larping: some countries (the UK being the first one I know of) are starting to question this heavy china dependence. Some of the private sector too.

One meeting I had recently had a junior ask a very scary question: "Imagine Corona passes. Next year, they get an earthquake. They get over that, but then there's a civil war. Where will that leave us?"

The first few solutions some colleagues from other companies are looking into:
>diversifying industry locations

Plenty of cheap third world to settle in africa. Some already have factories there. Niggers require extra training to not fuck things up (as often) and need qualified (eg: white) supervision.

>use government to get better deals

Works like this: instead of buying materials (chemical precursors, agriculture products, heavy metals) from the chinese, buy from an european country, and work with the local government into financing part of it as a "help fun local economy" thing.

The EU doesn't like this sort of thing, and has some "nationalistic" views that some might find dislikable :^)

I'm aware of some countries condiering policies to apply AFTER this whole thing blows to prevent this sort of economical dependency in the future, but in the private sector, a lot of people aren't that worried about china yet.

Mostly because they buy the official numbers. Wait until the REAL numbers come out.

Addendum:

>Why not move factories back into Europe/USA and let our people work?

Not going to happen. Even with this.

Two reasons: government regulations double or triple the operation costs of a manufacturing plant compared to shitholes like China, Marocco or South Africa. And second: America and most of Europe are nations of R&D (for a small percentage of their population) and service-work (for the rest).

What few plants we have are the exception: the public at large does not work well in manufacturing of any kind.

Besides needing the workers, you need managers, large teams of suited up faggots making sure everything is running smooth. And that's one keypoint where we're short-staffed at the moment.

If you don't believe me, you can look at the last 30-40 years of industrial "start-ups", if you can call it that.

>small factory is set up to answer local demand of a certain product

>20-30 workers, management team is 2-3 guys >operation is expanded, 50-60 workers, management team grows to 10 >pressure from syndicate, government watchdogs and legal trouble takes it's toll alongside ANY kind of financial hiccup >small company shuts down

Rinse and repeat. Calling the managers "incompetent" is unfair. Most were not trained for it, they started a company with their little know-how, to answer a simple need in the local market. The company grew up, they had to hire people who actually knew their shit, but discovered all the people who actually know how to manage things are already hired, and there's 10 layers per Engineer/Process Manager being licensed in American Universities.

The end result is that, for every person that could save your business, there's 10 that can end it for their business fee.

Compare it to China: you start a company, noone asks questions. If you make money, and the Party makes money, then no-one is allowed to ask question.

Solution: STEM. Graduate more engineers. Process Managers, anything with math.

Close down Humanities and other garbage degrees, tell the STEAM crowd their shit is useless. And make Math even more vital for school.

A generation of "I don't like math XD" is the reason China took all of our manufacturing capacity away.

>diversifying industry locations

It's a household saying already not to put everything in one basket. I can't fathom why multinational industries are landlocking themselves by relying in one country. When doing opportunity cost, they should account for the possibility of a country failing to meet their needs.

>Wait until the REAL numbers come out.

I can't wait for the eventual shit show. Corona-chan is the tip of the iceberg. You have production stopping at the onset and you have sales/demand decreasing at the aftermath and beyond with the possibility of corona-chan re-emerging quietly. Quietly due to bugs changing corona-chan's gender numerous times or the faulty testing kits.

>It was policy to ship jobs overseas, and that policy can be undone.

Yes and No.

From where I stand, I can see companies going two ways.

Some will lose a lot of money and try to make it back. Best way is to cut on costs everywhere, and that means keeping plants in China.

Others will take this as a lesson, establish themselves in the first world (or atleast, other less bullshit countries).

The first might thrive at first, until something else like this pops up while they're still weak.

The second might thrive if there's government incentives to establishing businesses back here instead of chinkland.

So, it's half policy, half business sense. I don't think things will change that much unless the government steps in (and by the looks of it, they will, several have already made it clear that they'll worry about the Virus for now, but will have a serious talk with china after it's over), but you also need companies to think this through and abandon cheap but risky labour.

With any luck, sinofillic companies goe under, and the rest prosper. Fingers crossed that happens, but the ensuing chink collapse pretty much guarantees the bug-hive would need to start a war to ensure it survives: eat up a few countries nearby or enslave someone to keep itself alive. Would that imply Nukes if Nato steps in by then? Possibly. But for once, Kim Jong's friendship with Trump would pay off: their shitty ICBM's can't reach america, but they sure as shit can reach china.

>A generation of "I don't like math XD" is the reason China took all of our manufacturing capacity away.

>t. never worked with Chink "engineers"

The answer as to why our manufacturing went away isn't muh math, it's boomers and Jews pinching pennies by cutting as much cost as possible in the most shortsighted ways possible. I have personally uncorked a $100k/month multimonth product stoppage from China with a part I found in the fucking McMaster-Carr catalog after the entire China team was saying "hurr durr gweilo we dunno what do, lead time on custom part too long". I had another chink factory tell me they couldn't source a particular ASIC, I broke down the BOM and found stock on it in ten minutes on a conference call. I had a rash of bad parts come from the chinks, looked at the problem, looked at the schematic, asked the chink engineers "have you tried adjusting this fucking potentiometer right here that controls the thing that's fucked up", answer back was no, there was no procedure to adjust potentiometer, round eye.

I could go on and on. The Chinese are great at turning out monkey copies and completely incapable of independent thought or action.

The reason that Americans don't study math is that engineering isn't the way to get ahead in America, usury and deception are. An MBA and a marketing position are infinitely more lucrative than engineering, because again, Jews and boomers outsource as much real work as possible.

>Zinc [crazypills]

>That's why they think chloroquine is working.

No.

Chloroquine is a metabolic inhibitor at the intracellular subcellular vacuole level. In the presence of chloroquine, heme and etc proteins containing metals crystallize and prevent the vacuole from completing digestion, causing cellular metabolic slowdown to the point of inhibiting new growth for a transient period of time. This transient slow to halt is effective at ending metabolic RNA build instructions of viruses, as well as significantly slowing down non-adapted parasites like malaria.

Chloroquine is not about zinc, nor is zinc in any way related, zinc cannot gas anything (and it's a metal anyway wtf), and ionophores are not present on the virus, nor does the virus have any ion channel proteins, it's a god damn virus. YOU are the autist.

Zinc + ionophore is the way to go. It's basically a cold virus. Plus add an antibiotic if you can get one. Probably doesn't have to be the expensive z-pak antibiotic in Trump's post, but hell why not if you can get it. There's complications with bacteria in some number of cases. Probably because lung mucus provides a nice medium for whatever bacteria are floating around.

>Muh Zinc

Fucking losers. I hate you assholes so god damn much. What form, what binder/solution, what route, for what purpose, under what mechanism of action, and what frequency, and what amount - These are the questions. Zinc is a good health agent, as a desiccating powder and/or solution (once dried). Zinc invivo, i.e. at standard temp iso ph within the cell, or within the blood, is virtually useless. It is highly, tightly regulated. Thus zinc, as a bodywide distributed agent for controlling metabolism, is fucking retarded. You would achieve more by telling people to overdose on dextrose/glucose to get rid of the virus, not because it would work, but because it would get rid of people too stupid to know YOU ARE FULL OF SHIT AND FUCKED UP MY MOTHERS NOSE BECAUSE SHES AFRAID AND HYSTERICAL, and thus it works by killing the meek.
Fuck you too.

And it is not ionophore.

It is called a god damn ionCHANNEL protein.

That is what zinc goes through, in ANIMALS.

Coronachan does not have any ionCHANNELS.

Coronachan does not have any ionophore transmembrane transport protiens.

Which are not the same.

MSM in Italy is sperging about a new research (that we are obviously not allowed to see at the moment) stating that Corona-chan uses Sialic acid too as a receptor to enter our cells.

Not quite a science anon, but I can research and understand things. Reading up an article on NIH, sialic acids are a type of special, complex sugars called glycans that promote specialized binding between your cells and different necessary biochemicals as well as other cells. Many diseases, including Corona-chan's cold-causing sisters and the flu, can already bind via sialic acid chains, besides the main binding via protein receptors. This is a true nothingburger for us, though given the shitty hell situation in Italy, I'm not surprised that the dumb Italian MSM freaks out over ever science article that shows Corona doing something "new" that's only a no-brainer. They scientists that made they supposed article probably guessed this was a thing, or not if they don't read up on concurrent research like they usually do the paper below implies many scientists are not aware of this even as late as 2008; but now, this entry method is made an official characteristic of Corona-chan. Here's the article I read about sialic acid and glycans:

It seriously wouldn't surprise me if the Chinamen thought they were getting a legit deal from the jews, but instead the packaging of the thing was rigged to fail or some critical aspect of the virus containment was left out when the hand off happened. The jews literally may have a pulled a double back burn on the Chinese by letting the chinks think they were getting one up on whitey, or the USA, or whatever from those good ole' treasonous, seditious international jews, but found out too late the jews double crossed them and used them as pawns in a larger scheme to release the virus. Highly speculative I know, but this may be the kind of thing where a lot of different parties were involved on different levels, to all get (((used and betrayed))) in just the right way to make it all happen. It could just be typical chink incompetence but I suspect something deeper.

>RE: Article

>[sic] Despite tight intracellular and blood control of zinc, and all of zinc's well mapped roles on proteins as catalysts and with specialized [ion channel transporters], one aspect not explored is free zinc. Free (per paper: 'labile') is trace, due to such tight regulation. However, this trace zinc can bind to chelators/phenols present in plants, and pass through membranes as ionophores (literal shuttles, not channels). Further, this role is essential for antioxidant and cellular signaling. ... (Paper then goes on to demonstrate with a line of immortal hepatic/liver cancer cells, adding zinc and chelator [clioquinol, a very potent japanese origin drug that was deprecated and reexplored circa 2004, and has seen very little research]. This zinc+chelator was shown to facilitate transport of florescent zinc complexes into the hepatic cells, revealing that yes it does happen.

'Happen' = In Vitro / lab, and the chelator transporter was in fact a ionophore, and it did effect transport when at extremely non-biologic levels, whereby the chelator acted, in my professional opinion, as a soap solvent. Which did nevertheless actually transport the zinc as a transmembrane shuttle, not a channel. This paper asserts that latent backround biologic natural transport via effective 'ionophores' for zinc in the diet are present - which the paper does not prove, and demonstrates via concentration magnitudes that this is not the case with the immortal cell line chosen. However, the introduction of certain quinolones is proven via this paper to facilitate zinc transport through membranes as ionophore action.

Score: Proving it is possible +=1; Proving that you can do it with drug combinations and zinc +=1; Showing me something I haven't seen before +=10; Ignoring all other settings and context and both cellular and neurotoxicity actions, which reveal the primary effective MoA (though still cellular dysregulation) is via a much more nonselective toxicity (vs chloroquine, which ! = quinolones class, which acts via much more narrow cellular intravacuole digestion disruption) -=2. Total: 10 points due appreciation, for the paper. All priors stated earlier still stand as asserted. Zinc [crazypills] are still crazy. The level of ingestion of zinc and quinolones (or other such phenols of equivalent action) would have to reach near pan-toxic to inhibit the virus more than medical dosing of chloroquine alone. Inappropriate advise is still inappropriate. But again, the paper is appreciated.

I would like to add a bit of additional info to this post regarding "STEM" degrees and what not, there was/is a glut of STEM graduates in American university systems. I would presume the same for Europeans, but I'm not a Euro, so I don't know. The issue comes from the fact there aren't enough jobs for them and when coupled with large scale importation of the third world and others, American STEM graduates are fucked. There has been a major push to get people into STEM for over a decade now, and yet, those jobs aren't appearing in massive numbers, but somehow those third worlders are.

>RE: Paper

This was a very well done paper. My thanks again. Journal of Agriculture... Wouldn't have guessed, journo Elsevier wars long since lost and all. This treatment would be effective at end stage cancer / radical cancer treatments, as a novel treatment regiment orders of magnitude cheaper and more effective than nearly all immune antibody and bio-similar megabuck treatments. Noteworthy outside the paper, the Japanese didn't likely use it that way, but maybe they did, because a healthy body likely can recover from pan-zinc/metal toxicity induced by clioquinol if the treatment is brief enough AND does not introduce more zinc/metals. Danger levels have to be used of clioquinol, but it is novel, and based off of the Japanese history, it didn't kill many (nor really heal anyone, likely because the therapeutic dose required is close enough to the lethal dose that not many tried to get there). A meaningless homeopathic medicine that can have meaning, that if you take it enough it actually does start working, just not too much, with very little forgiveness between the two states (hence the Japanese stopped).

Thank you again for the effort.

>There has been a major push to get people into STEM for over a decade now, and yet, those jobs aren't appearing in massive numbers, but somehow those third worlders are.

This is only partially on topic.

The STEM push was to drive down wages because the megacorps are sick of paying engineers.

And then there's the scam in which you need to be involved in the industry your schooling for before you even start the schooling, otherwise you don't have a slot available upon graduation. Your odds of obtaining gainful employment decreases rapidly after graduation, leaving the majority with debt which cannot be paid and further cripples self growth.

The end result is an environment which breeds Uncle Teds while planes crash because of pajeets and kikes, and plagues spread because of chinks and kikes, all while shit falls apart because kikes use niggers to destroy infrastructure which they can then develop for pennies on the dollar at great cost to government and rent to the wabies they create.

Possible dropper/Corona-corpse abandoned in Ecuador

>Dramatic situation in the city of Guayaquil, Ecuador, the health system is collapsed due to the Covid pandemic19. Citizens of the country denounce that the bodies of the deceased are left on the street for several days until they are collected.

Corona-Chan possibly made her first kill in the favela of Rocinha. The family of 70 YO's Maria Luiza Santana do Nascimento claims she died because of the new coronavirus. She lived in the favela of Rocinha, Rio de Janeiro, the death will be investigated and if confirmed, will be the first in a favela in Rio. She died Monday after being hospitalized for six days. According to relatives, she went to the doctor on 21 of March because of flu symptoms, she was medicated then sent home. On 25, the woman fell ill again and decided to return to the hospital, she had fever, shortness of breath and coughing constantly. She went through nebulization but fainted soon afterwards and quickly taken to the ICU, where she was put on a ventilator, which failed to improve her situation, then her kidneys stopped working. Her obituary says the cause of death was septicemia and pneumonia.

Brownzilian richfags are dying too: Fourth confirmed death in the northeastern state of Piauí was the CEO of a dairy company. 45 YO Oderman Bittencourt had recently traveled to the state of Ceará, where he could have been blessed. He was obese and had hypertension, he was also friends with the dead commie mayor that I posted in a previous thread.

I will try to stick around for as long as possible. The cause of both the niggernet shitting itself and the power lines dying every time it rains has been identified: Some niggers are climbing on the poles and messing with the equipment, most likely pirate network guys. The good news is that the huge rain cloud that was coming my way passed right over my area and went to the countryside, so no power outage for me tonight. I still think glowniggers messed with my connection during that one thread with the Egyptian tomb. It started happening as soon after that info got posted and only some sites including here were blocked, rest were okay. Nowadays It's the entire internet connection and the phone line that goes down, so it's definitely the pirate network niggers's fault.

WSB decided the numbers were too big, so they stopped using the county chart on their twitter feed. They also (((forgot))) to do the update last night, but they did get out the totals for today. They also have county totals on their website, but people want the pics.

4,117 cases (+1,434 from March 29th), 125 deaths (+43), and 885 hospitalizations (+207)

The major Atlanta metro counties are on top for obvious reasons, but Dougherty County is not. It's the home of Albany, Georgia way south-west of the metro, which is one of the major cities of our state. It's getting hit hard because of a large funeral held in that city.

GOP state congressmen here also want to push the primary to the late summer, since early voting starts this month. For our non-burger frens, in many states, if they enable early voting, you can go to the county election office to vote before the official election. Of course, since there's only one place to vote, guess where all the early voters will congregate.

One point I'd raise, is that with SARS-1 we saw people getting on to airplanes headed west and collapsing when they got here. At the time we thought it was people fleeing their own healthcare system, but of the 8k or so infected by SARS-1, what are the odds one would be able to get on a plane on their own? I absolutely think they tried the same damned thing(of opportunistically employing a disease as a bioweapon) with the original SARS, but were foiled by its low infectuousness.

>Louisiana and now Georgia

Looks like there is some hope for both the north and south in the USA. Anyone have any ideas or predictive patterns on how this will move through the continental US? The whole thing seems to flow east to west, China, the middle east and Iran, Italy and Europe and down into Africa, then finally the eastern USA getting hit hard. I imagine it will pop up in east Texas before long, and hopefully will be a big hit in Chicago as well as Jew York.

The west coast of the USA is at least semi-locked down already though, so I don't know if the virus will travel as effectively across the large, empty expanse that is most of the western USA and finally all the way out to the California coastal strip where everything is already shut down. We will see though, at very least the eastern half of the USA will likely get fucked hard, west could go either way. I imagine then it will get down into Mexico and probably meet halfway with the strain already percolating in southern and central American nations.

>Anyone have any ideas or predictive patterns on how this will move through the continental US?

It's followed major migratory routes through population centers.

Now it will follow major freight routes because of JIT business practices.

You'll see grocery stores as the main routes of transmission because they're taking the place of bars and restaurants as everything else shuts down. People will go to the store just to socialize, like we saw happen with the crowds at the hospital ship in Jew York.

Grocery stores along with health care providers are now the main employers outside of the government, which will further push a small number of people into contact with a growing number of people who are going to become more desperate.

Mark my words:

Doctors, Hospitals, Health care first.

Grocery second, or at the same time as Hospitals.

Freight third.

Can you 5g fags fuck off and stay away? You have ZERO evidence. I know some microwave radiation can fuck your shit up, I used to install commercial APs but this is just poppycock. If you want a theory that actually has plausibility and some evidence on that type of thing then dig into THz imaging. but you won't because you come here from cuckchan to push your shitty jewtube embeds about muh 5g.

That 5g which has all but a few microcells installed in the most infected city in Iran. Kek EM interacting at cellular level is nothing new and it can be used to cure many diseases and viruses, many inventors have worked with it but it's highly unlikely by pharma because you can't sell pills when you treat someone for good with a one use machine..

The problem with 5G is that if you look at the most impacted city in Iran it has effectively no 5g coverage. As well as all the rural places in China that got fucked and many other parts of the world. This was discussed to death in the early breads and the absolute lack of correlation with this information taken into account makes it highly implausible to be 'to blame'. It's a boomer tier theory spread by CCP faggots and supplement sellers to take the heat off the chinks and make money from stupid fucks.

I asked him how the city was doing and he told me something that is pretty fucked up.

Some nigger was tested positive for corona, and escaped the hospital. Dropped in a fit back home, and one of the neighbours called the doctors. When the ambulance came to take him, his friends rammed the ambulance with a van, took him and ran away.

Niggers think the doctors infected him when he took the test and now wanted to study him.

Brownzilian woman in Rio de Janeiro is denied testing

>I would like to know what are the criteria for being able to be tested for the coronavirus. I have a friend with all of the symptoms, including shortness of breath and loss of smell, she went to the emergency hospital three times and they denied her for not being part of the risk group (elderly and people with health issues)

>They gave her a medical certificate for 14 days, a prescription for 500mg dipyron then sent her home. Is this correct? Just for the fact that her age isn't advanced enough, not being pregnant or having a chronic illness? What kind of treatment is this?

Corona-Corpse being burnt in the middle of a road in Ecuador. Since Portuguese is somewhat similar to Spic, I can understand just a little bit >They're burning a body [spic talk that I can't understand] They're contaminating the environment of everyone who lives around there. What kind of world are we living in, my God?

>>88145

Given the ignorance of Brownzilians on twitter, it will happen. On one hand, you have hedonist normalfags autistically screeching

<Fuck off already coronavirus, I wanna party hard with my normalnigger friends, REEEEEEEEE

Then on the other hand you have rabid Bolsonaro supporters who think all governors are inflating the deaths by ordering their state health departments to assign every death as Corona-Chan, despite the signs that points health departments and MinHealth are covering cases up as much as they can.

<Hurr durr, that guy had hypertension and diabeteus but they're saying he died from the coronavirus, they're faking the deaths, hurr

>Literally too fucking retarded to understand that underlying health issues raises the chance of people dying

Both of these kind of cunts make crawling through Brownzilian Twitter for info nearly unbearable. It's a strikingly similar feeling to dealing with the hordes of shills and shitposters on halfchan's /cvg/s.

He spent a good part of his campaign promising us gun rights, even going so far to saying he would like to give us something close to your 2A. What did he gave us instead? A decree that barely changed anything. I'm still pissed off at him to this day and it's what made me abandon him, because he could have used the full extent of his presidential power to give us more gun rights. I still like him but I don't consider myself to be one of his supporters anymore, that was a major let down for me.

Not lamenting any of them going, though. Unless it's the one or two conservatives like Vince Vaughn or that lunatic Mel Gibson.

>ebola in frogland

/ourgirl/ is way worse than Ebola-chan, when you think about it. Lower immediate mortality rate, higher infectivity, ability to go undetected.. unlike ebola where you start showing aggressive symptoms early enough for people to identify and isolate or kill you, Corona-chan's stealth skill is high and by the time you notice her she's infected everyone in the room and most of you are fucked.

Another hilarious conspiracy theory I saw is that the virus contains brain interfacing nanobots which feed back image data from the infected person's eyes to the 5G networks. The Corona virus turns the population into cyborgs, with all of our nerve impulses being transmitted to a centralized neural network. Instead of being a brain amongst many, you are but a node of a super mind. I assume the nano bots power themselves with the host, or wirelessly via the 5G signal... but of course these practical concerns are never specified when people are being silly.

I hope this is true, because the niggers deserve to finally pay the toll for their stupidity. We've developed a society so grand, it's increasingly difficult for them to fail and perish as nature intended.

It's the exact same situation and problem as all the Princess Plague Cruises, except probably worse because of the bunking arrangements. All that aside, I don't really know how much to worry about all this shit, the virus, not the affect on everything else. It isn't killing that many people worldwide compared to so many other things, yet will it only wipe out people who are 65+ or have preexisting conditions? It would be even more hilarious if an adversary were to take advantage and they put her out to sea with a new crew to show strength. It's typical military dogma in cases of plagues not to show weakness. The Iranians already started through their Houthi friends. Show you're still capable. If this spread continues (and very likely because the proximity of everything on any ship) combat readiness will go down. The Reagan also got it.

Because in 1918 every GI got sent sick on a boat to Europe. And now every sailor or soldier gets his fee fees put first by his faggot CO. Like the captain of the Roosevelt, writing to the SecDef and leaking to the press, nobody cares about chain of command it seems. They're all faggots looking to score likes from their subordinates.

Paper tigers burn quickly. Sad thing is it isn't the toys that are incapable, they very much are capable-except the F35, that's just a piece of shit. It is the pozz running the toys; and why we deserve and will receive ruin.

Tutorial mode is over, we are just getting into early difficulties, as things continue to fly apart we will be on hard mode and didn't even realize it until the nasty girls have their less than humanitarian training kick in.

Leadership on every level of nearly every government on Earth has fucked the pony on this one, one way or another. That hasn't ingratiated anyone to anyone else and only exposes the weaknesses of the system. The comment was made about the results of the Spanish Flu. Generally stated if the society was strong, it survived. If it wasn't it was a catastrophic failure. The idiots that have made a cluster-fuck of this, from China to the US and beyond screwed it up when it was in the fucking tutorial mode. I have zero confidence they will magically solve the problems that they caused themselves.

Some strong spiritual beliefs of the homeland should be reinforced worldwide. It is well known that this has been practiced in Wakanda since time began.

The population of infected hasn't grown enough for that to present substantially in the US. Watch NY though- might start seeing it more often. Is why the necrotic encephalitis info is out now. As we "crest the first wave" you'll see more videos of droppers. Otherwise they are at home and I don't think they are doing many autopsies.

Sorry for the new ID, power went out for a couple of minutes. I'm going to bed now, tired as hell, see you nignogs later.

Chinks getting uppity after seeing the Burger navy getting blessed

Chinks send a million malfunctioning testing kits to Spain

Real number of cases in Brownzil could be higher it is due to lack of testing kits. The amount of testing kits is still insufficient in Brazil, for this reason, many specialists think the rate of contamination and mortality could be much higher than official numbers. Business woman Maristela Duarte Andreoli mourns for the loss of her husband. Carlos Eduardo, 59 years old, died last Friday (27 of March) after displaying coughing, tiredness and a compromised lung. The result of the coronavirus test taken one week ago still hasn't come out.

>I buried him Saturday and I already feel bad. I don't have the results, I only have the result that says me and him don't have influenza. The result of the H1N1 test came out instantly, but not of the corona one.

>Anon, I've never seen so many dropper videos in short succession..

Yes indeed, Guayaquil is Wuhan all over again. You got bodies, droppers, military punishing people and overwhelmed hospitals.

>Parts of South America are toast if this keeps up.

Hopefully Brownzil will be too. I can't wait for Corona-Chan to really start unleashing her power over here, especially in my neighborhood, the niggers here grow more unbearable by the minute.

>Thanks so much for the excellent contributions and enjoy /comfy/ rain times of contemplation, Hueanon. Cheers

I appreciate your kind words. I don't enjoy rain much since it temporally kills my niggernet and is also killing my power, though luckily that didn't happen this time. But I do like catching some Zs to the sound of rain.

Here's what Jews are telling their fellow Jews about the virus.

>"I'm like a little supermarket. Everything hurts, and every day I get out of bed in the morning, I go to the bathroom, and I think I'm doing better," he told The Jerusalem Post. "Then I start getting dizzy and weak. I go back to bed, just wait for it to be calm at night and go to sleep. And this has been going on like that every single day."

>"My message is straightforward," Perlstein said. "If you would have gotten [the coronavirus] and you would know how painful it is, you would have rather stayed home for six weeks than going out and getting it, even with the light case."

>"People have no idea. People cannot relate to how painful it is and how you could just lay in bed like you're almost dead for days and days - and there's nothing to do."

AVOID CATCHING IT.

It's a interesting situation. With things like these it's never one thing or one person that fucks up.

Chinese people are disgusting.

>communist government

>bad eating habits = eat everything (thanks communism!)

>overcrowded cities

>bad sanitation

>their belief in traditional chinese medicine >overall bad personal hygiene >culture of jewing their kind and others for money

All these factors contributed for the mess we're in.

But again, western countries were also asking for it:

>overinflated bureaucracy and tariffs make impossible to manufacture products in your own country >so lets buy everything from china

>muh diversity

>muh economy

>muh tourist season

>corrupt officials bought by china >high trust societies that can't fathom that other societies will take advantage of them

If people don't want this shit to happen again a LOT of lessons need to be learned. But first and foremost, the main and easiest lesson is to never engage in any way, except in self-defense situations, with communist countries.

Tell you what I think : unless America does a full lockdown for 1 month to burn the virus out, the death rate will escalate like crazy.
China's is leveling out now thanks to soldering people in their homes. Whether you believe it or not, there are fewer and fewer cases coming out. Or it could be because more people are dying and they're doing the best to suppress it. And then there are idiots like this guy here whining about muh freedoms (and tons of comments saying how the virus is fake new world order bs etc) :

Only landlords who are tough enough to make you pay by going into your house and forcing you to pay at gunpoint are getting their rent money from now on.
But you can always start coughing like you're blessed and they'll leave you alone I suppose.

Landlords will evict people to replace them with paying tenants, but they will not have the foresight to predict that the available tenant pool will be significantly poisoned by those that have just defaulted and are providing false documents to procure a new home.

A smart landlord will evaluate the tenancy length, the professional skillset held and payment history for each tenant. Turfing out someone that isn't a low skilled worker and has paid for years without causing property issues is a bigger loss risk than just taking a few months financial hit.

I think it will be hilarious as low IQ scum and leftists will be the least financially conservative. They are also the same demographics that cannot exercise emotional restraint or make sound logical decisions.

This event will be called the great reality check, where the superfluous lose their token jobs and all scramble for welfare and shit jobs. We can then remind them that only foreign immigrants are willing to work and hire them instead.

You give the government too much credit.

The government does not care about anything more than their election prospects, minimum job delivery and paychecks. It's an organisation full of people choosing job security and pensions.

Population control is the motive of people that desire the feeling of importance, that are also at least sociopathic or have become unhinged, detached from cause and effect due to constant unwarranted praise.

>they can't do anything! The courts are closed! LOL!

They won't be closed forever. And when they open back up, a lot of landlords will be seeking evictions because tenants have proven they have no regard for the lease and contracts they signed.

Landlords will spread the word about who skipped payments. Landlords won't want a high risk, paycheck to paycheck tenant who will violate contracts when they have someone with no history of that to choose from instead. These rent-skippers have possibly doomed their chances of renting a nice place for a long time. Low IQ move for people with no concept of the future.

At this rate it may well be the entire pool. I strongly suspect that if this continues another couple of months like this tens if not hundreds of millions of people are going to run out of money and start squatting. There aren't going to be any replacements for the tenants even if they manage an eviction. The housing market will collapse along with everything else anyway, so it's a bit of a moot point. You are seriously underestimating the severity of the situation and your assumption of things ever going back to 'normal' is a bit much of a stretch.

Urban people are the ones who are having the most problems. If that does happen, urban land values will plummet and suburban and rural places won't want to rent to those people if they can learn of their squatting ways. If an entire city becomes known as a place where no one pays rent, no one will want to own property there, thus collapsing land value prices as there's a rush to sell. And sadly, from a landlord perspective, the smart move then is to convert to section 8 housing if you don't sell or you're a new buyer.

For now, but rural areas are very much not immune either. I expect the virus to make headway there too over the coming months, their catastrophe is merely delayed (unless a town manages to actually block off all roads leading in somehow).

>If that does happen, urban land values will plummet

Yup, agreed. But it won't just be the urban areas. Also it won't even just be renters, those with mortgages are also going to abruptly stop paying. All properties of all sorts are going to crash through the floor in value soon, since renters won't be able to pay rent and landlords therefore won't be able to pay mortgage. Given how widespread this will be I fully expect to see the banks told to fuck off at gunpoint - because the people will be left with literally no other option.

Found this gem on CNN

A sociologist known for walking nearly every block of New York City has died of coronavirus

Should've self-quarantined, but nooooooooo

> By Anna Sturla, CNN

> Updated 7:13 AM ET, Tue March 31, 2020

> William Helmreich, a sociologist and author, died of coronavirus at 74.

> (CNN) William Helmreich, a prominent sociologist perhaps best known for walking nearly every block of New York City, died Saturday morning of coronavirus, his family said.

> He was 74.

> Helmreich wrote nearly 20 books, including "The New York Nobody Knows: Walking 6,000 Miles in the City," which chronicled his walks through New York City talking to and learning about its residents.

> Born in Switzerland to Holocaust survivors, Helmreich immigrated to New York City as an infant, eventually becoming a sociology professor at the City College of New York.

well, of course - his parents were Holohoax conspirators

> "Professor Helmreich was a true City College institution, a man with a restless curiosity about the people around him, a ceaseless investigator and an avid storyteller," CCNY President Vincent Boudreau said in a statement to CNN.

> Helmreich prided himself on having walked "virtually" every block of the city, earning an everyman's view of daily life.

then wonders why he got corona virus

> "He believed that everybody had a story worth telling," Jeffrey Helmreich said of his father. "Every place and every person was interesting to my father. And every person felt interesting when talking to my father."

until they koofed on him

> Helmreich, who also wrote spinoff volumes highlighting each of the city's boroughs, was working on the final entry in his series before he died.

> "He was just about to finish Staten Island," his son said. "We've still got to finish that one."

> Highly regarded in academia, Helmreich also reveled in the joy and grittiness of everyday life, his family told CNN.

> "He was so intensely human as a scholar. It was so much about learning with his feet, with his heart, with his intuition, with his gut," said Jeffrey Helmreich, who is a professor at the ((University of California, Irvine.))) "He talked his way into everyone's hearts and revealed it to the rest of us."

> After testing positive for coronavirus, Helmreich's symptoms appeared to be improving when he died suddenly on Saturday.

> "We weren't ready for this at all. We didn't say goodbye. We didn't think we had to say goodbye," Jeffrey Helmreich said.

> His family held a virtual funeral, with few guests. They were not able to sit shiva - or mourn together at home - as is Jewish tradition.

lel - kike

> Funeral service workers in personal protective gear carried the casket, and a bulldozer shoveled dirt over the grave, Jeffrey Helmreich said.

bulldozer - my sides

> Helmreich's widow and one of his sons attended, standing six feet apart.

Shale Files For Bankruptcy

>U.S. shale producer Whiting Petroleum Corporation, once one of the top producers in the Bakken, said on Wednesday that it had filed for bankruptcy protection, becoming the first major victim of the oil price war and the coronavirus pandemic that sent oil prices to $20.

>Whiting Petroleum Corporation, whose largest projects are in the Bakken and Three Forks plays in North Dakota and the Niobrara play in northeast Colorado, said in a statement that it had started voluntary Chapter 11 cases under the United States Bankruptcy Code in the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of Texas.

>"Given the severe downturn in oil and gas prices driven by uncertainty around the duration of the Saudi / Russia oil price war and the COVID-19 pandemic, the Company's Board of Directors came to the conclusion that the principal terms of the financial restructuring negotiated with our creditors provides the best path forward for the Company," said Bradley J. Holly, the company's chairman, president and CEO.

>Whiting Petroleum has reached an agreement with certain noteholders to pursue financial restructuring to debt by more than US$2.2 billion via the exchange of all of the notes for 97 percent of the new equity of the reorganized company.

>Whiting Petroleum will continue to operate without material disruption to vendors or employees, and at this point, it expects to have enough liquidity to meet its financial obligations during the restructuring without resorting to additional financing, it said.

>Whiting Petroleum became the first sizable U.S. shale producer to seek bankruptcy protection and restructuring after the oil price collapse forced many U.S. drillers, including the supermajors Exxon and Chevron, to announce significant reductions in projected spending and drilling operations, as no one in the U.S. shale patch can profitably drill a new well at $20 WTI Crude.

>Since the oil price crash last month, 22 U.S. independents have cut expenditure for 2020 by a total of US$20 billion, an average of 35 percent, and three have slashed capex by 50 percent or more, Simon Flowers, Chairman and Chief Analyst at Wood Mackenzie, said on Tuesday.

>"The size of cuts is close to those of 2015 and have come through faster. Yet companies today are far leaner than back then; and what we've seen so far may just be a taste of what's to come. Diamondback and Occidental have already cut twice in two weeks, suggesting further, deeper cuts are coming for many US Independents," Flowers noted um...

> ...It is feared that Whiting, while being the first oil and gas company to file for bankruptcy, certainly won't be the last stateside, with many producers large and small writing off 2020 expecting an oil price in the $10-20 per barrel range for much of the second and third quarters of the year.

<https://www.forbes.com/sites/gauravsharma/2020/04/01/oil-price-crash-pushes-whiting-petroleum-to-bankruptcy-as-stock-slumps-91/#78a057c25a24>

<https://archive.ph/eBdj8>

> Under the restructuring agreement, Whiting's balance sheet will be deleveraged by $2.2 billion. Debtholders will receive 97% of the new equity in the restructured company, while existing shareholders will receive 3%.

> Most debtholders are on board, according to the company.

> "We are pleased to have secured a highly constructive restructuring framework with a critical mass of our note holders," CEO Bradley Holly said in a statement. "Through the terms of the proposed restructuring, we believe a right-sized balance sheet will enable us to capitalize on our enhanced cost structure, high-quality asset base and successfully compete in the current environment."

> SunTrust Robinson Humphrey analyst Neal Dingmann notes that Whiting had $260 million worth of convertible debt coming due on Wednesday.
> "Though Whiting had ample liquidity to address the 2020 notes after pulling down $650 million from its credit facility last Friday, we believe this was more of a temporary solution than long-term sustainable plan," Dingmann wrote. "Not only would the company need to address 2021 maturities, but $1.5B+ due in 2023 and $1.0B in 2026. We believe this financial demise was due to a combination of difficult macro conditions combined with sub-par operations for several quarters."
> The analyst is skeptical that the company will have a smooth ride after restructuring. "We remain skeptical whether Bakken pricing and company acumen will be sufficient to grow an even leaner company post emergence," he wrote.
> Whether Whiting is the first of many bankruptcies remains to be seen. Other companies have similar debt positions that are troubling, but may be able to make deals with creditors instead of restructuring or may find a way to cut costs enough to rebound.
> Some analysts say that there isn't likely to be a wave of bankruptcies in the near-term because companies successfully refinanced debt in advance of the latest selloff.

if by "zombies" you mean a hoard of starving masses then yes. this is why the US army had those "zombie" training sessions. It was to desensitize the military to having to slaughter large numbers of starving people who would be swarming facilities protected by the govt for food

>So far the rough mathematical models I made in early February based on early Wuhan numbers and the Diamond Princess have been pretty much dead on.

>Here's some spoilers: about 220 million worldwide deaths, 12 million in the US. Things will not begin to return to normal until at least August. Most of these deaths will happen in April and May. These next two months might cause so much social disorder that some countries won't survive. China is, even with their draconian government, still sick. They just quarantined another province.

>Interesting. Too bad thanks Bill Gates there's 360,000 births everyday. Means "the world" will recover within two years. At least we know the "population reduction" Alex Jones theories are definitely wrong but the "Great Replacement" still looks accurate. World will be darker after this, metaphorically and physically.

What these two are forgetting is that the world is going to go apeshit with violence, looting, fighting over resources, etc. leading to more deaths. 200 million is literally a war number. It's to cause destabilization and secondary deaths from the virus.

Screening traffic inbound from GA to FL.

And now, after a press blitz criticizing Florida governor deSantis over the past few days, he has issued a one size fits all stay at home order. Really this is reaction to shitty work by local jurisdictions like St Pete, just like New York state had to act because NYC mayor deBlasio is so shitty. Florida so far is not so bad off compared to USA as a whole, even though southern Florida is trying to jew the state up.

In Israel, they instituted curfew March 15, and have recently extended it. More police departments report they are incapacitated due to blue flu. Hopefully that means the curfew enforcement will be a joke.

True Story: I got pulled over the other day because I have Louisiana plates on my truck. I moved to Ohio last summer, but haven't bothered registering my truck. Since New Orleans is one of the heavy hit places, the cop wanted to know why I was in Ohio and how long I'd planned to stay. I had to prove that I'd been in Ohio since long before this whole pandemic garbage.

Fake? Have you not been watching the news? Are you some kind of medical denier? The evidence is right in front you eyes: bar charts, line charts, numbers. Public statements from experts and authorities. Actual video from makeshift hospitals with hundreds of beds that will be overflowing as soon as this tsunami of death hits, probably tomorrow.

I'll bet you are one of those Scientist-deniers who thinks that the flu is worse than covid19 just because the flu kills more people, is more contagious, has a higher fatality rate and more severe symptoms. You literally want your grandmother to die just so the Dow Jones Industrial average will go up a couple points, don't you? Your attitude is an insult to the hero first responders who are risking their lives every day by making sure you don't get killed by accidentally going shopping or having a job.
You're damn lucky this is an anonymous board because I'd be reporting your ass to the denier hotline, and you'd get quarantined in a jail cell. I hear there are plenty of empty cells due to the massive covid19 death rate in the jails.

No evidence of rapid clearance or benefit in severe cases...ok, but the stated benefit was to halt the virus from multiplying during early detection. A severe case means it has already multiplied beyond control. In severe cases where it has infiltrated the nervous system obviously nothing can be done.

The chloroquine treatment's effectiveness sounds like it is entirely dependent upon early detection.

That is entirely possible. It sounded plausible because the drug retards ACE2 function, which we assumed the virus relied on, but an anon in this thread just said Italy is saying Sialic acid is also another route used by Corona-Chan. Then there is the problem of having to go to a hospital to get chloroquine treatment, and those will be overwhelmed death traps very soon.

Reminder that those numbers are complete manure since the ministry of lies covering up cases and don't have enough testing kits, they've also probably instructed hospitals and clinics to send Hues with Corona-Chan's symptoms back

Defense chief says states can use National Guard to enforce stay-at-home orders >Defense Secretary Mark Esper said Tuesday that states have the option of using the National Guard to enforce stay-at-home orders amid the coronavirus pandemic.
>"That would be an option for the governors," Esper said on CBS News. "Again, the guard is active in all 50 states and territories. I'm very proud of what our guardsmen are doing, but we have a whole lot more capacity out there in the guard right now to do more."
>Esper compared having the National Guard deal with the coronavirus to its duties when a hurricane or another natural disaster strikes the country, saying the force would be used to curb the outbreak's effects.
>"You know, we typically think of National Guard dealing with a hurricane in a state or a series of tornadoes, and this case right now, we have 54 hurricanes out there," he said. "And every single state and territory, and we know they're going to grow in size and in their power."
>The remarks come as a growing number of states order their residents to shelter in their homes to try to blunt the spread of COVID-19, which has infected more than 189,000 people and killed at least 3,900 in the U.S. Last weekend the National Guard in Rhode Island began going door-to-door to enforce quarantine orders for those leaving New York.
>However, not all areas are expected to use heavy-handed tactics to impose their stay-at-home orders. Washington, D.C., Mayor Muriel Bowser (D) said Tuesday that her city is unlikely to make arrests to enforce the rule.
>"We don't expect that we will have to issue any fines and jail penalties, because we expect the people of the District of Columbia to comply," Bowser said at a press briefing. "The point is not to arrest anybody, the point is for people to stay at home."

>Burger military incompetent

According to the DOD last week the department had been "closely following" the virus since early Jan. There was a strange exchange between the lady spokesperson and the Dr. they trotted out about when Esper knew about the virus. The Dr. claimed Esper knew since the 3rd week in Jan, the spokesperson then corrected him and said Esper knew the 2nd week.

Perhaps even more alarming than that is that they collectively claimed that DOD was getting their info from (((WHO))), chinoid research articles online, and "robust data from our allies and partners."

Imagine my surprise when the solution the ex lobbyist for Ratheon Dr Esper involves using military ships with advanced tracking capabilities./ i wonder who builds stuff like that hmmm.

HOW ABOUT GETTING TESTING TO ALL AMERICANS SO WE CAN GET A HANDLE ON THIS VIRUS?

Well head of HHS is a Eli Lobbyist, so our policy will be whatever's most profitable. Azar's made like $30 million as a lobbyist so why did he quit and take this 100k a year job?

We are fucked guys.

In a civilized society Trump should be talking about one thing and addressing one issue, GETTING AMERICA A LARGE SCALE TESTING CAPABILITY FOR THIS VIRUS.

Instead Esper's hooking up Raytheon with some surveillance bullshit in the middle of the ocean.

>The reason that Americans don't study math is that engineering isn't the way to get ahead in America, usury and deception are. An MBA and a marketing position are infinitely more lucrative than engineering, because again, Jews and boomers outsource as much real work as possible.

Codemonkey here, I don't wonder why barely anybody bothers becoming engineer in US, you're either a jew and you will get a good job at barmitzwa, a woman\nigger\womanigger and you will get a job because of muh equality or you're white retard who signed up to 10 years of hell. Not only will you pay quite a sum for your studies, but you will have to suffer ever cutting wages. Every major IT company is crying to government that they lack specialists, they don't want to hire young americans because they've got decent wage expectations and a debt to pay which means they ain't gonna agree to work for shit. That's why year to year US imports shitloads of poos and shitskins to this sector who are ready to live in 20 people bunkers and work half of what you'd have to pay american engineer.

>RE: Paper

>Title: No Evidence of Rapid Antiviral Clearance or Clinical Benefit with the Combination of Hydroxychloroquine and Azithromycin in Patients with Severe COVID-19 Infection

>Auth: Jean Michel Molina Dr Constance Delaugerre Jerome Le Goff Breno Mela-Lima Diane Ponscarne Lauriane Goldwirt Nathalie de Castro

>Loc: Infectious Diseases Department, Saint Louis Hospital, 75010 Paris, France

Paper is poor. Reads like a case report, not a controlled experiment report. Less than 10 patients evaluated, consistent with case reporting. However, poor demographic background and course of treatment documentation, which would otherwise be expected in case reporting. Essentially, way too little case for a case-study, and way too little control for a controlled-study. Paper does cite several papers demonstrating less agreement with chloroquine for viral pneumonia, which is perhaps the purpose of the journal submission.

>There were 7 men and 4 women with a mean age of 58.7 years (range: 20-77), 8 had significant comorbidities associated with poor outcomes (obesity: 2; solid cancer: 3; hematological cancer: 2; HIV-infection: 1)

Very little utility outside of initial disclosure to reserve a seat for perhaps publishing a future full article. The title and location cited above convey the most useful evaluation. The second most useful evaluation is external: France, and French institutional politics, are aligned with Brussels/EU, and these authors in particular are not likely to be siding against their pay in these times at those effectively highly communist/centralist-like economics of France. Very little meaning.

Discard.

>new evidence from the horse's mouth

all of which had already been posted in previous /cvg/ treads.

We did not pursue the missing chink scientist because there were no leads nor any worth in doing so. The presence of the lv4 bio lab so close to ground 0 and all the gathered documentations depicting the viruses they had in stock as well as the experiments they were conducting on them was more than enough evidence directly from the horse's mouth.

We even got official papers dating almost a decade that they were splicing SARS corona virus with AIDS genes, lo and behold, Pajets find that out just mere days after the outbreak went public and just as quickly as they found it the (((WHO))) refuted their papers with some retarded bullshit excuse that i can't even be bothered to remember every normy and their mother knows this is a fucking bio weapon regardless of what the (((official narrative))) says, we have had a stock of incriminating and irrefutable evidence pointing towards that fact since the outbreak first began and yet mainstream media kept sucking CCP cock, calling it a conspiracy theory while they told you that it was just a flu and you were a bigot if you didn't eat the bat soup this video ain't gonna change jack shit, the media won't start blaming the CCP until the last (((journos))) starts coughing blood and the CCP will never admit they were developing a bio weapon, regardless, it's pointless if they do so or not, because not only does nobody believe them, but the whole world is keeping their eyes on China and hating them ever more with every new thing they learn about them

that video is old news

Some countries half-did that already.

Setting up temp tents and converting Stadiums, theaters and other big public buildings into either morgues or campaign hospitals for corona.

I fear that in the future, the problem will be keeping them stocked. They don't have the same conditions a proper hospital has. Need fridges? Sure, but we only have the smaller ones. Oxygen storage? Put it in the back.

I don't see anyone rushing to build new hospitals either. Wouldn't make sense, if this goes away in a month or so, so the investment doesn't justify it.

Doctors are being told to make do with what they have and what little help arrives.

>then tell me what could you possibly use some super infectious airborne aids for other than to kill large numbers of people, why would you design something that infects humans to stay hidden for more than 2 weeks while still infecting everything around them if not to make sure you maximize the number of infections Lots of virus gene editing already occurs in the open, m80, and for non-weaponized reasons (Obviously, since nobody admits making bioweapons). One purpose is to make the virus hardier in a laboratory environment so it can be studied. This has been done to other viruses, and pieces of HIV have been used to this effect (mainly because HIV is one of the most studied viruses in the world, due to all the public money poured into it). Another alteration is to make the virus more virulent in order to create therapies. This is what was in the 2015 paper IIRC.

There is an analogous story with respect to marine aquarium plants. Most marine plants simply cannot survive in the harsh conditions of an artificial environment. Through natural selection (this was before gene editing), one marine plant was bred to be able to survive this harsh environment, then an Italian natural history museum let it out into the Mediterranean sea where it is taking over and is creating a monoculture. it behaves like something designed to destroy the sea, but this was unintentional.

<http://www.ridnis.ucdavis.edu/Caulerpataxifolia.html>

Again, just because it's engineered doesn't mean it's a bioweapon. Viruses don't do well in a harsh laboratory environment which makes them hard to study. There is definitely a cover-up, however.

I'll also add that there is evidence that contradict the bioweapon hypothesis. For example it would be completely insane to use SARS as your basis for a bioweapon since the virus mutates so easily. It cannot be controlled. You schizo bioweapon theorists would do well to employ deductive rather than inductive reasoning >give this info to his dumbfuck "normie ""FRIENDS"" "

I learned not to do this back in highschool. And it pays off more too.

>A week ago, co-workers saying shit's going fine, China already recovering

>"I don't buy their numbers, I think China is lying."

>I give no sources, don't force the issue, they don't ask for more either

>A week later, china admits there might be more cases

>Folks tell me I'm right, they can't trust the chinese

You know what the secret is, here?

It's that those normalfags "found out" the truth by themselves. Now they feel "in the know", they feel a little sense of control again, and they will react more positively about further anti-china news instead of treating them like conspiracy theories.

If I told anyone a week ago about the 21 million cellphone numbers that were dropped, not a single person would buy it. There's nothing on their news channels about it, heck isn't China recovering, even?

But now? Now I can just send them a link, let them read it for themselves. I don't even need a single word. And they once again feel knowledagble, feel in control.

I don't stick around to hear people praise my independent research, or compliment my extensive international knowledge. Fuck that.

I just want china to burn, and to convince people to not buy chinese shit. This is one of the best attack vectors I've seen recently.

You on the other hand come off as an attention-whore, who wants to look cool and wise to his friends.

You know what? Feel free to ignore me and the ruskie. Keep doing what you're doing.

But do check the last threads for atleast 7 diferent anons going "I tried warn them, why didn't they listen?".

Protip: it's not the source quality, or the message.

The problem is in the messenger being a total bitch.

No one claimed HIV was a weapon that's a matter for another thread actually.

What everyone can attest is that virus in the Corona family are typically fairly small, helping them in being Recombinant enough that they constantly spread from animals to humans.

No virus in the Corona family had anything similar to HIV. As far as I know, no known strains of Corona virii even attack your immune system.

What the pajeet labs found (and corroborated by an American lab later) was that nuCov19 is MASSIVE and enormous compared to other Corona virii, and one of the largest portions of it is nearly identical to HIV.

There's one key difference here: the only part from HIV that is not present is the transmission method.

HIV spread with sexual activity, something that is actually not that good for spreading a virus.

It's been replaced with the spread method of a common flu.

Back a few threads, history anons posted documents and studies dating from the cold war, where Russians had biolabs theorizing the same idea: mix the common cold with something nasty (HIV for instance) for a lethal bioweapon. After learning that a chimeric virus like that was feasible, they came upon the second question: "How do we control this thing after it's out?".

The answer? We don't. And they ceased research into it. It would be like developing a Nuke that glassed your enemies AND you. Pointless.

Now tell me anon, do you think Chinks, renowned for their STRATEGIC TANG VICTORY, when reaching the same question would answer the same?

Keep in mind that there's a lot more components inside the virus.

The SARS part looks like the same one from the Saudi patient back in 2003 that was taken to Canada.

There's one I forgot the name, but it's responsible for Necrotizing brain tissue (anons called it almost two weeks ago, it just hit the news today where I live).

Nothing in this virus, from the size, components and spread method looks natural.

Even the genetic code ending in 26 "a" looks like gene manipulation to protect the RNA payload in the event of mutation.

To my knowledge nobody has explains the immunosuppressive effect of ncov-2019.

It may or may not be due to the HIV homology. We don't know yet.

HIV spreads primarily through needles and blood transfusions. In fact that's how it was originally introduced to the human population: a Hep. B vaccine which came from monkey tissue (IIRC kidneys).

IF ncov-2019 is a weapon it is a completely non-discriminatory weapon a la 12 Monkeys. It's far more likely it was edited for purposes of making a SARS remedy or vaccine, which is what the 2015 paper implies.

I obviously mean it was made MORE virulent, and the purpose was to grow it in a lab and create remedies. This also explains why the virus is so hardy and can be viable on dry surfaces for crazy long periods. This is a classic problem studying viruses in the lab: they don't stay viable outside the human body.

Quick Question:

Do jews still operate the liquor businesses? (like the same jews who did during prohibition)

Why I ask is that a state such as Illinois deemed liquor sales to be essential, therefore keeping the liquor stores open.

Wondering if it is because jews or the government makes a large chunk of its tax revenues off of liquor sales.

There's little to no reason to build something like this unless you're gonna weaponize it and Chinks have highlited bio-warfare as a core part of their modern military program.

Which means that even as an indiscriminate weapon you can't really sell the cure or even protect yourself. In theory, so far as my knowledge on the matter goes.

It's clear evidence again the bioweapon theory yet:

1) Still can be engineered and made worse due to said engineering

2) Was released due to sloppiness that China is well known for (how many diseases already escaped?)

3) There is clearly a coverup to keep the money flowing into research labs

If you wanted to make a bioweapon you could actually control, you would want to choose a stable platform.

I SUPPOSE you could argue China COULD have been experimenting with spikes and mixing genes just to understand the virus properties better and are thus, say, 20 years away from making an actual bioweapon but that's all dual-use knowledge. The question is if ncov-2019 is a bioweapon. I don't see how.

Maybe China was experimenting with parts of a weapon, but the SARS platform cannot be controlled. There isn't any evidence of it being a weapon yet. This is very true, and is the exact experience I've had with my co-workers on a number of issues. I've even got my dipshit boomer boss at least semi-redpilled on some things. But I also do use sources, oftentimes when I know something is coming down the pipe, I will forewarn him about it, then dig up a story on it from a news source I know he trusts, then be quick to use it to convince him. 3 years ago my manager at work though I was smart, but a tinfoil conspiracy cookoo. Now that he's seen everything from Epstein to the China virus he's much more on board with everything I have to say and it's an effective way to influence people and gain credibility.

China doesn't seem to care about bad PR. Africans are learning, for example, that calling the Chinese racist has no effect whatsoever. If their economy goes to pot I could easily see some hot wars as CCP tried to keep hold of power and need an external bogey man to do so.

>Why not move factories back into Europe/USA and let our people work?

A better question is: where did all of these corporation get the capital to literally dismantle their factories and ship them to China in the 70s/80s? Did the Chinese peasants take up a collection? Did they find the money under a tree?
Or did our fucking banks give these corporations an ultimatum that they would either comply with their plans to destroy America or face bankruptcy?

Factories don't happen without billions of dollars in capital flows supporting them. They don't pay for themselves for decades, and that capital and interest has to be held and paid for by someone who agrees with the plan and profitability projections behind the enterprise. If manufacturing is going to move back home, it will be at the pleasure of the kings of capital, not the will of a people so demoralized and subjugated that they willingly rewrite their history to please their cultural overseers.

That is pretty good.

It's a shame the word "Jew" goes over the socially accepted standard of "NEVER". I could spread shit like this, but it will be labeled anti-semitic propaganda and buried.

One trick I've had some success is replacing the word "Jew" with "Banker". Or some other title for someone in charge of finances.

The right will instantly know what it is, and only a small portion on the left recognize it as a dogwhistle, the majority will rally behind it as an anti-capitalist statement and willingly fight their own Masters.

Anyone from Az needs to be extra careful, Doug Ducey's policy of no testing on top of Trump's total lack of testing is going to be a disaster.

Like Trump, Ducey's appointing corporate shills to important positions in govt. Ever since Citizen's United everything our leaders do is for corporate donors, esp the GOP but the Dems are close.

Everyone's like wtf is Trump talking about warships and narco terrorism.

Well Esper is a top lobbyist for Raytheon, he's holding stock options right now so his job is to make them more profit. Remember this when the topic of Iran comes up.

Alex Azar was a top lobbyist and iirc CEO for Eli Lilly there won't be a solution that's not profitable for them or some other corporate donor.

Right now the greatest threat facing America and the world are corporations.

Bernie was the only person not owned by corporations.

But hey it was funner to laugh at Bernie bros then to save our country from a becoming a corporate sweat shop, enjoy.

Manufacturing started moving to China a hell of a lot earlier than 1995, and this contradicts itself by saying that it was the oligarchs and simultaneously that China played the game well enough to win. Update on the Brownzilian state of Pernambuco and the city of Recife
Chair force Edition

We (((officially))) have 95 confirmed cases and 8 confirmed deaths. The situation here hasn't changed much, Corona-Chan continues to advance through the countryside and along the coastline, richfag neighborhoods are in quarantine mode while poorfags and ruralfags don't give a shit and are out in the streets, their little businesses are all open as usual too.

Recent happenings

An airforce plane from São Paulo came here yesterday delivering PPE and quick testing kits to be distributed here in our state and other neighboring northeastern states. Also, the cops at the civil police station in the richfag neighborhood of Boa Viagem decided to show off how big their brains and their hearts are by donating food and personal hygiene items to poorfags who live in favelas right next to the richfags. The result of their little charity stunt? A massive gathering in front of the station.

Extra stuff

Tweet from a shitskin saying the sister of his mother's friend is a nurse at an emergency hospital here in Recife and she says there's chaos there. She says the media isn't reporting the truth about the coronavirus situation in the city. Honestly, I believe him, this is the second tweet that I read saying shit's seriously happening in our hospitals but the media and the state health department is covering it up. The last video is an ambulance arriving at an hospital with a confirmed blessed Hue in the neighboring city of Olinda, I will greentext the translation.

>Here at the exit, a new confirmed case of coronavirus just got here. They're just taking him out. When the ambulance got here, they screamed at everyone to get away because he was a positive case of coronavirus. Now they're taking him inside, here at the Hospital Tricentenário in Olinda.

Here's what I think happened: They figured out their testing kits are shit so they made new ones, but they had to get rid of the old ones in order to make storage space for the new ones that are somewhat better, so they're just sending them to other countries. And apparently, they're not free, they're being sold.

>Dr Ping Pong, your testing kits don't work, make new ones immediately or you will be sent to the coofentration camps! And they better work this time or else your entire family goes there with you!

<Okay Mr Jinping, please don't murder my family and harvest their organs....There, I made them, they work properly now, but I got nowhere to store them. We made too many of those malfunctioning tests, what are we going to do?

>Hmm, how are we going to get rid of that mountain of shitty tests...Oh, lets just sell them to the gweilos, we're gonna make a quick buck and sabotage their countries while looking like we're good samaritans. China will truly be numbah wuan when everyone else is dead!

on the previous threads there was one anon with viral back saying this has 25kb of payload(transcripts-aids/sars). Also, yea it doesn't attack the immunity system, just it hides until the immune system figures it out. By that time it's all over and the cytokine storm, just like aids kills you. If you survive the storm, your immunity to it is gone because it's now apart of you , which is why reinfection (of it or something else, most likely it) will kill you. Also it mutates .

yuropoor here, although I still have high hopes for a big upset once this is over, I am also doubtful that it is enough to provoke revolution and a day of reckoning. Establishment parties, including the right (like said, part of the establishment) fall in line with government handling of the crisis at every turn. It will take much more to provoke peoples of Europe rising up. Perhaps the coming elections will gain us ground on border controls, immigration and so on.

But unless we get to Ecuador-like situations, it's all going to fall in line. The problem is, it comes fast, but then goes slow, with daily handfuls of dead reported and people made to rally behind 'their' healthcare systems. The longer it takes, the less appetite people seem to have to overturn it all. Italy and Spain maybe exceptions in Europe. Potentially France, if riots really start to break out in earnest. But France is revolutionary in spirit, situations that could provoke huge societal breakdown elsewhere in Europe, just pass along and get beaten down eventually in France.

In the US, I'm afraid nobody again will lift a finger and wait for the other guy to go first. And you're even less organized because of the jew controlling every aspect of your lives.

So if not this, the closest to 1929 you've ever been, then I am pessimistic for what will get Americans to rise up against the jew.

>Frank Plummer

Frank both lived in and took so many trips to worlds that hate Caucus Man, and trained so many chink and shitskin replacements, that he drank himself to death. Part of him could sense that something was wrong for decades, but his Big Brain Smeerts, and his paycheck, well... he just couldn't -live- without those. And as his paycheck declined to uselessness no matter how many funnymoney CAD he was given, and his 2014 liver transplant couldn't hold out, he mysteriously 'died', no mystery credited to his brain stim implant op in 2019-DEC. The must cursory search confirms this entire paragraph.

For over three decades, all grants and funding for infectious disease and especially HIV+AIDS research, was used for insidious corporate welfare + globalism + hyper media lying liar lies. Zika anyone? Too bad, that one didn't really generate much funding, the DDT and pesticides causing the neural tube defects and all. Still, there were just too many pajeet and chink 'replacements' for good old Frank Plummer. And when an actual disease comes around, all those shitskin replacements throughout all those corporate welfare programs and and government middleware not only couldn't have saved Frank, whether he was a 'scientist' or 'doctor', but actively conspired to lie and suppress information -and- insisted they be given credit for being heroes that we all should imitate and praise endlessly as experts and do it they Chinese-Way. Afterall, that way is stupidly profitable. So was the Andalusian Paradise as the muslims feasted on the Iberians.

Do you think Frank ever went past just sensing what was happening for decades, and at least tried to figure out what was really going on? What about his 'wife', Jo Kennelly?

Yuri Bezmenov could have said just about anything to support his chief spy subversion demoralization narratives selling sales to the televisions, especially with Frank Plummer. Of course, Frank got several swift kicks in the bottom his entire life, and especially near the end, and it made no difference.

Tell me more about Frank.

Frank, The Specialist.

Frank, from the Land of Trudeau.

ANOTHER COVERUP!

Federal Agencies Warned Of Ventilator Shortages For Nearly Two Decades

"The Federal allowed small companies who manufactured ventilators were being bought up by big corporations at a time when ventilators were being sold for $3,000 per unit. These corporations then raised the per unit cost to $20,000 and the Federal government did nothing. The government cut back on the number of units being purchased creating a shortage in our strategic inventory. This started in the Bush administration and continued up to the Trump administration. These Presidents were being told that a pandemic was highly unlikely. Not only did these small companies get bought up by large corporations but once the corporations obtained the smaller companies they moved the manufacturing to China and other countries where manufacturing costs were significantly reduced, thus increasing profits beyond belief. I wonder why the news media like CNN, Huffpost, the Daily Beast, Washington Post have not investigated what has happened over the decades and created our medical supply shortages, to interested in attacking Trump and not reporting the truth. All I had to do is a little research, all the information is there."

All over the place there's memorials for the victims. Photos of the victims and touching stories etc. and rightfully so.

Contrast that to the opiate induced white genocide that's been killing on avg 150 to 200 mostly whites every day.. I have yet to see a large news site have photos and a description of victims life or keep track of opiate OD's in any meaningful way.

The reason why is Jews aren't the victims but to a large degree the perpetrators. Showing photos of the victims has a powerful impact on the viewers.

>The CDC estimates that 72,287 people died from overdoses in 2017, an increase of about 10% from the year before.

Can you imagine how many almost died and how many families this is destroying. There's this opiate memorial 52 faces in 52 weeks fr 4 years ago. Scroll thru and you'll get a sense on how young and white this epidemic is and they're not a bunch of low lifes. They usually get hooked by visiting the dr or dentist for some procedure.

This is one area that Trump can be congratulated on. No one else touched this. It all comes out now, and the usual suspects cluck their tongues as if they give a crap. But there was nothing until Trump. Bummer admin (neocon) legalized oxycontin for kids in 2015.

It;s like you have to be a crook to be in the Trump admin.

Tom Price

On September 29, 2017, he resigned as head of HHS following criticism of his use of private charters and military aircraft for travel.[2] In July 2018, the HHS inspector general urged the HHS to recoup at least $341,000 from Price for wasteful expenditures

Brenda Fitzgerald

>he Washington Post described her tenure as CDC Director as "low-profile", noting that she has made very few public statements.[16] She has furthermore on at least three occasions sent her deputies to testify in congressional hearings about the opioid epidemic while the agency heads of other agencies testified themselves.[16]

>By December 2017 and after five months in office, Fitzgerald had yet to divest her financial holdings that posed conflicts of interest in her position at the CDC.[16] Democratic Senator Patty Murray raised questions as to Fitzgerald's ability to lead the CDC's anti-opioid programs given her financial stake in prescription drug monitoring programs.[16]

>In January 2018, Politico reported that Fitzgerald had bought shares in the Japan Tobacco company one month after assuming office as Director of the CDC.

[17] The investment raised ethical concerns given the CDC's mission to reduce tobacco use, which is the leading cause of preventable disease in the United States.[17] She sold the stocks a few months later.[17] One day after Politico's story broke, Fitzgerald resigned as Director of the CDC on January 31, 2018.[1] Kelly Ann Conway is the current opiate czar wtf.

I have a feeling something very big is happening in the backgrounds of all this hysteria. Could they have released a bioweapon as a distraction to usher in their "New World Order" Zionist global takeover? Maybe this was the stage ground for a planned WWIII? We all know the results of WWII, how do you think it would be any better? Think outside the box anons.... and all the more reason to be prepped!

It's just like war. Multiple aims in the business plan are taken care of at one time. Many questions right now. There seems to be a military angle. There is much good that comes out of it. Families taking an interest in their childrens' education again, which is necessary as states start mandating corporate poison injections to attend brainwashing camp. But this is also a tax on intelligence. Stupid people get everything for free as always. The deevolution of humanity continues. Some big thing will have changed when we are all free again. What will it be? Weather? 5G? I've not heard a solution that fully holds together. If only there were a virus which wiped out stupid scum. But unfortunately not.

Those don't sound very good or pleasant to me lol. I'd much prefer if we, you know, get rid of the (((central banks))) and become more self-sufficient and less reliant on a corrupt centralized system? At least that is what I intend to do (am in the process of doing now). If SHTF I won't be coming back to the old style system, I'll be farming and raiding livestock off-grid on some rural land. Update from Australia

NSW Police Commissioner Mick Fuller has revealed the state's tough coronavirus enforcement laws are set to expire in 90 days, and that he will not seek to extend them. Health authorities have confirmed 116 new coronavirus infections in NSW, bringing the state's total to 2,298

The state's tough social-distancing restrictions will be lifted on June 30. Until then, people can face on-the-spot fines of $1,000 for breaking social-distancing laws. The news comes as Premier Gladys Berejiklian praised people for helping flatten the COVID-19 curve in Australia's worst-affected state. There has been 116 new coronavirus infections in NSW in the 24 hours to 8:00pm yesterday, bringing the state's total to 2,298. Commissioner Fuller said the new powers which permit police to fine people for disobeying isolation orders had an end date.

"When is the turn-off period for these health orders? It is 90 days," he said.

"I certainly won't be seeking an extension, people will have gotten the message by then, hopefully."

The maximum penalty that can be given by a court is $11,000 and six months in jail. The only lawful reasons to leave the house are to work, study, to shop for food or other essential items, access medical care or exercise alone or with one other person. Beyond this, the NSW Government has provided several reasons which would "excuse" someone for being outside which includes fleeing an unsafe home or donating blood. The state's coronavirus death toll remains at 10.

"The acceleration of cases in New South Wales isn't growing, which is a good thing," Ms Berejiklian said.

"So, we know that we're having some level of success in reducing the spread."

Australia's coronavirus "lockdown" is less strict than other countries'.

In Lombardy, the worst-affected Italian province, all outdoor physical activity is banned, while in Wuhan, the Chinese city where the virus originated, only one person from each household was permitted to go outside every two days at the height of the crisis. Commissioner Fuller said three fines were issued in the past 24 hours and he was personally reviewing every ticket and if it appeared unreasonable, it would be withdrawn immediately. In response to concerns about the ability to exercise in public, he said police were committed to taking a "sensible approach".

"I get it, and we want people to be able to stay fit and physically and psychologically healthy," he said.

"But, of course, if I said it's ok to sit on a park bench, then everyone is going to go to the park. And we're going to end up back where we started."

Yesterday a 39-year-old man was fined for washing windscreens at a set of traffic lights and a 59-year-old man was fined for drinking in a park with three other friends and refusing to leave. Commissioner Fuller also revealed an external team of infection specialists employed by Australian Border Force would soon board the eight cruise ships sitting off the NSW coast. He said the experts would provide an independent health assessment of the 8,500 crew members on the ships.

"If the crew are fit and healthy then I have no hesitation asking Mr Dutton and Border Force to enforce the orders to leave our waters," he said.

The Department of Home Affairs has ordered all cruise ships to leave Australian waters but Commissioner Fuller said that decision was being appealed.

Rothschild Warns Of Financial Hit From Coronavirus Outbreak

Historic banking firm Rothschild, whose alumni include French President Emmanuel Macron, has warned that the global Covid-19 crisis will impact the bank's financial results due to the effect on global business and markets.

"Although there is still considerable uncertainty around how this will develop and, hence, the degree to which this will impact our 2020 financial results, it is clear that the effect will be materially detrimental compared to 2019,"

Rothschild said in a statement on Tuesday.

Rothschild added that it was still planning to pay out a dividend of €0.85 ($0.93) per share.

Founded in the 18th century by Mayer Amschel Rothschild, the banking dynasty has worked on some of history's biggest deals, including helping to finance Britain's war with Napoleonic France.

WOW. THIS WAS A DEMOCRAT-SPONSORED BILL TRUMP SIGNED!

CARES Act Does NOT Provide Illegals With Fiscal Aid?

President Donald Trump was asked by a reporter on Wednesday about "undocumented" immigrants not getting a stimulus check from the government as part of the coronavirus economic rescue package.

"Well, you know, you are saying undocumented, meaning they came in illegally,"

Trump said. "A lot of people would say that we have a lot of citizens right now that won't be working, so what are you going to do?"

Trump said he felt bad about the situation for illegal immigrants during a tough economic period.

"It's a very sad question, I must be honest with you, but they came in illegally and we have a lot of people that are citizens in our country that won't be able to have jobs," Trump said.

The president said he hoped that the economy would grow back quickly after the virus was defeated.

"Its a really sad situation and it's something we're working on," he said.

Italy Threatening To Erupt Into Riots As Nationwide Lockdown Takes Economic Toll
Italy's rate of coronavirus infections has finally slowed, but the national lockdown that helped slow the spread of the disease is now threatening to take its own toll as Italy's poorer regions begin to push back against government regulations keeping them from working.

The "depressed south" is "turning into a powderkeg," according to Bloomberg world news, and the Italian government is now prepared to take efforts to control the possible spread of violence.

"Police have been deployed on the streets of Sicily's capital, Palermo, amid reports gangs are using social media to plot attacks on stores," the outlet reported Tuesday. "A bankrupt ferry company halted service to the island, including vital supplies of food and medicines. As the state creaks under the strain of the coronavirus pandemic, officials worry the mafia may be preparing to step in."

"Preventing unrest in the so-called Mezzogiorno, the underdeveloped southern region that's long lagged behind the wealthy north, has become the government's top priority," Bloomberg added.

Italy is now on its fourth week of national lockdown, though some regions – like heavily affected Lombardy – have been under strict orders to shelter in place since late February, when the coronavirus first began to take hold. Italy has had more than 100,000 confirmed cases of coronavirus and around 11,000 deaths, but the rates have been steadily declining for nearly a week. In the last three days, Italy has seen a marked decline in infections, leading some to believe the end is finally near for the coronavirus-ravaged country.

The government does plan, however, to keep the lockdown order in place for at least two more weeks, extending the national shelter in place policy until Easter.

Soros-Funded Progressive Outlet Claims Virus Is Time To 'Abolish The Family' And Abolish Home Ownership

((SOROS)))

Lefties on George Soros's payroll know that no good crisis should go to waste and are using the coronavirus pandemic as an excuse to peddle their communist garbage, like the idea that this crisis should remind society of its imperative to "abolish the family" and the "private household." Wow, what a wonderful thought.

On March 24, progressive outlet "openDemocracy" - funded in part by George Soros-founded and chaired non-profit group "Open Society Foundations" - mused that social distancing and quarantine during the Chinese virus pandemic may have revealed the limitations of the private, single-family household. Perhaps now there is a chance we can do away with this scourge.

The leftist trash asked readers to reconsider how healthy it really is to value a "zone defined by the power asymmetries of housework (reproductive labor being so gendered), of renting and mortgage debt, land and deed ownership, of patriarchal parenting and (often) the institution of marriage."

Dad works, while Mom focuses on kids? Evil. (Not that those roles are as fixed today as this caricature needs them to be.) The housing market and all the things that go into owning a home are dastardly of course. The father as the traditional head of the family is sickening, and marriage? Heterosexual marriage? Absolutely vile. Yes, this blog is preaching to the choir.

Beyond espousing beliefs antithetical to the history and development of western society, like any good commie rag would, "openDemocracy" argued that the household is a place of pain and torture for minority groups.

The piece claimed, "Queer and feminized people, especially very old and very young ones, are definitionally not safe there: their flourishing in the capitalist home is the exception, not the rule." Right, it's a rule that nice, suburban families evict homosexuals during times of crises. Castro was a big supporter of the gays.

It also claimed, "standard homes are where, after all, everyone secretly knows the majority of earthly violence goes down: the W.H.O. calls domestic violence 'the most widespread, but among the least reported human rights abuses.'"

And then what about all the folks that don't have a family or a traditional home to go to? Yes, we must redistribute and encourage communal living spaces so that everyone has a bad time.

So all in all, capitalist pigs, "the private family qua mode of social reproduction still, frankly, sucks. It genders, nationalizes and races us. It norms us for productive work. It makes us believe we are 'individuals.'"

Freedom. What a disgusting notion.

https://learninggnm.com/SBS/documents/lungs.html#Bronchial_Mucosa_CA

EDUCATE YOURSELF

VIRUS EPIDEMIC? more like pneumonia.

Gut bacteria prevent sickness from the "skin inside", makes sense there's also bacteria in the lungs, namely pneumococcus (good bacteria) which is there to protect us from air-borne threats.

But what if this threat is the mindset that "the air is fucked" or "the air is dirty" it gets in the mind, this is called Emergent Behavior which is very much like Menstrual Synchrony - how can something be separate synchronize?

This is where distancing comes in, but distancing also promotes the mindset. Suddenly people are dying due to cellular loss caused by rapid production of antibodies, lymph nodes exhausted, bacteria loss causing diarrhea due to gut imbalance, and there's a lot of pneumococcus build up in the lungs, then why is it "Viral infection" if the cause of death is cell loss and bacterial build up? What was it trying to fix in the lungs? Bacterias are used by the body for several functions undocumented by mainstream med and it's awesome.

Pancreas denial?

ERROR

The body thinks it needs to "clean the lungs to death because something bad is airborne and dangerous" and the result? Excessive production of good bacteria, rapid cell division, fatigue due to cell loss and gut bacteria loss.

The Chinese are using voodoo treatments and they are finally admitting animals catch the disease. Information we pick up on is usually a month ahead of them admitting it, after a month of discredit.

It is all about the 'mind control' anon. Now that numbers on /pnd/ are down it becomes much more noticeable to everyone who the real shills are and who is shitting up the board with 'social influencing'.

It is interesting to note that one of the biggest things that is shill AGAINST here on /pnd/ is imagination or thinking non-CCP approved thoughts. Also, your own personal opinion is a target for elimination (apparently that is 'dangerous' somehow to the faggots who want everyone in lockstep; FUCK 'EM THOUGH). Part of 'globalization' is that there is no independent thinking ABOUT ANYTHING. That is why there is 'no more room' on the planet for White/Europeans.

I was wondering what happened in this situation in 2008 it took about three weeks of my calling to get a hold of someone to file a claim with. What do you do now if you need to file? Can you show up somewhere or do you just have to suck it until you can get through? Since this round of 'lay offs' is much worse than 2008 I am sure it will take longer than 3 weeks to get through AND then you have to wait the additional 2 weeks + to receive a check...so 5 weeks without pay? Or something like that. I sincerely hope that people stop paying car payments and rent in that time period because that is a long wait without money.

Latin America didn't get any flu shoots to my knowledge and people are still dying, not gonna argue with hospital stay weakening your health because it's true for reasons to numerous to list it's not like i think the merican government would be incapable doing something like that, but i need more data if i'm going to link flu shoots with corona chan vulnerability it could be that people who got flu shoots were already vulnerable to disease to begin with and they just coofed to death as soon as they were blessed, while more resistant people who had no need for flu shoots are better at fighting the infection

Either the virus is fake like some think and this is a power grab, or the virus is real and this is a power grab. No matter what the outcome is it's a power grab, how do we fight against this? You try and reason with any alarmed/alerted normie and they'll red flag you so fast your head will spin. Trying to reason with somebody that an invisible disease doesn't exist is like the same argument you have with trying to prove/disprove that god exists. Its literally the perfect solution for them to build their digital identity bullshit or whatever chipping process they intend to do to their cattle. The only way I see the race surviving is by some of us making sacrifices, but that would mean the greater stock is the one on the front lines. It's such a confusing time period. I go from some days full of excitement that the world may finally burn, it's like I'm laughing before the evil plan kicks off- and then some days I'm so demoralized I think I have no other choice but to submit, get chipped, and TRY to raise my kids the way I want. But I fucking know this won't happen, submission ends in death and humiliation. I'd rather everyone think I was some crazy school shooter who an hero'd by cops than to see my sons and daughters taken from me, raped and mentally abused by a corrupt system over 200 years old. Realistically, objectively, empirically, I don't see a way out of this if ZOG is going full 1984 on us. I understand that (((they're))) outnumbered, but (((they're))) also more technologically advanced and more organized than any of us. Do any of you have a network like the US Feds and states do? Do any of us have the resources to actually put out the fire or are we just pissing in the wind? I'm sick of watching you faggots debate on what the cause is instead of focusing on how were supposed to handle the effects. Who gives a fuck if this virus is fake or not lets focus on the outcomes of it. How do we stop the digital ID shit? I've been showing my power level, I don't even care anymore. I want people to know I'm distrustful of the jewish government, I want them to know I think miscegenation is wrong. Normalfags can wake up they just need someone who's not a fucking sperg to show them how to be. At least these are my thoughts, I think they'll be helpful to the discourse here. I could provide Corona links and try to contribute but I'm not even sure if that's what Corona General is about right now. Seems like everyone thinks its fake now and that's sort of where the debate rests. The only thing I think everyone here can agree on is that SOMETHING is going to happen/is happening.

I think you're underestimating the level of organization required to make a fake pandemic, especially among hostile countries or third world shitholes with incompetent leadership. If this were fake the leaks would be so blatant it would be far more than twitter posts. Plus there are all those phone videos from China and Ecuador showing something's definitely happening

You'd have to look back through the threads to find the paper. There really is no 'American government' anymore outside of the idea that still floats through the minds of Western Europeans. Nation states were all overthrown by Oligarchs and Kleptocratic kikes for a couple thousand years now. But as long as the idea remains in the mind of my people and my people are alive, the freedom of conscience and the idea of independence remains. Anywhooooo...the flu shot itself lowers your ability to fight off infection (as does any sort of 'vaccine' due to its nature). Once your immune system is lowered then you can't fight off illness.

I hope you are not waiting for a definitive study that will prove this once and for all. The paper made the link but if you can't figure out what is happening by observation you will wait A LONG FUCKING TIME for big pharma to admit that what they want to do, poison and genetically control your life with 'vaccines' was actually a 'bad idea'...

When push comes to shove there are going to be two kinds of people: 1) those who submit and live to regret doing so or 2) those who do not, are willing to fight back if necessary and risk honorable death.

Every individual should think it out and decide which person they will be.

It has crossed my mind MANY TIMES that you would need a well dispersed population that was global to 'fake a pandemic' like the bug population. You saw the video of that hideous fucking bug person buying up all the masks on her way to vacation with her mongrelized family, right? She was busy fucking over her own child and she didn't care in the slightest...just making sure that there is no PPE for regular Americans...know what I mean...but as long as these FOREIGNERS and MONGRELS exist in our nation (and this includes people like the orange jew) we cannot fight off the menace.

The only way to survive and thrive again is to exterminate the subhuman trash that infest our nation. I can't even recognize 'government officials' anymore because they are all dressed up like fucking Justin Trudeau in their native GLOBALIST fucking costumes. And the US MILITARY is TOTALLY COMPROMISED WITH NIGGERS AND SPICS AND JEWS so expect NOTHING from them. Bunch of effeminate TRAITOROUS trash that can't wait to see our nation fall is all that is left of the US military.

>how do we stop it?

Crash the system. Stop participating. You act like there is nothing you can do when even the most peaceful of actions can lead to a world changing revolution. You are the largest purchasing power on the planet...USE WHAT GOD GAVE YOU (your industrious nature) to destroy the enemy by hitting them where it hurts. You are the producer that the entire planet 'feeds off', learn to fight a different way using your purchasing power to make and break people.

TURN YOUR BACK ON THEM AND THEIR IDEAS...or openly begin fighting them. They have convinced you all that you need to let this happen and that is really THEIR ONLY WEAPON AGAINST YOU...just their force of will trying to bend you to their 'ideas' of the way things should go...AKA MIND CONTROL...just reject it, say no. That is all it takes...completely reject anything they offer.

I honestly believe if I'm alive once then chances are I'll be alive again. I'm just pretty partial to this body, I got dealt a pretty good hand genetics wise and my ancestry goes back to the 12th century. I've got stuff to lose if I just opt out for an honorable death. And would life even be worth living from that point (even with family)? My suggestion would be to move away from the major cities if you can, go rural and try making a living if you can. '''Target, Walmart, Costco Ordered To Stop In-person Sales Of Nonessential Items in Vermont'''

Big box retailers like Target, Walmart and Costco are being ordered to stop in-person sales of nonessential items in some areas.

Vermont Gov. Phil Scott added this to his original executive order amid the coronavirus pandemic.

Such nonessential items, as detailed by the state, include things like beauty supplies, arts and crafts, clothes, electronics and more.

Rather, according to The Agency of Commerce and Community Development, these stores are being asked to stick to items like food, pharmacy and beverages.

As of Tuesday, 32 states and the District of Columbia had implemented some form of stay-at-home order to enforce social distancing and help slow the spread of the coronavirus.

Tennessee is under a "Safer at Home" order which encourages, but does not mandate, people to stay home.

I don't think that people are not 'getting sick' I think they are getting sick with something that is not The Red Death. I think they are having biological weaponry (to be used against them by the bug people at some future specified date) installed in their genetics.

SO YOU ARE GETTING SOMETHING WHEN YOU CATCH IT, JUST NOT WHAT THEY ARE TELLING YOU

There is no other explanation for them trying to ensure that EVERYONE gets it. It is most likely a gene drive that they will use to control your children and you later in life.

The bugs basically PROVED that they had no such (see pic) ETHICAL MORATORIUM when they made the HIV edited twins. The only way to do that was to insert a cas-9 drive in them that selected all future generations to be HIV immune. So they just told the ETHICAL part of the world to FUCK OFF and did whatever they felt like doing.

YES IT IS A BIOLOGICAL WEAPON; WE ARE IN A BIOLOGICAL WAR

It is just not the war that you all THINK you are in.

FDA Aggressively Attacking Colloidal Silver Products To Clear Way for Big Pharma ID 2020 Vaccine

Companies that sell colloidal silver, which could provide protection against infection with the Wuhan coronavirus (COVID-19), now face possible reprimand from the United States Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for selling "fraudulent products."

The federal agency, which only considers pharmaceuticals to possess any medical benefits, says it recently issued warning letters to multiple firms instructing them to stop suggesting that colloidal silver can in any way help prevent, treat, mitigate, diagnose or cure the Wuhan coronavirus (COVID-19).

Instead of focusing on FDA-approved pharmaceuticals, which maim and kill hundreds of thousands of Americans every year, the FDA has instead indicated that it will be "actively monitoring" companies that sell colloidal silver to ensure that they're not trying to help people avoid infection using this natural alternative.

"The FDA is exercising its authority to protect consumers from firms selling unapproved products and making false or misleading claims, including, by pursuing warning letters, seizures, or injunctions against products and firms or individuals that violate the law," the agency further indicated in an announcement on its "Health Fraud Scams" website.

In order to make way for an eventual Wuhan coronavirus (COVID-19) vaccine, the FDA is trying to clear out natural things like colloidal silver, vitamin C, zinc, and quinone that threaten to expose the inevitable jab "solution" as unnecessary, and thus fraudulent.

The colloidal silver companies targeted by the FDA as part of its crackdown include:

- JRB Enterprise Group Inc. DBA Anti-Aging Bed
- Halosense Inc.
- Bioactive C60/FullerLifeC60 LLC
- Corona-cure.com
- Carahealth
- Xephyr LLC dba N-ergetics
- GuruNanda, LLC
- Quinessence Aromatherapy Ltd
- Vivify Holistic Clinic
- Colloidal Vitality LLC
- The Jim Baker Show
- Herbal Amy Inc.

Say what it might about colloidal silver, but the FDA is just plain wrong when it comes to completely discounting it as "fraudulent." While we can't say for sure that colloidal silver is a certifiable cure for the Wuhan coronavirus (COVID-19), it remains a scientific fact that silver ions are powerfully antiviral: <https://filmdaily.co/health/is-colloidal-silver-a-cure-for-coronavirus/>

Long before pharmaceutical drugs even existed, silver was commonly used to kill harmful microbes, whether they be bacteria or viruses. Research into colloidal silver has found that it's capable of killing more than 650 known pathogens, including the smallpox virus and even HIV (human immunodeficiency virus). Colloidal silver is also capable of attaching to the outer protein shells of viruses and foiling their attempts at attaching to host cells, effectively preventing infection.

"Colloidal silver may be a lifeline or just a gimmick - only time will tell," reports Film Daily. "Clearly there is a lot of positive information about colloidal silver which, in the absence of a mainstream solution, is not something to be dismissed outright."

This makes sense, your post was much needed because its refreshed my perspective.

>because /ourgirl/ has grown to the point where it's impossible to put a lid on her

This is what I'm hoping for. I don't know enough about virology to dispute a shill who's trying to say viruses don't even exist. It's like they use fake rabbit holes as an attempt to get you to dive out of this happening into the next but I'm holding on to Corona as "the one". And I'll admit the fake rabbit holes work because thats the mindset of some here. You get intrigued by something believably far fetched and you start reading into it and then its not long until you're the shill and you don't even know it. Psy Ops are wild, pic related. Anyways, to sum up my response to your post- thank you, this was well needed and all of your advice is worth its weight in gold. Saving it because its actually very useful plus I might forget some of it or need a refreshing white pill. The part about bitter red pills and candy will stick with me. I'm constantly trying to red pill the guys at work but they all think its some other "boogeyman" and how you highlighted that here fits perfectly. Its like when electricity catches to something, everythings "connected". I get it, I've got to use language they understand. I can't try to make someone see something the way I do by making the same equation, everyones got a specific equation that unlocks the combination to their soul. Meaning that there is a right sentence to convince somebody about the final solution to the JQ. If I've got any of that wrong feel free to correct me.

Your passion and enthusiasm are clear, but your direction is not. I'm a little confused, you're saying that I should strive to be greater? That's what I think of when I think about breaking a glass ceiling. Maybe I'm just not familiar enough with the analogy. >Colloidal silver is also capable of attaching to the outer protein shells of viruses and foiling their attempts at attaching to host cells, effectively preventing infection.

From what I know about the virus from the little reading I've done, is that it's got protein spikes to break open the membrane of the cell and then another protein arm to sort of insert into the nucleus and basically ride the cell through your body. It replicates and pretty soon all your cells are meshed with virus cells. Its an attack on a biological scale. I've been trying to tell people about event 201, the id2020 program and the fact the UN has signed and agreed to the digital currency/identity thing to be done by 2030. This anon is pretty much right, corona is not a scam (You'd need tens of millions of people lying to keep the scam on, it's beyond anybody's capability)

As for the taking away civil rights, let's take a look at Hungary

>muh washington post and jew york times

They will take any chance to take a bite at authoritarian tendencies, this time they didn't need to make shit up because Orban gave them precisely what they wanted, if you want confirmation on what happened there, ask hungaryan anons or chose your source of poison.

This MAGA tier meme is below this place but I still saw people defending him here, Orban is fucking gyppo effectively running banana republic, shitting on euroretards and fucking claiming to be right wing when it suits his agenda, while doing it not for any ideology but to benefit himself and his surroundings. /ourboys/ in Hungary are in Jobbik, which also went downhill lately but it's the best thing we got so far.

Like in Rome, Hungary has an emergency dictatorship law. Given good reason, in this case corona, Orban as prime minister received full control for infinite time. It is possible for parliament to revoke it, but Orban's party has over 2/3 of seats and there will be no new elections unless Orban wants them to happen (Which he won't because he got majority in parliament and all of his boys get a nice share of all mafia profits so they won't do shit against Orban)

So what has he done so far with his new found powers ?

According to hunfriend

-He suspended changing gender

<https://www.gaystarnews.com/article/hungary-exploits-emergency-powers-to-ban-trans-people-from-legally-changing-gender/>

-Hungary can now kick out foreigners as they please

-Budapest's biggest park will be cut down some of most valuable land in the town will be now in hands of Orban's buddies.

-Orban tried to cancel all mayors and replace them with his boys, it won't come to power

<https://www.bloomberg.com/news/articles/2020-04-01/empowered-orban-seeks-to-strip-mayors-of-autonomy-in-virus-fight> >citing Gergely Gulyas, the minister in charge of Orban's office.

Gergely Gulyas is like Irishman named Patty Tater

Orban can do whatever the fuck he wants to, people can't protest him because it's illegal to gather because of corona. Even if they were pissed enough to break the law, what are you fucking insane, you wanna go into mass public gathering in time of pandemics?

All in all, orban is just a gypsy retard, but his scheme shows quite nicely how easy it is to take over in age of corona chan.

Crust hand-anon here- in regarrds to pillz.

Pepto Bismol,

Collagen, both Powder & pill

Chinchoa 30c (Couldn't get the drug you make from this, so I settled for these little pill things that are smaller than Nerds)

Zinc MAX triple Zinc with Copper and Vitamen C

Odurless Garlic tablets 100mg

LEcithin Capsules 1200mg

Selenium

Super Garlic High strength 6000mg 365 tablets garlic pills (non odourless)

More L-Arginine Capsules 100x750mg

Vitamen C tablets

Too man Vitamen Tablets to count- I think B, D3- and A are the notable ones

I have something coming from an online pharmacy- will take some time though- will substitute for red onions, and have bought dried elder berries.

As for my Condition- still taking forever to digest my shit, Thyroid occassionally pulsates up, and my breathing isn't making me coof- but I still clearly lack the vigor it once had- not too sure if it's gotten worse or remained in the last two days.

Peeling of fingers has stopped?/notable scarring gone, it did make it's way to my left hand, but not much more to say there. Think mum & dad have the coof though, but it's infrequent, can't tell if dad's smoker's cough and the other filth that churns within him are causing complications, but being near him is no different than stomaching a plaguelord of nurgle face-face.

even when smallpox and polio were allegedly eradicated at a global scale, the world was not able to produce enough vaccines for every single human on earth, they fought both diseases by vaccinating everyone around the perimeter of a confirmed infection case.

I'm no biologist so i don't know how vaccines are made, but i'm willing to bet it's far easier and cheaper to produce a vaccine than any kind of tracking microchip, nano machine or gene drive meme (((they))) may want to inject the whole world with.

No matter how much (((they))) want it, (((they))) simply will not be able to inject a spyware syringe in every single human alive, the resources to pull something like that off simply do not exist, and what little resources there may have been to try, were most certainly crippled by supply lines being cut off and wageslaves not earning shekkels to consoom or pay taxes.

At best or worst depending on how you see it, (((they'll))) inject a few VIPs to keep them in line with out the need of blackmail pedo ritual sacrifices that can be exposed by stuff like Eipstein's black book or Pizzagate tier shitstorms. There's no need to brand each and every slave when you can just brand the hand that wields the whip

That's not to say (((they))) won't try to sell chipping to their good goyim as the next trendy bandwagon to jump into, but (((they'll))) need way more power and resources than (((they))) currently have if they want to make sure every single human on earth gets branded

They can try to scare every single normalfag into getting the kung flu shoot, but even discounting the amount of conspyranoid preppers, redpilled anons and antivaccesrs in the world, demand will massively outweigh supply

Coronian Message for this thread

Divine Victory has been achieved but the war is far from over, never let your guard down until the pure new world has been built.

Faith has overpowered everything and will continue to do so, remain steadfast in your beliefs and don't let go of your hopes!

Worry not about the unbelievers, blasphemers, heretics, shills, nothingburgerfags and hoaxniggers, for they have already been taken care of. In due time, they will all fall down, to never rise up again. Stay safe, good luck in the global collapse and enjoy the thread.

Corona-Chan and her cult loves all of you!

My memory has become a jumbled mess since mid February. Nothing to do with the quarantine, I have been living the lockdown lifestyle for years now, it's just mental exhaustion. I regret nothing. I will maintain this pace until Corona-Chan takes me away.

If the virus were that contagious, the exponential growth would be high in America and would have outstripped China months ago. It's true that China does not have the tech, which is why they stole it. Inadequate training, facilities and general incompetence caused it to get out into China and the Chinese then began to spread it around when it was laying latent in the population.

Suggesting that the breakout's origin is anywhere other than China is just deflecting blame from the CCP and I would say that there are Chinese agents trying to feed Langan tainted info.

Even if various governments do nothing, the normalfags are becoming livid at groups (like Muslims) which breed the disease en masse and Chinese everywhere are now reviled and seen as vectors for contagion too. This will mean decades of racial division that the Jews will not be able to cover up with some after school special horseshit they will try and crank out at the tail end of all this.

>White House press briefing

One reporter managed to ask an actual question. Why would businesses take the SBA loans instead of letting employees go and having them collect unemployment? (Their unemployment insurance premiums would change, but they wouldn't need to take a loan to pay employees to do nothing.) No real answer given, but the forgivable nature of the loan means it's probably okay. Also re the loans, banks complained and demanded higher interest on the short-term government guaranteed loans, and the administration caved to the banks.

Trump told reporters to remember the letters c o v i d, you'll be hearing them a lot in the future. Fuck, I wish I sold more stocks today, now the weekend is going to be a bloodbath.

Navy removes aircraft carrier captain who raised alarm about coronavirus response

> The Navy removed the captain of an aircraft carrier crippled by the coronavirus on Thursday, two days after a blunt letter that the officer wrote warning the service to get sailors off the vessel more quickly created a furor.

> Navy Capt. Brett Crozier, the commanding officer of the USS Theodore Roosevelt, was relieved of command at the direction of acting Navy secretary Thomas Modly.

> The Navy had become increasingly convinced that Crozier was involved in leaking the letter to the media to force the service to address his concerns, a defense official said, speaking on the condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the issue.

> Modly said at the Pentagon that Crozier showed "poor judgment" by sending the letter by email to a group of 20 or 30 people. He did not directly accuse Crozier of leaking his message, first reported by the San Francisco Chronicle, but noted that it appeared in Crozier's hometown newspaper.

> "I could reach no other conclusion than that Capt. Crozier had allowed the complexity of his challenge with the covid breakout on his ship to overwhelm his ability to act professionally, when acting professionally was what was needed most at the time," Modly said. "We do and we should expect more from the commanding officers of our aircraft carriers."

> Modly added a few minutes later that he did not mean to insinuate that he knew Crozier leaked the letter and believed the captain "did what he thought was in the best interest of the safety and the well-being of his crew."

> But Modly said the letter undermined more senior Navy leaders and could have emboldened adversaries to strike in the region.

> "It creates a panic, and it creates the perception that the Navy is not on the job, the government's not on the job, and it's just not true," Modly said.

> The decision, first reported by Reuters, comes one day after Modly said that there was nothing wrong with Crozier writing the letter but that leaking it to the media "would be something that would violate the principles of good order and discipline."

> "How it got out into the media I don't know," Modly said. "I don't think anyone would ever know."

What is everyone's take on the trend on twitter #FilmYourHospital going around? Lots of people going to hospitals that are empty. I'm really starting to doubt a lot of this virus shit being as bad as (((they))) say it is.

I said this like a week ago. I had been saying people need to go down to the hospitals and start filming so we can see truthfully how bad it is. I haven't seen the crazy mess that happened in Wuhan happening here. Pinch test, we all know it is easy to get the goyim to believe in an invisible threat. Why is this different? Personally, I believe the virus is real and a problem. But, I think the reaction at least in the US and parts of the west is an overreaction. I think it is mostly politically motivated. The problem is, we really just don't know and that is deliberate. (((They))) want us confused.

Even some of the chink vids didn't indicate anything. A city the size of Wuhan has some 500 deaths per day. A hospital morgue with dozens of bodies, or a delivery of a thousand urns, really doesn't mean much. They caught the yellow devil who filmed a hospital morgue and I guess made him disappear.

What the fuck are we supposed to do? This place is a garbage heap. The sense of despair is at an all time high: Whites are on opioids on a scale not seen since the opium wars, the suicide rate is at an all time high. The younger generation through a mix of lack of opportunity and lack of purpose in this huge nonsense society is in a dire economic situation with barely enough money to make it at the end of every month. Billionaire capitalists are thoroughly in control of the legal system and the press, shaping society in a way that allows them to loot every cent out of this decadent empire before they move on to their next prey. If you try to work in a low skilled work you will quickly realize that spanish speakers dominate the network and you will either never have the opportunity to get in or will be discriminated heavily. If you HAPAS ARE SUPERIOR TO WHITES try to go to college to get ahead you will have to debase yourself nodding along to anti-white propaganda to get a tech degree, only to be rejected by an Indian interviewer for not being knowledgeable enough so he can bring in his cousin Rajeet who has a fake degree from Mumbai university. And in this entire situation Americans get ideas implanted into their head about white privilege, as if the entire country is a good old boys club that works to their benefit. While they look outside and see their formerly nice middle class white community get filled up with strung out spics, negros, and Indians, this shithole that exploits their labor, breaks their unions, takes their power over their government, and ultimately displaces them in their own homeland tells them that it is actually a machine for THEIR benefit and if you say anything to the contrary you get tracked by the SPLC or the ADL or antifa and are removed from society.

Don't even get me started on the fucking kikes. How can you live a life of purpose and honor in this place and not just debase yourself for money so you don't starve? What does it mean mean to be American now?

Brownzilian ministry of health discovers that a 70 YO woman who died on 23rd of January in the state of Minas Gerais was blessed.

Why do consider this urgent, you may ask? It was the fucking chinks returning from LNY, they brought Corona-Chan to Minas Gerais and most likely São Paulo too. I was fucking right.

Mostly true, but...

>Billionaire capitalists are thoroughly in control of the legal system and the press, shaping society in a way that allows them to loot every cent out of this decadent empire before they move on to their next prey.

I'd refer to them as a privileged class at this point, an oligarchy and while they claim to be capitalists if you do your homework almost all of the wealthiest corporations with the biggest market shares are heavily subsidized by governments and propped up by central banks. They don't compete in a capitalist system at all, like we plebs have to. They are heavily subsidized and receive bailouts all the time. So why would be even call them capitalists? They're monopolists who buy up politicians and are pretty much depend on central banking fraud in order to stay afloat, and they like it that way because they are never forced to compete like the rest of us!

Unfortunately I know a couple of relatives who live in a city, whom I do care about but I've warned them to move away from those cess pits long ago. Oh well. It's long overdue, let the purges and great burning begin. If I lose a few loved ones, fuck it, the country is still better off without those leftist corrupt shitholes. In addition, there are reports across the nation of nurses and other staff being furloughed due to lack of activity at hospitals right now. I know we all love our girl corona-chan but some things certainly are not adding up. Here is what we know is true. The stimulus gives the states money to set up national guard hospitals. Per the stimulus they get money per coronavirus cases. There is a financial incentive to have more reported cases. Think about that.

$100 Billion Treasury Exodus and Fed's New Repo Measures

>(Bloomberg) - The Federal Reserve is trying to calltime on a fire sale of Treasuries by foreign governments and central banks.

>Foreign official holders of Treasuries dumped more than $100 billion in the three weeks to March 25, on course for the biggest monthly drop on record, according to weekly Fed custody data that captures much of the pandemic-fueled turmoil.

>Countries reliant on oil exports and smaller Asian economies have been selling U.S. debt, and central banks have been primarily offloading older, less-liquid Treasuries, according to traders and market makers familiar with the transactions.

>The Fed on Tuesday rolled out its latest effort to restore functioning in markets, on top of moves to ramp up debt purchases and backstop several sectors. It introduced a temporary repurchase agreement facility that let other central banks swap Treasuries for dollars.

>"The fall in custody holdings is a clear signal that foreign central banks - which have a lot of Treasury holdings - have been selling them to source dollars," said Subadra Rajappa, head of U.S. rates strategy at Societe Generale. "They need access to dollars as a lot of their payments are in dollars and that has driven them to sell Treasuries."

>The Fed stopped short of saying it wanted to prevent a snowball effect from the selling, but said the new program will provide "an alternative temporary source of U.S. dollars other than sales of securities in the open market."

>As fear swept through markets last month and fueled unprecedented volatility, liquidity - the ability to trade without causing significant price moves - deteriorated in Treasuries to its worst since the 2008 financial crisis. At the same time, the greenback surged as investors sought refuge in the world's primary reserve currency.

>The Bloomberg Dollar Spot Index rose 3.1% in March, the most since 2016.

>Liquidity Buffer

>Some of the foreign official Treasury selling may simply be building up of a liquidity buffer, wrote William Marshall of Goldman Sachs in a client note. Though, "we suspect the rest may have been to either support a currency peg (in the case of oil-exporting countries like Saudi Arabia) or their respective domestic dollar liquidity needs," he added.

>The Fed has acted to calm debt markets to avert knock-on economic effects, by announcing trillions of dollars of purchases of assets including Treasuries and mortgage-backed securities. It also unveiled measures that would let other central banks tap expanded dollar swap lines.

>Tuesday's Fed statement regarding the new repo facility didn't specify if all central banks would be involved.

>The new repo program "is a sensible second-best solution for major countries that are outside the enlarged Fed FX swaps network but have substantial corporate dollar funding needs," Krishna Guha, head of central-bank strategy at Evercore ISI and a former New York Fed official, said in a report. "This group includes China, which ought to be eligible for the new program, though the Fed release is not clear on this point."

>Line of Fire

>This isn't the first time Treasuries have been in the line of fire as the dollar gained. In 2016, a surge in the greenback saw central banks across Asia intervening to stabilize currency markets.

>Another indicator of central banks' positioning in Treasuries is primary dealer holdings, which tend to rise when official accounts are selling. Fed data on these holdings are available with a lag, but their stock of the securities had surged to $272 billion as of March 18, from $193 billion at the start of February.

>The new repo facility "effectively backstops foreign central banks from forced liquidation of their Treasury holdings into dysfunctional markets," Jonathan Cohn, a rates strategist at Credit Suisse, said in a note.

>Emerging-market "reserve managers sometimes need to sell U.S. Treasuries to defend their currency when the dollar is appreciating," he wrote. "These types of forced flows can contribute to dislocations along the curve and weigh on dealer balance sheets."

This outbreak is the best possible position for you guys to go vlad-the-impaler on any kind of abusive authority.

Normalfags are stressed, antsy, and bloodthirsty because their way of life has been completely shattered, and put on a standstill. If they find out that the entire economy was put on hold because a bunch of assholes were inflating statistics to gain ratings on television, they will be nuked.

Blackpill fags will be like "Oh they can just ride out the outrage on their billions," but they fail to mention some important things:

Big business takes on debt too, and in huge amounts Debt is the reason K-Mart got fucked, Disney got into debt when it bought fox and you know how well that's been going with tencent of all things is eyeing them up.

Debt devours souls if you don't pay it back quickly, not even the big guys are immune to this.

The human element - AKA your reputation is more valuable than your money Home depot gave benefits away in spades to it's employees when shit hit the fan, because in a natural-disaster scenario, not being an asshole is nice. Going out of your way to be kind is revolutionary when the world is full of selfish, abused fuck-ups.

What did Gamestop do? declare itself "essential", not let employees use masks and gloves because "it scares people". It was retarded as shit, two days after it was given hell for that, they completely went backwards on their decision after getting shit on by normalfags and their own fucking workers. Their stocks may be dropping from unrelated causes, but they sure as hell won't recover from the reputation hit.

Price gougers are getting fucked by the truckload, even a shitty local company in my area is getting fucked over for gouging prices. If the normalfags find out just how embellished the statistics are, they'll get pissed, ungodly kinds of pissed.

This could for-real destroy the media conglomerate.

Death by angry mob is one of the most terrifying ways to die, especially for big business, because they will be remembered for eternity for their misdeeds over anything good they did.

If they're remembered at all.

You wanna pull some gamergate shit but seven-hundred-fold?

Now is the time to do it!

INFECTED NIGGER CHIMPOUT IN CANTON AFTER BEATING CHINKESS TO ESCAPE ZOO

>Chinese police are investigating a case in which a Nigerian man who tested positive for COVID-19 refused to undergo medical quarantine and assaulted a nurse, beating her and biting her face. The case has caused great uproar on Chinese internet, with many calling for the man to be deported.

>The 47-year-old Nigerian man, named Okonkwonwoye Chika Patrick, arrived at Guangzhou, Guangdong Province from overseas on March 20 and was tested positive for coronavirus. He was sent to a hospital for treatment on March 23. However, he refused to undergo medical tests and tried to escape from his quarantine ward in a hospital on Wednesday.

>He then assaulted a nurse who tried to stop him, pushing her to the ground, beating her and even biting her face. A forensic examination found that she sustained injuries to her face, neck and waist. Police said they have strengthened security in and around the hospital, and the suspect is undergoing quarantine and treatment under police supervision. The case will be dealt severely with after his recovery.

>The government of East China's Qingdao in Shandong Province also announced on Thursday that they are investigating a case in which three foreigners were allegedly found to be queue-jumping during a coronavirus test. The incident has also caused great dissatisfaction among Chinese Internet users. "We will treat all Chinese and foreigners alike and act in accordance with the law and regulations," said Qingdao's regulator through Twitter-like Sina Weibo.

>Many netizens expressed their support for the authorities of Guangzhou and Qingdao, saying foreigners who felt superior and failed to respect rules amid the battle against the coronavirus are not welcome.

They stole it from the Canadian lab and the package was leaking all the way to Wuhan. That's where the American infections came from. The chinks can't admit the fumble.

<https://archive.is/tm6Ie>

>U.S. Customs and Border Protection officers at Detroit Metro Airport stopped a Chinese scientist carrying vials believed to contain the MERS and SARS viruses in November 2018 – just over a year before the first reported Wuhan coronavirus case, according to an FBI tactical intelligence report obtained by Yahoo News.

>“Inspection of the writing on the vials and the stated recipient led inspection personnel to believe the materials contained within the vials may be viable Middle East Respiratory Syndrome (MERS) and Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS) materials,” the report reads. The vials were labeled “Antibodies”, and the unnamed scientist said he was asked to deliver them to a researcher at a U.S. institute.

>The report also lays out a pattern of Chinese interference, detailing two other cases from May 2018 and September 2019, in which different Chinese nationals tried to enter the U.S. with undeclared flu strains and suspected E. coli, respectively.

>"The Weapons of Mass Destruction Directorate assesses foreign scientific researchers who transport undeclared and undocumented biological materials into the United States in their personal carry-on and/or checked luggage almost certainly present a US biosecurity risk," the report states. "The WMDD makes this assessment with high confidence based on liaison reporting with direct access."

>The FBI has stepped up its efforts to combat Chinese espionage operations in recent months after admitting failures in preventing the recruitment of U.S. researchers by Beijing's "Thousand Talents Plan." "With our present-day knowledge of the threat from Chinese plans, we wish we had taken more rapid and comprehensive action in the past," John Brown, assistant director of the counterintelligence division at the FBI, told a Senate subcommittee in November. "The time to make up for that is now."

>In January, the head of Harvard University's chemistry department was federally charged with failing to disclose funding from the Chinese government, after he hid his involvement in the talents program, which encourages the stealing of U.S. intellectual property.

It is unfortunate, but it is apparent that average American whites are too stupid to understand exponential growth. I have been trying since January. I seem to get through to them in the evening, but by the morning they've flipped back, as if having completely forgotten everything. Just now they say they are shocked the cases went from 100,000 to 200,000 in less than a week. Why is it that they are shocked when this has been explained to them ad nauseum?

Dead family members will be the only thing to stir them, at which point they'll shift to blackpill "it's hopeless, we're all gonna catch it and die" mode.

Same thing happening in New Orleans. With the streets clear, they're literally being swarmed by rats. And can we take a moment to reflect on what a living nightmare New Orleans must be to live in?

>hot and humid, with 24/7 365 swamp ass

>in the swamp, infested with mosquitos, gators, and fuck knows what else

>Gulf of Mexico is ugly af

>Mississippi river is polluted af >full of blacks and swamp hicks >almost obliterated by a hurricane >crime-ridden

>full of drunks at various points in the year

I'd rather live in the busted down rust belt than in New Orleans. Corona coming to town is probably a blessing. And if comorbidities are what really drive up the death count, she's going to go on a goddamn warpath down there.

It's actually really fascinating watching nature react to all this. So much air pollution cleaned up, animals reclaiming the streets, etc. All from only a couple of months of humans drastically reducing our modern presence and consumption. It really puts into perspective how crazy it must have been for our ancestors who had so little mastery over the natural world in their time. Huge wolf packs running wild, giant crow and bat storms blotting out the sky, etc. Really goes to show how powerful those kinds of natural phenomena really are when unchecked by man.

Update on burger prison and jails.

<https://www.themarshallproject.org/2020/04/02/coronavirus-restrictions-stoke-tensions-in-lock-ups-across-u-s>

<https://archive.fo/McnNP>

>In the grainy cell phone video, the prison block is dim and the shouting muffled—but the sight of wafting, gray smoke is unmistakable. "It's a nonviolent protest going on right now because the officers, in the middle of the coronavirus, have refused us electricity for several hours, no showers or anything," a man says in the recording, apparently made last week. The smoke, he explains, is from fires set by Texas prisoners desperately hoping to attract attention from higher-ups because they couldn't turn on their cell fans or clean themselves during the pandemic. The Marshall Project is not publishing the video or naming the prison out of concern for the man's safety.

>There have not been widespread outbursts of violence in the U.S., though signs of stress are beginning to show. In Washington state, a dozen people escaped from a county jail last week over fears of coronavirus, and in South Dakota the Rapid City Journal reported that a prison warden resigned after nine incarcerated women fled a unit where another woman tested positive for the virus. The head of the prison oversight authority in Nebraska said there was an uptick in illicit drinking and drug use last weekend in the state's largest prison. Meanwhile, in Alabama, widely-shared cell phone footage showed two ICE detainees in the Etowah County jail apparently threatening to jump off a second-tier walkway and hang themselves with makeshift nooses, allegedly because they believed three newly booked people had the virus.

>Prisoners have good reasons to be scared. People who are locked-up typically have spotty access to health care and many are medically high-risk. Many lack basic hygiene supplies, are generally not allowed to use hand sanitizer, cannot practice social-distancing and often live in overcrowded dorms or pods.

>At the Brooklyn federal facility, which has a 1,740-person capacity, Sanon said officers aren't getting access to N95 masks. People detained are still being transferred in and out of the prison, and moved around the country on a daily basis and "spreading disease from institution to institution," he said.

'''São Paulo health workers concerned about themselves after the death of two nurses due to lack of PPE"

>I have never seen my husband even have an headache.

Said the widow of Eduardo Gomes da Silva, who worked at the Tide Setúbal Hospital. The ministry of health has admitted a shortage of PPEs. Eduardo had high fever and shortness of breath, he died despite being put on a ventilator. His family wasn't tested for Corona-Chan, his wife received a tomography and was prescribed antibiotics, she's currently fine. For now

Without coronavirus testing kits in São Paulo, possible Corona-Chan related deaths will not be tested and simply registered as "undetermined cause"

84 YO Brazilian woman in Minas Gerais recovers from infection despite having hypertension. 84 years old Dulce Coelho is recovering from the coronavirus, she was the first confirmed case in Pouso Alegre, Minas Gerais. She even recorded a video thanking her friends and family for all of their Ave Maria prayers. The senior was probably infected during a trip through southern Minas Gerais, her first symptoms were tiredness and a 100F fever, a tomography revealed that her lungs suffered lesions. Dulce's only underlying health issue is hypertension, she exercises often and never smoked. Her daughters who took care of her were careful to avoid getting themselves contaminated, they currently show no symptoms of the virus and will soon leave self isolation.

>Christian white grandma with hypertension that has an healthy lifestyle recovered just fine

>Shitskin nurse that allegedly "never had an headache" just fucking croaks
Proof that Corona-Chan is here to remove those who are racially and spiritually impure. Praise Corona-Chan, my fellow cultists!

There's only one laboratory doing Corona-Chan tests in Minas Gerais, and it's underfunded and undermanned.

Spic in Texas tries to remove chinks from the premises of a club, said he was trying to stop them from spreading the virus <https://archive.is/ujeTa> Kek, based.

Just like in Minas Gerais, then. I'm glad the truth is slowly revealing itself. It also looks like Corona-Chan deems this doctor as worthy of living, given that he has been spared. I do wonder if he sustained any kind of permanent damage, he probably didn't or else he would be complaining about it, right?

Good evening nig nogs.

Just spent some time looking through Twatter for #FilmYourHospital, and also JewTube. This topic definitely warrants further digging.

I was phonefagging at work earlier today, and read something (in the previous thread, I think) about tests are not specific to /OurGirl/ but rather return a positive for any corona virus, to the extent they actually return reliable positives at all. This seems to make sense give the fact that corona viruses are constantly mutating retroviruses; damn near impossible to be specific about what you're testing for. So anyone with any corona virus at all (common cold, etc.) is counted as blessed. Something does not add up. We've shut down the entire Burger economy for what is beginning to look like a highly exaggerated larp built on top of something.

Checking those triple deuces. I find it insane that after all this time something truly fucking huge really is happening out of control. Imagine if /pol/ faggots in 2016 or even 2012 could see the current year, they would literally be shitting themselves in disbelief as to the magnitude of what happened and how quickly it got out of control. I think fuck I had you faggots to inform me of how fucked up shit was as early as January so I had time to prepare, so many normies are fucked and still in denial about it. We had a "conference call" at work the other day since we can't all be in the same room where our regional manager was telling us to get read for things to start getting back to normal next week even as Drumpf was finally admitting that shit is about to get ugly.

The one fair point to make in his defence is that he was not the one that leaked it to the media. As I understand that was someone else, the reason he's being removed is because he wrote an email and sent it over a non-secure line to too many people in the navy, instead of following the chain of command and sending it only to his superior.

The one who leaked to the media should definitely be executed though.

Again, in case you missed it, NYC is currently the only area in the US that has a serious case load. Other major cities like Los Angeles, Detroit, and New Orleans will be bad like NYC in about a month. The New York currently has ~93K cases (pic related from worldometers.info is sourced) and they're already panicking. Pay attention to what happens in a week when they have 200K and realize that's the future of the other cities.

Filming NYC and New Rochelle hospitals would be the only useful data at present.

NZ has less than 1000 cases. Nobody thinks there's a problem until 1000 people are dying per day, which is what's happening in the US, Italy, Spain, France, and I'm sure others. But by then you're super-fucked with no chance of containment.

The NWO is playing its hand, but it's a mistake to think they won't actually kill a third of the population like they did in Russia.

=How BlackRock Leveraged Control of the U.S. Economy=

>In less than a week the Federal Reserve has been merged with the U.S. Treasury (implying it wasn't always that way) and BlackRock, the world's largest and most powerful financial services institution, has been put in charge of executing future acquisitions and trades.

People who followed the Epstein/Pizzagate will recall BlackRock is the Rothchilds.

>BlackRock not only is the top investor in Goldman Sachs. Better yet: Blackrock is bigger than Goldman Sachs, JP Morgan and Deutsche Bank combined. BlackRock is a serious Trump donor. Now, for all practical purposes, it will be the operating system - the Chrome, Firefox, Safari - of Fed/Treasury.

Depends on the business anon. Any business designed to employ niggers or spics (fast food, warehouse, etc.) has disposable employees and can train new ones after this passes. More skilled work (manufacturing, offices, etc.) can't retrain as easily and needs to retain their employees if possible.

What I was referring to is all the testing sites in the USA that are empty. They are open but no one is going to get tested. If testing centers are so empty where are the numbers coming from? Second, it's cause for concern that states can get money from the feds if they have more cases of kung flu.

I'm getting tired of this anons. We need to look at more than one angle here. I know everyone was comfy with our girl going out and fucking things up. But there is a very real chance that is not the case, at least in the US. People may be sick and dying, but is it enough to warrant an economic depression? My concern is the response is not proportional.

Anyway I'm interested in your video because I may or may not have seen it.

I do think all angles should be considered here. In regards to your economic depression question, it's not so much do to Americans or Europeans or Iranians dying, it's the fact that the China outbreak was way worse than what they admit, enough to shut down most of the world's manufacturing sector for months. That alone combined with the retailers losing business from supply chain breakages and everybody being forced to shut down business or cut hours drastically will kill the wage slaves at the bottom of the pyramid, meaning the failure of the pyramid scheme since literally no more can be extracted from the bottom to flow to the top. Basically, the economy is shitting out because in reality, China is the engine that drives the global economy, which in turn is driven by consumerism and fueled by oil. China breaking down for months at a time may break most of the world as well.

They did abscond everything they could, which actually means there is more to come, that isn't this virus.

This virus: This virus came from a remote bat cave in Yunnan Province in southern china, cultured and mixed with staff repeatedly in a level four virology lab in Wuhan potentially with precursors for years, and in such an environment with multiple trips to remote bat caves, it finally advanced in late 2019. It then killed the lead virologist's assistant Huang Yan Ling, spread to the staff and locale areas, and asymp/pre-symptomatically spread through out Wuhan. It then spread through Wuhan social networks throughout the world (the original death cult 'church', pre-dating the worst korea cultists by about a month), and further spread through CCP hoarding/buying/scalping of every metro area they could fly into to ship supplies from around the world to the Communist Party. These patterns are confirmed by which cities/regions around the world are furthest along the infection curve. This was made orders of magnitude worse/accelerated by Lunar New Year extensive international travel with massive amounts of Han Chinese.

The Canada lab fuckery, and USA program fuckery, is what is to come. Later. This virus is now. The two are not the same.

Whites are at great risk going to these hospitals. Especially in NYC.

https://www.youtube.com/watch?time_continue=2&v=wEWxUmvBPVs&feature=emb_logo

Here is another concern regardless of what you think of my position here. Maybe a bunch of wu flu coofers are dying in the back. Yet the admissions are empty.

These hospitals are usually all packed with people. Where are all the normal patients? How many people are just dying now because they are scared to get treatment or are being refused treatment? This is a big problem. How long do you think we can go with a complete shutdown of the spic-nig cycle?

China is definitely a big hit to the global economy but I don't think their shutdown would have caused a depression. I disagree that they are the engine that drives the global economy. Certainly a big portion of it but they aren't everything. The economy is too complex to rely on just one player. What we are doing now however, will send us into a depression. You cannot shut down both China and USA. Bigger countries like USA, Germany, France etc could weather this if they didn't shut down their own economies. Now it's all fucked. There is so much shit to unpack here and agendas pushed that it's starting to make more sense that the virus is just smokescreen now. I think it's bad, I'm not denying that. But is our response proportional? I'm not sure. China could have easily gone full panic because they knew it would fuck over the rest of the world. This event has hurt China but benefited the CCP.

I'm honestly surprised at the amount of anons here that get mad when you suggest that there is heavy manipulation behind this virus. This shouldn't be surprising. Everyone should know about false flags and how (((they))) uses crisis to take advantage of the world.

I don't say this to talk shit on any anons but the truth is a lot of anons here are emotionally invested in this because it's so vindicating after all these "happenings" over the years. A huge amount of guys really WANT this to succeed and be the big one that it may be, and just don't want to hear any other possibility. Hell, I even want it to happen just because I'd rather become post apocalyptic warlord or tribal council member than waste my life in a 9 - 6 job with a longass commute just to have all my shekels confiscated and given to subhuman flotsam and jetsam when I can't even live my life. But basically whether you're a NEET with no future or a wagecuck who hates life this could be the thing that breaks the shackles (shekels?) of slavery and so a lot of guys are heavily emotionally invested. Saying this might not be the huge system crasher or the like is like taking a bit of hope away from them.

Monopolists. Good term, it's amazing how many "free market" middle-class people think supporting "open markets" etc is the "fair" and "godly" way of life. It's like the average normie hasn't seen banks and corporations given handouts time and again while paying close to zero taxes. Walmart is the biggest employer in the US (last I heard) and they just pay people minimum wage range salary. They do this will reaping all kinds of government benefits, and at the same time force people who work on them to also rely on government benefits, the fucking system is insane.

The same cannot be said for State and local govs.
However, the debts are growing and the ability to pay them off is rapidly diminishing.

this is nothing short of an act of war, a crime against all of humanity. the toll from this is already worse then 911 and pearl harbor combined! and its only just begun. Not only should all thier bonds be immediatly cashed out, but everything owned by chinese nationals should be confiscated. It wont suprise me in the least when at least that much happens (there are already bills being presented to that effect).

but its going to get a whole lot worse. the death toll is easily going into the millions, anyone can see that now. financial compensation is just the ante on this poker game. and even if we seized every last bit of chinese wealth, it wont pay for the economic damage, trillions have already been lost. This is going to be the worlds first qaudrillion dollar disaster!!! Chernobyl is going to look like split milk.

Its not lost on me, and hopefully it starts occuring to more people, that the construction of these weapons is specifically forbidden by the Geneva Convention. No we see why our grandfathers forbid these weapons. they are by their very nature indiscriminate weapons of terror and mass destruction. The first world war saw the use of chemicals, the second saw the use of nuclear, adn it looks like the third is kicking off with biological. The world is going to have to have a very serious conversation about the construction of these weapons. We sit now on the eve of destruction, and have no idea if this weapon will morph into some extinction level event. People are scared adn well they should be. These bugmen have stolen technology that they do not understand and do not have the capacity to control, in thier folly they have unleashed it on the world, in thier pride they have attempted to hide thier incompetence, such is the fate of nature's lesser creations.

There is nothing to do now except rip apart China, root and branch. The cccp must be so utterly devastated that it can never rise again. China must be split into parts.

This sentiment has been expressed by almost every person I have spoken to about his situation, to one degree or another. From "glass them now" to "hand them the bill", people are pissed, everyday ordinary joe the plumber and mary the nurse types are not fucking happy, and no amount of propaganda is going to convince anyone that this is not a made in china problem. And some may be tweeting "not all chinks are like that" today, but we will see what they have to say at grandmas wake!

Thats all I have to add today anons.

Of course, Guayas/Guayaquil is just the beginning, the appetizer, the main course is coming.

>Curious as to why not so much stuff like this from Brownzil yet? Better infrastructure due to country size or what?

Don't know if you have seen it yet but a video from one of our morgues leaked, lots of Corona-Chan labeled body bags. It was posted some 3 or 4 threads ago by another anon who didn't know which country it came from, I identified the country as here given the morgue worker as speaking Portuguese with a Brownzilian accent. I have no idea in which state that morgue is, but I'm sure it's not in the northeast. I would say it's only a matter of time before we start looking like a combination of Wuhan, Iran, Pastaland and Guayaquil. Slum dwellers and rural fags in the northeast are not obeying the quarantine lockdown at all, shit's gonna get really fun around here. I'm gonna sleep after one more post.

We will see.

I am in the firm belief that western nations will just slap China on the hands again.

Like they did last time with the SARS outbreak.

The reason why they got the permission to build such a facility in wuhan was because the French and Americans just slapped them on the hands and said it was bad that they make biological weapons but if they promise to not make more biological weapons they can have the facility to study and create vaccines for SARS or other viruses.

Obviously they did not listen to the first warning, and a new outbreak is upon us.

This is the biggest load of shit. A Chinese univeristy determined that it escaped from a lab back in like February. (The study was published in Feb, not the virus escaping.)

In the study they say the coronavirus came from horseshoe bats. Horseshoe bats were never sold at the wet market, though they were used extensively at two nearby viral laboratories specifically for coronavirus research. The chink government has done its best to bury this study, but it's too late. It's out there.

Having problems posting.

People have not yet realized that China has birthed a lot of very potent diseases. Usually, they are kept inside of China with minimal spreading. It's been the case for so long, that most governments assumed that CCP Virus wouldn't spread far beyond China, like the other viruses made in China.

But it did this time, and the world over-estimated China's ability to handle a virus, as well as how honest they would be with the rest of the world. Imagine the global response in a few years when China brings us the next killer virus. The entire world will 100% over-react when China has a new virus. I imagine the next time China gets sick (I would be surprised if it took more than 3 years), the entire country will be treated as a leper colony within days of learning they have a new virus spreading.

Once businesses realize this, they will flee China quickly. People are still too caught up in the moment of CCP Virus to think about the next outbreak or what comes after. The smart businesses will leave because they'll be aware of what will happen WHEN the next Chinese Virus comes. The dumb and greedy ones will stay, and be decimated when the next Chinese virus comes.

China has not been making it better. They are running around trying to blame Western leaders and governments for the problems in their countries. But the virus would not even exist if it weren't for China. Whether you believe the BSL-4 or the wet market theory, the Chinese government is responsible for it. People are looking at how China got the world sick and didn't inform other nations properly, and how they are spending their time on the internet praising China's response and putting down Western leaders. It's only fueling the thoughts that China is responsible for this with their negligence and their response. It's the wrong way to go about it for the CCP, and they will regret it massively in a year or two.

There are a lot fewer pro-China posts in this thread. I think the Chinese shilling is very real and it's all over the internet. Instead of China working to help other countries, they are devoting resources to spreading misinformation that praises China. It's sad, really, and if the West ever gets solid evidence it's happening, it's going to cause fury.

businesses and corporations aren't dumb they are pull out because they are losing profit margins apple Microsoft has already pulled out due to the Tariffs, and in 2015-16 the Japs and worst Koreans had a mass exodus, pulled out and moved to Mexico. now company profits have completely frozen, nobody is gonna allow this to happen again with their company.

this is definitely part of it. but the coronavirus actaully dovetails with zog's plan for china. let me explain:

over the past ten years there has been a "pivot to mexico" occuring accross the business world, this is a combination of several factors.

(1) cheap natural gas from oil shale projects.

what you probably dont know about oil shale and fracking revolution is that it has absolutely glutted the north american market with cheap natural gas, and its derivatives (propane, methane, etc . - im not a petrochemical engineer), these commodities have become very cheap in North America. What they are doing with it is attempting to sell it to Mexican companies just on the other side of the border as "power generation" for industrial facilities.

(2) mexico has really cheap labour. Mexican officials are corrupt, mexico's health and safety standards are very poor.

(3) mexico is very close to US, sharing a border

(4) a poor mexico is more of a problem then a semi-wealthy mexico, in terms of immigration and criminal activity

(5) mexico is easily controlled, and more likely to be "allies" then chinks.

This pivot to Mexico has been occuring for more then ten years now. Look at the statitics. Mexican unemployment has been steadily falling, mexico has been steadily growing in exports, mexcian wages are rising faster then inflation. The Pentagon has long considered financial markets and obligations to be just as important to national defence as a robust military. Back around 2009 financial crisis, the office of the President finally started to listen. Yes this pivot began under Obama. Anyone who thinks the President actually controls things can stop reading here. You are sadly misinformed, and not worth the time it will require to educate you. Anyone who understands the office is bigger than the man, please continue. The president is nothing more than a good bully pulpit. He doesn't really decide policy, this is the product of large groups of concerns, primarily business and national defence, which are really co-related under the umbrella of maintaining American Hegemony.

and inb4 "what about the cartels". anyone who is genuinely interested in this "pivot to mexico" can respond, ask me a question, and I have some time, I will try to explain those other factors.

inb4- this does relate to this thread. As always zog media has lied. There will be no "chinese century". They do this to prevent normal people from investing intelligently. The outcome of this virus has implications for world hegemony, for why china is going down, and will be plundered, and why mexico (and a few other countries) are going to come out on top over the next ten years.

I don't think coronachan was part of this plan, but they are going to work it into the plan!

to continue what i was saying. Zog is preparing to plunder China. Corona chan is an unplanned event, but it is going to be used to continue this plan (they never let a crisis go to waste).

If I was to say to the readers of this board: "To tell who the American government will be at war with ten years from now, one need only look at who is being armed today." Almost everyone would agree. The viet cong in the fifties, the taliban in the 90's, iraq in the 80's. And many others. the pattern is obvious. A robust MIC requires a patsy.

This same thing occurs financially. To understand what nation is going to be plundered in the next thirty years, one only needs to look at who is being built up. As John Dillinger once said when asked why he robs banks: "Cause thats where the money is!".

Mexico is being built up. The cartels are not a problem. Look at the gangsters of the 1930's. The cartels will go down the same route. International business is far more powerful then any drug cartels. For every billion the cartels earn, international business, legal business, earns a trillion. Thats where the real power lies. This change in doctrine occured in 1925 with Coolidge's proclamation that "The business of America, is business". He put it into the most succinct manner possible. So returning to the gangsters of 1930's America, just like the cartels they were out of control, machine gun fights on main street. But by the 1950's they were all gone. Replaced by gangsters in pin striped suits with an army of accountants and lawyers. Killings still occured, they were just done quietly, out of the publics eye. It doesnt matter to companies like P&G, Dole, or Haliburton whether these gangsters run drugs and murder people, in fact they want a certain amount of that, what they dont like is the publicity or the lack of centralized control. So thats what will happen witht the cartels. Those who continue to hang corpses from overpasses will be destroyed, those who can learn to conduct thier business discreetly will remain. We have already seen this start to happen. Heres how it goes (1) American declares cartels a problem (2) declares them terrorists (3) assigns more border patrols, builds walls etc (4) slowly increases from LEO units into military (5) assigns spooks to work with Mexico government (6) begins deploying "intelligence assets" to help mexico (drones, satelittes, "the sharing of information" (6) (we are here) begins assigning military "advisors" to help mexican law enforcement (7) begins pursuing mexican cartels over the border.

While this is occuring, more American huge multinational companies are building plants in Mexico, and lobbying the American government to provide them with protection (their standard play).

This plan benefits mexico, benefits America, and large corporations. It destroys China, and leaves it open to be plundered. As I stated these powers dont care if the cartels run drugs guns and whores, all they want is for that shit to be under a centralized control and kept on the "down low". They want to exploit cheap labor and proximity to largest market, and they dont want China to get any more powerful the it already is. it also works well in combatting illegal migration (which is becoming a touchstone for election in America, and control of American politics is vital).

The plundering of China was already planned. If corona chan is a planned event I think its likely it more of a general purpose population stabilizer (the world is overpopulated, and ZOG knows it). I dont think corona chan was planned (i have already explained that in previous threads). To much depopulation is not a good thing! not financially. and moreover corona chan is having the effect of creating more nationalism, closing borders, and fucking shit up financially.

the "pivot to latin america" does benefit America. I have already explained that. But I will run it down again for you:

(1) It stabilizes latin america by creating a middle class

(2) this alleviates the migration problem, because it creates jobs in latin america,

(3) it is simply more profitable, since latin america lowers shipping costs (if nothing else)

(4) latin american governments are easier to control then the chinese, they are easily bribed, and they are not a threat (not yet anyways)

(5) it allows America to export nat gas cheaply (which is really good for stabilizing export deficits - china isnt buying energy from America), Americans have a huge supply of it, and nowhere else to ship it, they need to find buyers for thier energy output.

to elaborate on point 5. Anyone who understadns even basic economics understadns that the cost of industrial production is primarily dependent on two factors. (1) price of raw resources (2) price of energy required to transform them. These prices are typically independent globally, except in cases of extreme proximity (ie its right next door).

perhaps there are fewer people posting on this board because its friday and zog is being shut down all over the world!

a note to our esteemed breadmaker. I dont post often and I hope you can see that these posts are relevant in that they are an attempt to see the big picture from a geo political viewpoint. Why china was already targetted for destruction, and how corona chan is playing into that hand.

Now corona chan is almost certainly an unplanned event. And it is fucking shit up financially. For every pissed off "joe the pumber" out there, there is an enraged CEO!!! The corporate boardrooms that care nothing but profits are absolutely livid, and soon they will going into a scarface-esque rage over corona chan fucking up the entire worlds economy! Bio weapon or not (i think its obvious it is), planned or unplanned, corona chan is absolutely devastating business plans of the big multinationals to institute NWO zog style shit. Borders are being closed, migrants are being banned, people are dying and blaming it on big business this is not what they wanted. They wanted to slow boil the frog, and corona chan just crashed into the stove spilling water everywhere however you cut it, this will not work out well for the bugmen. It one thing to steal joe the pumbers job, its another thing to slash profits for every major company in the world. The corporate boardrooms of the world are livid, they may put on a happy public face, but they are pissed, and heads will roll. bug heads. this is the pivot moment for china. The dragon will drip blood from her belly! The "chinese century" just collpased in two months. All the big companies are going to pull out, and if they dont, as has already been mentioned, they will be finished. No one is going to invest in China after this. Because the next time there is any klind of outbreak, even for a common cold, every country on the panet is going to close its borders to chinks overnight. Anything that says "Made in China" is going to be suspect, and many epople will boycott thier products due to the death of loved ones. People are already proclaiming they will never buy another chinese product in thier life. Its only going to get worse. The smart money is leaving china as we speak. what doesnt benefit America? Corona chan, or the "pivot to Mexico" which is current geopolitical aspiration of zog.

Of course there is a disconnect between "America" and the "American people". No one this board would seriously argue that! I will give you the bebefit of the doubt and assume you simply dont understand that in no way am I confusing the two. What is in the best interests of the American people is in no way what is in the best interests of thier ZOG.

The pivot to Mexico is beneficial to the American government (which by the way is anything but capitalist, the perpetual bail out of banks is not "capitalism").

another enlightening post with no cohesive ideas, one liners, no facts presented, no real logical arguments, just namecalling, insult, and "no real scotmans" style stuff. If you have a coherent argument, and truely wish to engage in meaningful dialogue, by all means present your data and your thoughts, otherwise, it is best for you to stop reading. In fact you can go over to 4cuck and sling mud all day, namecall, "muh shill" post and all the rest. this place isnt for you.

Whether I am right or wrong (and maybe I am wrong), but at least I am attempting to engage in civil debate with well thought out ideas.

I dont post frequently. I happen to have the morning off, and thought I might share my thoughts. you are free to take them or leave them. I dont pretend to know everything, and I have been mistaken in the past.

>>89556

Absolutely. Bringing back manufacturing to the States would create problems for ZOG-America though. They dont want a healthy middle class, they cant allow that too happen. First of all it would destroy the Dems as opposition, second the money supply would stop going up and start fattening the middle, it would also have financial repercussions. All that money staying in America would damage the turd world (it would be even more destitute). It would prevent the multinationals from taking advantage of the corruption, cheap labour (thereby destroying corporate profit margins).

I hope you dont think I have a vested interest in this. I dont own any shares in these companies. I own real estate, and conduct a private business (financial planning, tax preparation and bookeeping. I have a special practice, I have only one client). My client does own shares, but not many, his interests are primarily real estate, construction, concrete, property development, and wealth management). So I tend to see things through a financial planners lens.

I do however definitely agree that corona chan is going to throw a big ol wrench into the works.

Your wrong about that. I am not "shilling" for anyone or anything. I am merely presenting my private thoughts in an anonymous forum. I have absolutely no investments in China. As I said my primary concern is real estate.

No, I understand. I only mean to point out how much worse it is going to be in Mexico and South America (might as well consider India too) given their incompetence, poverty, and the prospect of limited or non-existent outside assistance. How much worse is it going to be for these places when compared to Italy, for example?

The West may have visions of pulling the plug on China, but if by welding people into their apartments and sacrificing >20 million allowed China to truly recover (dicey!), then plans may change.

To prevent the dispersion of the attack. Its really that simple. ZOG has been caught with its pants down. Its not planned event. two good reasons
(1) frank plummer was killed in January. If they ahd planned this they woudl have killed him last summer, quietly. They didnt do that, because they stole the virus, and killing him would draw attention to this. But now thats its been accidentally released they need to cover thier tracks.

(2) the MSM has been goign in all directions, and as usual the only thing the media agrees on is that "orange man bad". They dont have a narrative for this event. Anyone who has seen the videos of newcasters from all over the world, reading the exact same script for an event, realizes that they are all in cahoots. Those are the planned events. they are being forced to report on somethig that is not planned, and so they flounder, they go in all directions, and we get actaul news (albeit lefty bullshit infused, but they are actually having to write the articles themselves, so grains of truth come out).

those two things (a very specific event, and an event a criminal organization woudl correctly plan) and a very general feeling from the MSM, lead me to the conclclusion that this is an unplanned event.

SO. We have a bioweapon, accidentally released. What is the government goign to do? Like a farmer with a field of cows, he is attempting to protect his livestock from catching the disease until he can get ahead of it (the vet arrives, he can afford the medicine etc). (we are the cows) They really are panicking. They are freaking out and that should freak you out! because they obviously where not prepared for this, they dont know what to do (i dont either btw).

They really dont know. This could be a first strike (thats why skyking went crazy several days ago, why the cheyenne moutnain complex nad washington mountain complex have been manned, why the USAF STRATCOM has gone to defcon4!). this could be a highly mutagenic virus (we already know there are 2000 strains!), it could jump species (we could see an extinction level event). Nobody knows. it could all peter out and turn into "just a flu" (I woudlnt bet on that).

The shelter at home is exactly what Im doing. With my wife and children. Its really is about the only smart thing to do at this juncture, avoid getting this disease at all costs (we have no idea if it even can be peranaently cured, if it creates "viral loading", if it will have other health effects later nobody knows dude, thats why this is so fucked up).

I will say this. I have spent almost twenty years making financial plans for wealthy people. Last month I made my plan for my family (I was never in prepping before this). I went out and bought all the rice and beans I could get, I bought 3000 rounds of 7.62x39 that should tell you everything you need to know!!!

ok i switched off chameleon.

>>89570

I beg to differ my friend. The japs have alot more honour then most, they get honorary status imo. Also (and everyone is goign to crucify me for this around here) I like the flips. I been to phillipines a few times, they are so dirt poor, but many are christians, and despite rampant crime,the islands themselves are very beautiful (white sand beaches, little eislands etc), and flips tend to be happy, big smiles. They are actually good people, many are not too bright, and many are steeped in poverty, but I have a soft spot for them. I lived in Japan for three years as a boy, and I must say, they are a bit weird, but they are also very honorable.

Maybe. but those places, especailly india, they breed like rats. thier governments dont care if 15% gets wiped. fuck it will probably improve things. -- the only thing corona chan could have been planned for is mass DE-population

My experience from my service days overseas was that Japs are mostly alright, but some are rude as fuck and hate Americans, not that I blame them considering navy niggers are always raping jap girls since literally the end of WW2. Flips I have less good to say. Some of them are alright people but there are daggers in their smiles. They're nice as long as you have money, but would stab you in the back fast too. Every race has a few decent folk in it, but as far as Azns the Japs are the only ones I where I extend a positive preconception to the group.

I'm seeing a ridiculous amount of people not wearing masks, not wearing the right masks, or worst of all, not wearing the mask correctly and just leaving loose an unsecured hanging off their face or neck or whatever. No wonder this thing is spreading so bad, normalfaggots are not taking seriously at all unless their city starts go look like Wuhan.

Also site is fucked right now, hopefully not Coronese haxxors.

Don't get me wrong, I love Nips too, I they're one of the greatest people on this planet, but they're often very two-faced for cultural reasons. Lets say that they value "going with the flow" more than expressing how they really feel, it's a very NPC-ish social culture. Other than that, they're nearly perfect. I have a soft spot for Flips too, they amuse me because they look like a chink version of Brownzil.

I am not convinced its a question of "may have visions of pulling the plug on china". The plug has been pulled! It will become increasingly difficult for western companies to justify doing business in China, and they wont want to either. Cheap labour has never been a problem. We can get that in dozens of other nations too. China does not have a monopoly on cheap labour. Quite frankly, I'd rather build up spic governments then chinks (at least spics are half breeds). Personally I cant stand streetshitters or muzzies. But its not up to me. Nobody is goign to want to do business in China after this, the pull out is already happening. Capital flow is leaving china, and its only going to accelerate.

Also I dont htink the chinks have recovered medically. I dont think any credible person believes a word coming from them anymore. The CCCP has exposed itself of being liars of the worst sort. It is more then likely there are millions already dead, and millions more to come in the fall.

Which brings us to sunny point number two: This is only the first wave. Most flu like viruses tend to come in four waves. The first and the third waves are "half waves", its the second wave that is the full wave, the fourth is a quarter wave. The second wave (the big one) is going to hit sometime between september and december, and its goign to absolutely kick the shit out of the world. Its going to be the event of our lifetimes! You will likely have an opportunity thi summer to gather supplies and get your shit together. I suggest we all do. Stay fit, your number one prep is always yourself, your health.

This fall, something wicked is coming,

Anyways its a beautiful day outside, I think I should expand my vegetable garden with my son. Who knows how long any of us have? Whatever time I have, I want to spend as much as I can with those I love.

One occult anon that channelled corona chan asked if she was a weapon, and the intent he got from her was "no". That has me thinking, what if the stealing of her was an act of opportunity, that they wanted to use her to breed a deadlier form as a weapon, but instead, in typical chink incompetence, she got loose.
I know, nothing in politics is ever done on purpose, but even the ZOG with all their qliphothic demons are still human and have limited control over the cosmic plane.

As far as I've heard about the nips, I remember of an account from an American office worker who went on business to japan being shocked at how the manager basically tried to handhold him through every single step of the process they were trying to get adjusted to. If this really is that common, then it explains why japan has such a high rate of NEETs and autism. The other cultural stereotype I've heard of nips from a worker living there, was that in two-child households, the older sibling was to be expected to be the breadwinner, and were fucked if they did shitty, whereas the younger sibling was treated as worthless, and not expected to succeed in anything no matter how many straight-As or awards they won.

Much of the nips are emotionally dysfunctional. Well, at least they keep clean and are sanitary compared to a good chunk of the asian world.

You sound young. You probably have to share with other young people because you don't yet have enough skills, experience and connections to make any money. Young people are fucking stupid, they have little life experience to base their decisions on.

I bet these guys who buy takeout every day are fucking broke too.

Use it as a lesson. You need to grow up, secure your own accomodation and livelihood, start a family, stay out of debt. Don't get sucked into the globohomo mainstream with all those dumbass kids you currently share with.

Also where are the women in your life? Are there no women to cook you a meal?

Perhaps this is also related to that you are a kid who can't yet provide.

>So are there any real signs that there will be war if the economics get bad enough?

Regardless of the economy, I think war will happen within the next few years, simply because the US, Europe, South America, and Africa are all tired of China's bullshit. The only wild card is Russia, who has supported China over the US in the past, but this virus seems to have shaken Putin up to the fact that Pooh Bear and Co. won't give a damn to any alliance if it meant global hegemony.

>Problem is that the bugs have nukes so it would probably have to be against someone else, no?

Nah, there's too many people calling for China's blood for the war to be anywhere else. And yes, there will be nukes. We need to beg God and pray that Trump has enough sense to start setting up anti-missile defenses a la the Phalanx system and Reagan's Star Wars program. The other thing we need to start doing is to foment and support rebellion against the CCP a la Bay of Pigs if that was actually successful.

Europe isn't going to join the US. It's already sided with Russia - that's what the energy deals are about. The US is a nigger country committed to the total extermination of the White race. French military officials have commented publicly on this, that there is a natural separation occurring. It's the postwar judeo-elite in France inside the banks and intelligence services that are trying to keep the American connection alive. It's far better for Europe to get the resources it needs from Russia than from Africa because the price of getting it from Africa is the total extermination of your people. The US and Britain are committed to this, Europe as a whole is not and cracks are forming in the French commitment to this.

You are very confused as to who is actually with you on this anti-China stuff.

America has no choice but to blame China. It's a nigger country that can't produce like China can so if the rents on that production are not under their control they enter into a death spiral. Because of the enormous gulf between Chinese average intelligence and new American average intelligence, the US can never catch up which means it has to use whatever military power it has right now to stay afloat. People overdose on Zeihan white propaganda that is meant to fluff up gloablist, niggerized American egos.

>Europe isn't going to join the US. It's already sided with Russia
>Europe

European nations' relationships with Russia are complicated. You cant take Spain and Finland, call them both "Europe" and expect them to have the same foreign relations. The EU is already looking shaky. Here in the east all the border checkpoints are back in action.

If there was conflict involving Russia it would probably be game over for the EU.

>US is a nigger country

Yes, the USA and it's homosexual, black agenda are not our friends either.

> Russia vs Africa

Yes.

Look .I kind of agree with the spirit of what you are saying, but I just object to the simplification of pan-european attitudes to Ivan. Yes 100% of people here, even the most heroically anti-soviet, would chose to go back into their khrushchoba rather than brown up their country. I guess it's only surprising to a bong or a burger though, that in some other place people prefer blacks to stay out of their country.

Good analysis. Mexican cartels are controlled by the CIA anyway, meaning that any revenue made by hooking future Mexican rising middle and upper class to drugs will go back to the US. Mexico might become to US what Poland is to Germany. In the end, money ends up in Israel.

No, a coalburner isn't a 56%-er. She's still white, but her kid is 50%, not 56% white.

And you should know by now, unless you are a Chinese operative of disinfo, here to deceive, and lead astray the whites in their heartfelt desire for reconstitution and renewal, that whites can be reconstituted out of the less pure.

For example, if Mexico gassed the Indians or sent them away, and had zero immigration, within about 100 years they'd rise from 70% white to 95% white.

I know what you mean there. (Ethnic) Russians are respected because they haven't abandoned their identity.

I've always thought that the fundamental problem for the US is that it's was, and is, a colony. That land is not the indigenous land of the people who dominate it, and so it's really hard to form a consistent national identity. People cling to the founding fathers, or the constitution, but it's so weak. It's not blood.

Yes, they will. The energy market is too important. The safest course for Russia and Europe to chart is to come together and lean on each, compromising when necessary. Together they can destroy America once and for all and keep the Chinese at bay. Separate and Europe is swallowed up by Afrimerica and Russia is easy pickings if the Chinese turn north. The best to realize a closer relationship with Europe is for the US to be out of the way, which requires backing up China.

So lets say I'm disinfecting and all that shit and somehow some CV's survive but they're weakened or deactivated, you know like a vaccine.

I allow them into my system will i be vaccinated? Of course not, it has to be more complex but I was wondering if this type of situation may be causing death of the severe reaction in some seemingly healthy young people. Like that whistleblower Dr in Wuhan. He the type that could of introduced weakened CV's

><https://jameslyonsweiler.com/>

The reason I say that is because I was reading on the above site that on viruses with a large spike protein when they made vaccines via weakened or deactivated viruses that when they were exposed to the real thing they had a even more severe reaction.

Tbh I don't know what i'm talking but occasionally a healthy young person dies for no apparent reason. Why?

I was just wondering if maybe that's why.

That seriously unlikely as i'm almost positive idk wtf i'm talking about but be sure to do a thorough job sanitizing and washing hands.

>There is definitely motive to pedal a mild or fake virus.

Pandemic bonds clearly provide motive. Hedge funds using derivatives among other financial instruments, were investors. Those backing the WHO such as Bill Gates, a $2.4B contributor, have influence over how what the WHO will now implement. The key to the whole scheme was achieving pandemic status. Cui bono.

>In June 2017, the World Bank announced the creation of "specialized bonds" that would be used to fund the previously created Pandemic Emergency Financing Facility (PEF) in the event of an officially-recognized (i.e. WHO-recognized) pandemic.

>They were essentially sold under the premise that those who invested in the bonds would lose their money if any of six deadly pandemics hit, including coronavirus. Yet, if a pandemic did not occur before the bonds mature on July 15, 2020, investors would receive what they had originally paid for the bonds back in addition to interest and premium payments on those bonds that they receive between the date of purchase and the bond's maturation date.

Reminder that our numbers are total bullshit since the government is covering up the number of confirmed cases and confirmed deaths and we're not counting asymptomatic blessings, not to mention the lack of testing kits and even lack of laboratories and lab personnel in some states

Russia is not going to join China in any kind of alliance. Russia will be happy to sell them guns and oil, but a military alliance is highly unlikely. If the US and its allies applies enough pressure, and promises enough access, its likely Russia would agree to not supply the chinks. But none of that is going to happen anyways.

Actaully the mexican cartels are not controlled by the CIA. The medellin (whats left of them, mainly Golfo Syndicate, and the very nebulous Oficina de Envigado . It took the CIA 20 years to get control over the cocaine trade. They operate the FARC and sort of control the Oficina. They dont have alot of control. They have none in Mexico. The Mexican cartels are truly something else. They wont last though, not in thier present form. The CIA is in control of heroin production, and some cocaine production. But the meth adn the fent is an attempt by the chinks to dominate the worlds drug supply.

No just trying to make a joke out of the fact that everyone knows here that the Ethnicity field on the ID card is for singling out Russians, and hiding it in a generic question. They really should just replace it with "Do you identify as Russian?"

Totally wrong, listen to this guy:

Jews use "whiteness" to detach national identity from its roots. Keep your national language, your national songs, your national costume, and your national borders. You can be "white" and speak english on the internet.

Fine. If it comes to fighting against the yellows or the browns I'll be on the white team. But only macro geopolitics.

I don't want to get too into the D&C, its not helpful. But I do wonder if there is any way for the US to have a sensible ethnic identity, and what it would be based on.

Also anyone else notice that this thread is great when it goes off topic. Mods will crack down on it any moment I'm sure.

Have a look at this though -

Italy death from influenza 2013-17:

7k, 20k, 16k, 25k

So far allegedly from C19 - 11k.

Italy attributed anyone dying in hospital either with it, or from 'similar complications' as a C19 death. So it's blown out of proportion. Italy is also pretty fast and loose (sloppy) with most things. Used to live there.

I do have substantial other data across the board, but don't want to derail our convo.

Def a manipulated substance, and def accidentally released.

Pro tip: remember the chink doc that used CRISPR to make those twin girls immune to HIV?

HIV related to this Frankenvirus.

War with someone is imminent - see 1MM reservists called up. Think Jade Helm. I version of Jade Helm.

There are plenty of places to put boots on the ground before this is over, and china wont be one of them. If this progresses as I expect it to, and has been surmized previously on this board. China will be one of many revolutions. And its not worth trying to put boots on the ground in china, since it will only galvanize opposition. Its better to fund proxies to rip the country apart, sell them loads of guns, and prop up puppets.

Where will "boots on the ground go" ... imo. Mexico. your laughing now, but if I had told you twenty years ago that mexican cartels would be more dangerous and uncontrollable then pablo escobar you'd have laughed in my face. The mexican cartels are a disaster for america, and they are now seeing the chinese co-opt the CIA for control of Americas drug supply. Its all been steadily building along the usual lines, in fact it was just a month or two ago that the US announced it was sending "military advisors" to help the Mexican Army. But this has been going on since 2010. A quiet little war bewing south of the border.
If corona chan has her way, the Americans will have thier hands full controlling central and south america. which is far more strategically vital then China.
All of those shithole countries are on the verge of collapse.

The truth of it is that these are best guesses. We really dont know, and cant predict with any accuracy where this is going. Corona chan is a "black swan event". She could very easily cause alot of nations to become politically unstable. Columbia, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Panama, even brazil. They are already near the tipping point. Corona chan is laying waste to thier economies and by next winter we are going to see some very real shit hitting the fan in the form of massive chimpanings.

When the second wave hits, in the fall, and the bodies really start to hit the floor, you wont want to still be in any major city. US boots on the ground could very well be in yourtown USA, to attempt to keep order.

Agreed. If anything we're going to "spread democracy" to central and south america so they can install factories with suicide nets instead of relying on china - It would make a lot of sense to move it to this hemisphere.

China is too big and far away to bully effectively, especially with our weakened posture.

>The communist party will be destroyed and china broken up into its components That depends on how infiltrated they are. If there is a group of loyalists/nationalists/hardline ideology followers with sufficient power and tentacles in military structures, they WILL fight back. Even if they were kiked from the start (Modern China is pretty much Kissinger's project), there is no saying if such group has formed in the meantime. But yes, we can expect the typical jewish tactics now. First mass smearing in (((media))), economic and industrial sabotage, funding of various "revolutions" and 5th column, terrorist organizations, secessionist regional movements, and all of those being handled intentionally in the worst way possible due to jewish plants in the ruling party/government/various agencies. Then they get sanctions, further arming of secessionist groups, internal strife, student protests until they are completely ruined or until any (((change))) happens with different, more obedient puppets.
The difference being that any non-kiked elements in China would have far more capacity to actually strike back than all the previous countries that were targeted this way.

>Think former yugoslavia

Controlled demolition since the beginning. Including the so called "nationalists" . China might not go down as easily.

>Russia is not going to join China in any kind of alliance

That depends on how many assets do the Russian-Jewish oligarchs have there. They built a lot of pipelines lately. They will probably just wait for this transition to happen without interfering much and looking to profit from the situation as much as possible.

>The Mexican cartels are truly something else.

They will be put under tighter control if it proves financially feasible to do so. Local market is not as interesting as those abroad right now, only production and supply lines, but it will become interesting if their GDP per capita starts growing considerably due to industrial pivot from China.

well like I said it would probably take alot of carrots and sticks to get the russians to stop selling oil and guns to the chinks in the event of a revolution. but I am adamant in the opinion that the russians wont get involved militarily. The russian military isnt ready for a large conflict, and the russians themselves dont want it. They want to make some money. If the chinks descend into civil war the russians wont step in. The chinks are alot more divided then we think. They are alot of different groups. Once Jinping gets his head cut off, the realfight begins.

Singapore, S. Korea, China, Japan all are just on the upswing of another wave of the first wave. Some people are saying third wave- I disagree. We haven't even hit the second. We are artificially out of necessity suppressing the first wave effect. The reason you should care is the west desperately wants to follow what happened in these Countries. Quick lockdown, efficient tracking boom no cases life moves on.

IT ISN'T GOING TO HAPPEN THAT WAY

Even with the new treatment there is no prevention. Sure it is like chemotherapy, but at least you don't die. Faustian bargain to be sure. So these countries going back on coof duty means as soon as they open the doors here, it goes up again. It means the Fed has bankrupted us keeping ghost companies alive for the first stage of the roller coaster, and we are barely through 1/4 of the ride. It means that the foundation was absolutely cracked by the first wave and all that any government, society or institution can do at this point is say- "oh shit". I remember from early on with this it wasn't a discussion of how many they could save, it was what would be left to rebuild with

I personally love the idea of an Empire, hell Monroe pictured the US at the helm of a Western Hemisphere united behind American control and I'm all for that. It isn't their fault for being good peasants, it is our fault for going so terribly off the rails from Wilson forward with neo-liberal ideology and slow boil indoctrinating Marxism. I'm ok with making Mexico the next slave state, keeps the wetbacks there. Unfortunately I think we will look a lot like mid Civil War Yugoslavia in about 3 months with added fallout action! so dreams of Empire are really just masturbation at this point.

Is chinese a wordfilter for jew now? But yes, whoever does it is not very subtle about it. they never were I don't think chinks would benefit from the white genocide or desire it, they practically worship whites over there. You can't have a chinese bootleg copy without the original.

>One can be both thier nationality and "white"

My point exactly. All ethnic Europeans have the same origin anyway. This is true diversity in accordance with the natural law.

>but I am adamant in the opinion that the russians wont get involved militarily Unless it spills over their border. China has a lot of people, they could be the new "refugees". Unstable China is not in Russia's interest, but it won't stop jewtin and his capos from trying to make some profits from the situation while throwing ethnic Russians under the rug.

>The chinks are alot more divided then we think

Yes, but how? Certainly not culturally and ethnically. Sure, CCP has a lot of modern warlords competing for power and influence, many of whom will ally with foreign powers in order to secure a better piece of the cake, but it would be difficult to make ordinary people follow those warlords. Kikes did not instill ethnic or religious tensions sufficiently, except in certain regions where they were pre-existing for the most part.

>>89769

And yet its back, in all of it's glowry. Do some research before posting nonsense, in many countries in Europe you can literally get arrested for saying typical /pol/ lingo in public.

>>89771

Most post-war European countries are crypto-Bolshevist colonies ruled by Stasi-like entities that 'survive' every government change and keep implementing the agenda set in the Protocols. People got used to that so they take it for granted, just like they took previous repression enforced by the same (((interests))) for granted while what are to become Americans fled to another continent and fought it. But then again, most ruling politicians in EU for the past few decades (like Merkel) were trotskyists trained by the CIA. This only shows the international character of those forces. I guess US constitution is one of the final stumbling blocks for their total world tyranny, but it won't be of much use if there is no one to enforce it. Many countries have constitutions which are routinely ignored in ways that would get someone executed for treason in the past, and yet no one does anything about it.

they havent run out of supplies and gibs. Whats happening right now is they are coasting on fumes, maybe a few countries have a bit of fuel in the tank, but not much. But Corona chan is burning through that, and they arent getting any more fuel because everyone is dying and stuck indoors.

This september things will start to get spicy. First in the turd world, then in the developing world. And when Corona chan swings around for another little party, sometime in the fall, and new quarantines start to be announced again, then its going to pop off in the developing world as well. I doubt most majority white nations will collapse into civil war.

but we might just start seeing armed gaurds at places like wally world, along with castle doctrine, stand your ground, and a desire for less funz laws. Its going to be pretty hard for politicians to deal with this type of behaviour without giving some ground on these topics.

That's not what's happening. Chinks are the ones controlling companies. israel got in bed with china, and now is in a horrible state. It's hilarious. mossad went out and stole test "kits", only to find out they didn't include the reagent. So they're not able to test everyone who needs to be tested in israel. alias work:

If this whole situation is not just a ruse by the ZOG meant to implement some agenda behind our backs, only for them to announce it to be officially "beaten" a month or two from now (a very likely scenario), or if it doesn't subside in next couple of months, war is pretty much inevitable. You'd have dead economies, a lot of starving and pissed people, everything collapsing and most govt's seeing war as a a convenient way to maintain their control. A very deadly cocktail. This is why US army is activating those bunkers and reserves, they have people whose job is to predict developments and make contingency planning. And yes, Russians are in a very good position right now. For their low population density if anything else. The world can burn and some muhosransk can go on living like nothing has happened due to being far away from any happenings.

actaully theres alot of differences. the mongols, the ugyurs, etc. in fact 10% of china is ethnic minorities. however 90% is "han chinese" (which really means rape baby with 1000 fathers!).

the primary differences are political and religious, and in this the han are divided. there is also a massive disconnect between classes. also china has 1.2 billion people and even in the best of times they are reduced to eating rats and bugs to survive, can you imagine what it will be like when the food runs out. because typically in the past most chinese revolutions have resulted in the victors literally eating the losers. yes cannibalism is routinely practiced in china right up into this century. they are truely a souless bug people.

no hope for EU maybe. But europeans will be fine. No military capacity? compared to who? The US, russia, china ... ok. but not compared to any other country in the world. compared to any ME or african and most asian and latin american countries, any of Europes armies would decimate them in weeks. Look at what a few french planes did to quaddafis "mother of all armies" on the road to tripoli, or what UK did to argentina in the falklands.

There is also a huge difference between a high IQ motivated professional soldier, and some shitskin with an AK. It reminds me of Leonidas saying "But how many soldiers did you bring". You know russia just a few years ago switched from an all conscript army to a volunteer only army, because they got tired of thier shitty conscripts. I pit 5000 well trained well equipped motivated europeans against 200000 niggers with ak's any day. IQ also plays a very decisive role in the outcome of battles. Look at McNamara's Morons from vietnam.

Senator asks director to resign over Florida's unemployment fiasco
 >The man overseeing Florida's broken unemployment system is under mounting pressure from two Tampa lawmakers from both parties.
 >Sen. Janet Cruz, D-Tampa, is calling on Department of Economic Opportunity Director Ken Lawson to resign for not communicating with lawmakers about the state's unemployment website fiasco.
 >And Rep. Jackie Toledo, R-Tampa, is calling for an audit of Lawson's department following reporting in the Times/Herald that showed the agency ignored years of audits about problems with the state's unemployment website.
 >Cruz's request was sent Friday to Gov. Ron DeSantis, who appointed Lawson to the job last year. Cruz said Lawson and his staff backed out of a Thursday meeting with her and small business owners and has not presented any timeline for when the state's unemployment system will be fixed.
 >"I cannot in good conscience stand by the response provided by the (Department of Economic Opportunity) to this economic crisis," Cruz wrote DeSantis. "It is with great disappointment and frustration that I request you ask Executive Director Ken Lawson to resign from his duties."

>Florida's unemployment system has been overwhelmed by a record number of people thrown out of work because of the coronavirus. Its website, the primary way to apply for unemployment, brings up error messages more often than not. Its call center, meant to be a backup system for the website, has been overwhelmed with callers, and some people are spending up to 12 hours on hold, if they're able to get through at all.

>The problems could turn into an economic disaster for Florida, whose tourism-dependent economy has been crushed by the coronavirus. You need to apply for unemployment in order to receive it, and some people have been trying to apply – and failing – for weeks.

Florida could lose out on billions of federal unemployment dollars that were part of the economic stimulus package because of an inability of would-be recipients to apply.

>On Thursday, Lawson apologized for the problems and said the office is doing everything it can to fix it. The office said they would be issuing paper applications on Friday that people can fill out and send the department. As of Friday afternoon, those forms have not yet been issued, and a spokeswoman did not respond when asked when they would be available.

>The state has also hired a company to provide 250 call takers and is asking state employees from other agencies to field unemployment calls.

>The website's problems date back to the early days of former Gov. Rick Scott's administration. Under Scott, the state spent $77 million launching a deeply-flawed unemployment website that has continued to struggle.

>In 2015, 2016 and 2019, state auditors found the system was still suffering from error messages and other glitches. Scott never fixed the problems.

Early data reveals African Americans are contracting and dying of coronavirus at alarming rate: report

Niggers literally blame 'Muh Discrimination' because they are unable to follow instructions and self-isolate but instead throw block parties out in the streets - FUCKING NIGGERS

"It's all Whitey's Fault"

> by Akilah Johnson and Talia Buford

> The coronavirus entered Milwaukee from a white, affluent suburb. Then it took root in the city's black community and erupted.

> As public health officials watched cases rise in March, too many in the community shrugged off warnings. Rumors and conspiracy theories proliferated on social media, pushing the bogus idea that black people are somehow immune to the disease. And much of the initial focus was on international travel, so those who knew no one returning from Asia or Europe were quick to dismiss the risk.

> Then, when the shelter-in-place order came, there was a natural pushback among those who recalled other painful government restrictions – including segregation and mass incarceration – on where black people could walk and gather.

> "We're like, 'We have to wake people up,'" said Milwaukee Health Commissioner Jeanette Kowalik.

> As the disease spread at a higher rate in the black community, it made an even deeper cut. Environmental, economic and political factors have compounded for generations, putting black people at higher risk of chronic conditions that leave lungs weak and immune systems vulnerable: asthma, heart disease, hypertension and diabetes. In Milwaukee, simply being black means your life expectancy is 14 years shorter, on average, than someone white.

> As of Friday morning, African Americans made up almost half of Milwaukee County's 945 cases and 81% of its 27 deaths in a county whose population is 26% black. Milwaukee is one of the few places in the United States that is tracking the racial breakdown of people who have been infected by the novel coronavirus, offering a glimpse at the disproportionate destruction it is inflicting on black communities nationwide.

> In Michigan, where the state's population is 14% black, African Americans made up 35% of cases and 40% of deaths as of Friday morning. Detroit, where a majority of residents are black, has emerged as a hot spot with a high death toll. As has New Orleans. Louisiana has not published case breakdowns by race, but 40% of the state's deaths have happened in Orleans Parish, where the majority of residents are black.

> Illinois and North Carolina are two of the few areas publishing statistics on COVID-19 cases by race, and their data shows a disproportionate number of African Americans were infected.

> "It will be unimaginable pretty soon," said Dr. Celia J. Maxwell, an infectious disease physician and associate dean at Howard University College of Medicine, a school and hospital in Washington dedicated to the education and care of the black community. "And anything that comes around is going to be worse in our patients. Period. Many of our patients have so many problems, but this is kind of like the nail in the coffin."

> The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention tracks virulent outbreaks and typically releases detailed data that includes information about the age, race and location of the people affected. For the coronavirus pandemic, the CDC has released location and age data, but it has been silent on race. The CDC did not respond to ProPublica's request for race data related to the coronavirus or answer questions about whether they were collecting it at all.

> Experts say that the nation's unwillingness to publicly track the virus by race could obscure a crucial underlying reality: It's quite likely that a disproportionate number of those who die of coronavirus will be black.

> The reasons for this are the same reasons that African Americans have disproportionately high rates of maternal death, low levels of access to medical care and higher rates of asthma, said Dr. Camara Jones, a family physician, epidemiologist and visiting fellow at Harvard University.

> "COVID is just unmasking the deep disinvestment in our communities, the historical injustices and the impact of residential segregation," said Jones, who spent 13 years at the CDC, focused on identifying, measuring and addressing racial bias within the medical system. "This is the time to name racism as the cause of all of those things. The overrepresentation of people of color in poverty and white people in wealth is not just a happenstance. ... It's because we're not valued."

> Five congressional Democrats wrote to Health and Human Services Secretary Alex Azar, whose department encompasses the CDC, last week demanding the federal government collect and release the breakdown of coronavirus cases by race and ethnicity.

> Without demographic data, the members of Congress wrote, health officials and lawmakers won't be able to address inequities in health outcomes and testing that may emerge: "We urge you not to delay collecting this vital information, and to take any additional necessary steps to ensure that all Americans have the access they need to COVID-19 testing and treatment."

> Milwaukee, one of the few places already tracking coronavirus cases and deaths by race, provides an early indication of what would surface nationally if the federal government actually did this, or locally if other cities and states took its lead.

> Milwaukee, both the city and county, passed resolutions last summer that were seen as important steps in addressing decades of race-based inequality.

> "We declared racism as a public health issue," said Kowalik, the city's health commissioner. "It frames not only how we do our work but how transparent we are about how things are going. It impacts how we manage an outbreak."

> Milwaukee is trying to be purposeful in how it communicates information about the best way to slow the pandemic. It is addressing economic and logistical roadblocks that stand in the way of safety. And it's being transparent about who is infected, who is dying and how the virus spread in the first place.

> Kowalik described watching the virus spread into the city, without enough information, because of limited testing, to be able to take early action to contain it.

> At the beginning of March, Wisconsin had one case. State public health officials still considered the risk from the coronavirus "low." Testing criteria was extremely strict, as it was in many places across the country: You had to have symptoms and have traveled to China, Iran, South Korea or Italy within 14 days or have had contact with someone who had a confirmed case of COVID-19.

> So, she said, she waited, wondering: "When are we going to be able to test for this to see if it is in our community?"

> About two weeks later, Milwaukee had its first case.

> The city's patient zero had been in contact with a person from a neighboring, predominately white and affluent suburb who had tested positive. Given how much commuting occurs in and out of Milwaukee, with some making a 180-mile round trip to Chicago, Kowalik said she knew it would only be a matter of time before the virus spread into the city.

> A day later came the city's second case, someone who contracted the virus while in Atlanta. Kowalik said she started questioning the rigidity of the testing guidelines. Why didn't they include domestic travel?

> By the fourth case, she said, "we determined community spread. ... It happened so quickly."

> Within the span of a week, Milwaukee went from having one case to nearly 40. Most of the sick people were middle-aged, African American men. By week two, the city had over 350 cases. And now, there are more than 945 cases countywide, with the bulk in the city of Milwaukee, where the population is 39% black. People of all ages have contracted the virus and about half are African American.

> The county's online dashboard of coronavirus cases keeps up-to-date information on the racial breakdown of those who have tested positive. As of Thursday morning, 19 people had died of illness related to COVID-19 in Milwaukee County. All but four were black, according to the county medical examiner's office. Records show that at least 11 of the deceased had diabetes, eight had hypertension and 15 had a mixture of chronic health conditions that included heart and lung disease.

> Because of discrimination and generational income inequality, black households in the county earned only 50% as much as white ones in 2018, according to census statistics. Black people are far less likely to own homes than white people in Milwaukee and far more likely to rent, putting black renters at the mercy of landlords who can kick them out if they can't pay during an economic crisis, at the same time as people are being told to stay home. And when it comes to health insurance, black people are more likely to be uninsured than their white counterparts.

> African Americans have gravitated to jobs in sectors viewed as reliable paths to the middle class – health care, transportation, government, food supply – which are now deemed “essential,” rendering them unable to stay home. In places like New York City, the virus' epicenter, black people are among the only ones still riding the subway.

> “And let's be clear, this is not because people want to live in those conditions,” said Gordon Francis Goodwin, who works for Government Alliance on Race and Equity, a national racial equity organization that worked with Milwaukee on its health and equity framework. “This is a matter of taking a look at how our history kept people from actually being fully included.”

> Fred Royal, head of the Milwaukee branch of the NAACP, knows three people who have died from the virus, including 69-year-old Lenard Wells, a former Milwaukee police lieutenant and a mentor to others in the black community. Royal's 38-year-old cousin died from the virus last week in Atlanta. His body was returned home Tuesday.

> Royal is hearing that people aren't necessarily being hospitalized but are being sent home instead and “told to self-medicate.”

> “What is alarming about that,” he said, “is that a number of those individuals were sent home with symptoms and died before the confirmation of their test came back.”

> Health Commissioner Kowalik said that there have been delays of up to two weeks in getting results back from some private labs, but nearly all of those who died have done so at hospitals or while in hospice. Still, Kowalik said she understood why some members in the black community distrusted the care they might receive in a hospital.

> In January, a 25-year-old day care teacher named Tashonna Ward died after staff at Froedtert Hospital failed to check her vital signs. Federal officials examined 20 patient records and found seven patients, including Ward, didn't receive proper care. The report didn't reveal the race of those whose records it examined at the hospital, which predominantly serves black patients. Froedtert Hospital declined to speak to issues raised in the report, according to a February article from the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel, and it had not submitted any corrective actions to federal officials.

> “What black folks are accustomed to in Milwaukee and anywhere in the country, really, is pain not being acknowledged and constant inequities that happen in health care delivery,” Kowalik said.

> The health commissioner herself, a black woman who grew up in Milwaukee, said she's all too familiar with the city's enduring struggles with segregation and racism. Her mother is black and her father Polish, and she remembers the stories they shared about trying to buy a house as a young interracial couple in Sherman Park, a neighborhood once off-limits to blacks.

> “My father couldn't get a mortgage for the house. He had to go to the bank without my mom,” Kowalik said.

> It is the same neighborhood where fury and frustration sparked protests that, at times, roiled into riots in 2016 when a Milwaukee police officer fatally shot Sylville Smith, a 23-year-old black man.

> And it is the same neighborhood that has a concentration of poor health outcomes when you overlay a heat map of conditions, be it lead poisoning, infant mortality – and now, she said, COVID-19.

> Knowing which communities are most impacted allows public health officials to tailor their messaging to overcome the distrust of black residents.

-so they can save the niggers

> "We've been told so much misinformation over the years about the condition of our community," Royal, of the NAACP, said. "I believe a lot of people don't trust what the government says."

> Kowalik has met – virtually – with trusted and influential community leaders to discuss outreach efforts to ensure everyone is on the same page about the importance of staying home and keeping 6 feet away from others if they must go out.

> Police and inspectors are responding to complaints received about "noncompliant" businesses forcing staff to come to work or not practicing social distancing in the workplace. Violators could face fines.

> "Who are we getting these complaints from?" she asked. "Many people of color."

> Residents have been urged to call 211 if they need help with anything from finding something to eat or a place to stay. And the state has set up two voluntary isolation facilities for people with COVID-19 symptoms whose living situations are untenable, including a Super 8 motel in Milwaukee.

> Despite the work being done in Milwaukee, experts like Linda Sprague Martinez, a community health researcher at Boston University's School of Social Work, worry that the government is not paying close enough attention to race, and as the disease spreads, will do too little to blunt its toll.

> "When COVID-19 passes and we see the losses ... it will be deeply tied to the story of post-World War II policies that left communities marginalized," Sprague said. "Its impact is going to be tied to our history and legacy of racial inequities. It's going to be tied to the fact that we live in two very different worlds."

> Update, April 3, 2020: This story has been updated to reflect that Illinois and North Carolina are breaking coronavirus cases down by race.

I think your right, but the timelines are a little off.

Heres my prediction:

By June 1 they will be announcing that corona chan is beaten, they have 'flattened the curve' ... its all over, we can return to normal. The summer will see corona hot spots.

The fall (september) is when it will really begin. She will return, this time with a vengeance, these hot spots will have spiralled out of control, the hospitals will rapidly be overrun. By October the infections will number into the billions! The death toll will number 100m +. Whole countries will shut down. Rapefrica will turn into a free for all. White south africans will be forced to defend thier lands and their families, bush wars, a holdout areas will start to emerge. In south america bolsanaro will enforce martial law, and along with peru and argentina start giving free helicopter rides to anyone they dont like. Columbia, peru, ecuador, and venezuala will turn into narco baron feudal states. Panama will become an international protectorate of the US. Central america will turn into a warzone. The US will invade Mexico as the cartels spiral completely out of control, literally fighting the Mexican government for control of the country. GIBS to NIGS will be turned off. American cities will burn. US Army will deploy inside America, round up niggers and welfare leeches and draft them to go to fight in central America.

Europe will ally itself with Russia and attempt to hold off the muzzies at Constantinople. It will be the tale of 300 in modern warfare! High IQ motivated Euros holding back the shitskin hordes. This will kick off riots all over Europe, which will turn quickly into right wing death squads DOTR style operations. Muzzies and niggers BTFO, coalburners catapulted into bongo bongo land. All women's rights will be revoked, written into the new constitution of the Federated States of Europe. NATO will be disbanded.

The muzzies, unable to make inroads into Europe, and being forever banned from European soil, will turn on Israel. No help will come this time. Europe and America will force Jews to return to Israel. The Israelis will use the Sampson option before all hope is lost. They will incinerate Mecca and Medina, Tehran, and numerous other muzzie cities. The muzzies now positively enraged, frothing at the mouth and screaming will finally overrun the last Israeli defences. The world will watch in real time (by December 2021) as an orgy of rape and murder the likes of which the world has never seen unfolds on our television screens. Finally President Trump will call in Bolton, and have him hand deliver "order .45" to the NSC. The nukes will launch on Christmas Eve. The Muslim world will be annihilated. The Koran declared hate speech and the practice of Islam declared illegal, on pain of death.

The Chinks will already have their own massive revolution, complete with cannibalism, forced sterilizations, slave classes, rape brothels, and every other form of human degeneracy. Putin will move his troops into Mongolia and begin disposing massive chemical weapons attacks all over China, along with pinpoint nuclear strikes, special forces operations to grab nukes etc. A joint Russian American European alliance will form, to create an Iron Dome over China and prevent the use of nukes. China will gassed!!!

The third world war will have been fought. Four billion people will be dead. China will be a toxic waste dump, the Middle East will be the world's largest glass quarry. What remains of Jerusalem will be off limits and considered a memorial to all the fallen. Africa will have been cleansed back to manageable numbers of niggers (maybe 50 million will remain. Large swaths of Africa will remain muzzie dominated, the clean up will take years. Any refugee flows from these areas will be forced to go to Africa (leftover muzzies and Chinks). Jews will number less than 10000 left on the Earth. They too will be forced to make Africa their new home.

Uh huh. Funny how you guys can never actually attack Americans. Whenever you lose the argument you just start claiming your target is a jew and wash your hands. Why is that? Here I'll tell you why: Because you can't attack Americans. You can't because you know every "talking point" you have is a lie of some sort, and gets shoved in your face eventually. So when you lose, you change your target into something you can attack, the hebes. So here you are, following the playbook, losing the argument that you started in the first place, and screeching about jews when the original target was Americans.

Probably some small scale localized stuff this weekend.

I think the real fun will happen before the month is over. We're pretty much just waiting on distribution/retail worker sickouts and strikes to kick things off. I'm sure organized labor has been whispering into the ears of the cashiers and stock boys - just waiting on the order from (((above))).

Power will be the last thing to go. They will hold plant operators at gunpoint on IV drips to keep the lights on. That's ok, complete anarchy is to no-one's benefit.

It'll fall hard much faster than your fan fiction. The only reason the US hasn't already gone full chimpout is because of the promise of amazing amounts of glorious gibs. We will break out into regional violence pretty quick when that plan fails, people are still having to deal with scarcity, are unemployed, still locked in their houses and what's worse- it'll be completely indiscriminate. Everyone will hate the Chinese, which is not misplaced, but they hate each other more and those people are in shooting range. Way things are already falling apart over here with the implementation of the free money it won't be long. Not nearly as long as the bread lines already forming. Remember weak systems will fail from this- you can't lie your way out of a virus. This county's foundation and vis-a-vie the West's has be quicksand for at least 30 years. The whole fucking thing will implode. We will look back on today's modern maps and find ourselves reminiscing.

EU will just never restore Schenzen travel and that's that. European countries will see the horror that has become North America and will start pulling back from the EU to save themselves. Muzzies from Constantinople only wanna get to EU for the gibs- once shit goes sideways their destination plans change. China will probably just get nuked out of spite by some renegade Tom with a sub. I'm ok with that. Either way, brace yourself- we are quickly approaching turbulence.

I'm ok with this. In fact, this should be amplified. Those White Devils must pay. Take it to the suburbs!

Dude you're fucking insane. I was born in North Carolina and I've lived all over the world because my Dad's in the military. I've pretty much lived across the entire east coast + Missouri for a few years. I've also lived in Germany for 2 years. I will say that European cities, especially Brussels, are literally Africa. Europe is certainly nothing like what Americans think it is, and in all the densely populated areas you will struggle to find any white children. HOWEVER, if you honestly believe America is any better off you're fooling yourself. We're only about half-white (if that because all those tens of millions of illegals don't get counted on the census). Out of the half of our country that is white, about 10% are spiritual jews. Those are the antifa/sjw types that hate everything European and just want the white race to die. Another 20-30% of our white population are social democrats/moderate leftists who are basically fine with all the poz up through the 1990's and have no problem becoming minorities as long as they "assimilate" (whatever that means) and have no problem with the destruction of the nuclear family. Another 10-20% of our whites are apathetic normies who don't give a shit about anything. Then the last 20-30% of our whites are cuckservatives or libertarians who are fine with our country becoming brazil as long as some piece of paper is still around (nevermind that said piece of paper has already been amended over 20 times to allow our society to be pozzed). There's maybe like 1-5% of our white population that is actually based, and want to lead traditional lives.

Furthermore, a huge portion of our white population came here in the late 1800's and early 1900's (Italians, Irish, and Eastern Europeans mostly). These whites have only been in America for a century or so, and can't really trace their ancestry to this land. They're not connected to the blood and soil of this country, they came here as refugees or economic immigrants way after our country was already built. Also, because 5-10% of our country is racemixing now, you've got more and more mutts in the genepool. You'd honestly be surprised how many "White" Americans are 1-5% native american, black, or asian, it's honestly pretty depressing when you check out Ancestry sites and see so many white-passing Americans that are actually a few percentage points non-white. Plus, this is just our racial statistics. This doesn't even mention the fact that our entire financial system is completely under jewish control, and that they've controlled our economy since 1913. It also leaves out the total subversion of our education system, where all of our talented youth who might have been good leaders get subverted and become leftist activists. Also it leaves out the fact that men and women hate each other in America because feminism is headquartered in our country and the nuclear family has been devastated since the 1960's because of ((activists))) like Betty Friedan (Goldstein), Linda Gordon, Donna Haraway, etc.

All of our popular media and culture is toxic anti-white bullshit. Our taxes and economy are used to prop up the third world. Our military is unironically the enforcement wing of the Knesset. Our culture has been reduced to wanton materialism and coming out on top of the ratrace. Even the few bastions of WASP America that are still left are now being invaded by NGO's being backed by our own federal government introducing rapefugees and feminism/tranny educators to these areas.

There are still a few million real Americans left, and those people are all worth saving and I feel a kinship with them. Those core WASP Americans are still around, albeit dwindling, and they're really great.

But, they have no power in our country whatsoever. All of our institutions of power are run by jews or spiritual jews who hate european civilization and the white race. We have absolutely no say over anything that happens in America, our government's actions are totally out of our control. The EU is just as bad and they are just as kiked, but to say America and NATO is any better is beyond delusional.

The only decent places left are the piss ant irrelevant white countries that nobody gives a shit about like Finland or Latvia, and even then there are kikes starting to push marxism and rootless cosmopolitan values in those areas.
I love WASP America and our culture and our people and our history. I can trace my ancestry on my Mom's side back to the late 1600's, my relatives have been living in America before America was even a country. I love our civilization, but you're literally batshit if you think anything in our government today is propping up that America.

Also pic related is my own DNA results so you can't call me a kike or eurofag.

India and Africa become completly blessed. China turns the authorianism to 11 and becomes Best Korea 2.0. Students riot in Hong Kong again and this time the PLA gets involved with machine guns. America is still recovering from the Wu Flu but does send a carrier group to Taiwan. Japan, South Korea and Taiwan form a loose alliance to defend against any possible China invasion. North Korea is still closed off. Their infection numbers still unknown but rumored to be low since the entire country is in Wuhan lockdown x 10.

Europe is ravaged but with the exception of Sweden, many countries have severelyrrrestricted access to rapefugees. Greece and Turkey have finally started a shooting war. Italy lends troops while turning back all rapefugee boats by force.

Australia has enough of bullshit chink neo-colonialism and severely retricts ties with China. New Zealand follows suit.

>Dude you're fucking insane.

For what, defending my country? Why is it this, and every other "alternate" website out there slings shit at the U.S. 24/7, but the moment someone dares to defend themselves, it's some kind of horrid crime? Almost all of the anti-American propaganda you lot spew is just that: Propaganda. Why is it "insane" to refute the lies on the internet?

> I was born in North Carolina...Military kid...all over the world...

Okay. I'm an American as well. Why is it you think your opinion is right, and I'm the insane one? Oh that's right, because I'm not a traitor, I'm not down with the propaganda.

> European cities, especially Brussels, are literally Africa

Uh huh, well you're righ>bUUUUUUUUUUUT -insert typical anti-American copy-pasta here about muh non-white, "mutts", lefties, kikes, Etc.

Yes, and as I've been posting, literally everything you guys complain about the United States, is present in your beloved Europe as well. You're missing the point. EVERYTHING you guys use as an anti-American talking point is alive and well in abundance outside of the U.S.. So why fixate on America? Because You've fallen for the propaganda.

>Furthermore, a huge portion of our white population came here in the late 1800's and early 1900's

Yes, those immigrants were straight, white, Christian, family-unit-based people who despite being from different nations than the original settlers, were none the less straight white Christian families. They were Europeans of similar stock. They weren't niggers, mestisos, jews, towelheads, Etc. You are happily forgetting the fact that the original settlers weren't just brits; There were french, dutch, germans. We were already a bit of a European mix.

>Racemixing, mutts, Etc.

There's that propaganda word again: "Mutt". And again, literally everything you've listed is happening in your beloved Europe.

>Jewish control

Okay, but what's that got to do with the usual claim that started this: That Americans don't have a history, a culture of their own? Also, the only reason the kikes are in power is because no one else would step up to the plate. When whites refused to participate in banking, media, pop-culture, anything new, it created a vacuum.

>There are still a few million real Americans left, and those people are all worth saving and I feel a kinship with them. Those core WASP Americans are still around, albeit dwindling, and they're really great.

Yes, so why are you arguing with me and calling me insane? THIS IS EXACTLY THE THING I'M DEFENDING: MY FELLOW MOTHER FUCKING AMERICANS. But you're too brainwashed; All you see is someone not pulling the anti-American line, so you attack me like a good little robot. Beep fucking boop.

>Why is it this, and every other "alternate" website out there slings shit at the U.S. 24/7

Because the American government is run by kikes and spiritual kikes who hate the white race.

Propaganda

First of all, it's not anti-American, it's anti-Zog. Second of all, it isn't propoganda, all of our foreign policy decisions have fucked over european civilization (including the WASPS IN OUR OWN COUNTRY). Jews control all the institutions of power in America, just read The Culture of Critique for Christ's sake.

>Why is it "insane" to refute the lies on the internet?

Because they aren't lies, the U.S. government, economy, and entertainment industry are committed to the destruction of the white race, INCLUDING OUR OWN PEOPLE.

>Okay. I'm an American as well. Why is it you think your opinion is right, and I'm the insane one?

Because it sounds like you're defending the American government, which is the biggest exporter of poz on the planet.

>Yes, and as I've been posting, literally everything you guys complain about the United States, is present in your beloved Europe as well

Exactly, the EU is just as fucked as America.

> EVERYTHING you guys use as an anti-American talking point is alive and well in abundance outside of the U.S.

Yes, but throwing shit at our European brothers who are also struggling to deal with all their poz while sitting in our own pozzed country isn't productive.

You're not helping the nationalist cause when you stir up strife between other dissidents, you just come off as a nuisance. Hence why people call you a kike, because they think you're a shill trying to make us bicker with each other instead of focusing on things that actually matter.

>Yes, those immigrants were straight, white, Christian, family-unit-based people who despite being from different nations than the original settlers, were none the less straight white Christian families. They were Europeans of similar stock. They weren't niggers, mestisos, jews, towelheads, Etc.

You say they weren't niggers but those eastern europeans, italians, and irish vote democrat (explicitly anti-white at this point) way more than Anglo-Saxons. Check out this link:

<https://thealternativehypothesis.org/index.php/2018/08/10/deconstructing-the-white-vote/>

It shows how only English, Germanic, and Scandinavian whites vote for generally based policies. Furthermore, many of these whites were christian, but they weren't protestants. Most of them were catholics, which was a different strain of christianity from the mainline protestantism that had dominated our country through the civil war. I'm not saying Catholicism is inherently evil, but when you add a bunch of people of a different religion, different culture, and different nationality to a WASP society you're going to get a melting pot of people who have forgotten their original identity. Today in America we just call our people white, because they're so mixed that they can't even identify as a single ethnicity (myself included). This is due to all the mixing that occurred in the early 1900's, that diluted the original WASP culture that actually build the American nation.

>There were french, dutch, germans. We were already a bit of a European mix.

Yes, but those of Anglo-Saxon descent were still the majority for the first 100 years of our country. Furthermore, the Germans and the French in Louisiana generally shared the same values as the majority. This is why you didn't see a bunch of German or Dutch ghettos in the 1800's because those people actually assimilated, while our later immigrants didn't really fit into the WASP culture and so distanced themselves from our society.

>There's that propaganda word again: "Mutt"

Because we are literally mutts. Look at my DNA profile. We call each other white because we've forgotten our ancestral roots. We're so mongrelized now that we don't even have a defined ethnic homeland.

>And again, literally everything you've listed is happening in your beloved Europe.

First of all, I'm not European, and second of all I agree. However, Europeans are still much more ethnically intact than we are. While their government is just as pozzed as ours, their people are much more homogenous. Many Europeans can still trace their ancestry back hundreds of years. For instance, Dutch can call themselves Frisians, or French can say they're from Alsace, or Britains from Cornwall, etc. They're deeply connected to their land still.

>Okay, but what's that got to do with the usual claim that started this: That Americans don't have a history, a culture of their own?

I never said that. We do have a culture, the WASP culture, but it's a dwindling culture and our government wants all those people dead.

>Also, the only reason the kikes are in power is because no one else would step up to the plate

Hitler stepped up to the plate. Ian Smith stepped up to the plate. Oswald Mosley stepped up to the plate. George Lincoln Rockwell stepped up to the plate.

Charles Lindbergh stepped up to the plate. General Patton was going to step up to the plate. Unfortunately the American government murdered all of those people because they wanted to save WASP/European culture.

>Yes, so why are you arguing with me and calling me insane?

Because you're acting like a D&C shill, even if you aren't intending to. When you just start shitting on a bunch of Europeans, who are rightfully calling out our ZOG government for being pozzed, you are acting like our government isn't part of the reason why they and we are in that situation to begin with. You need to understand the difference between being anti-American and anti-ZOG. Very few Europeans actually want to genocide all white Americans. When those Europeans are attacking "America" they aren't attacking our people, they are attacking our government, our institutions of power, and all the sjw retards that make up those systems.

I love the American people, but I hate our government, and fully admit that the geopolitical entity known as the United States of America needs to be eradicated off the face of the Earth if we are to have any hope of surviving as a people. I don't want to kill WASP Americans, but I want to destroy our nation. We need a new country, we need a new constitution, to replace the system we have now. Just as the Founding Fathers rebelled against their country and destroyed their nation to create a new one, we need to destroy our country and create a new one that won't be so pozzed.

Learn the difference between anti-American and anti-ZOG. When you defend the American nation it sounds like you're defending our ZOG and shitting on Europeans for getting raped by their pozzed governments that our pozzed government put in charge.

Equating European immigration with what is happening now is rather asinine considering it is high yankee ideals that imported their sweet sweet socially acceptable cheap labor- mind you this goes back to their british tendency of enslaving potato-niggers. The chattle slaves were sent to the South; but it was those old uppity WASPS that fucked the deal for the average guy to begin with after they ran out of Irish to import. Considering my kin spilled blood twice and lost one of those wars for the "American Ideal, not some yankee vision of the United States per se" but would still be classified as mongrels by his definition I take exception and he sounds like a fucking uppity Yankee- which is the exact ideology pressed upon this country and allowed it to devolve into degeneracy from Lincoln fucking forward. That yankee do something about it spirit in control of the Federal government can kiss my ass. Fuck off, let me do my shit and leave me alone. Sorry you don't agree with my form of labor. But this is an old D&C tactic.

Either way, maybe out of the ashes a new Republic or Republics can be formed. A festering little microcosm of different social experiments with nuclear weapons. The checkpoints are going to be a blast! I hope this time they use geographic features not random lines to draw the new maps. Would make for much more interesting geography. It wouldn't be a bad thing to rip off the rotten siding and let the bitch split up since DC decided it is Moscow. The tree needs watering lads, and this may turn out to be that time- when it is will be obvious to everyone at once and plenty of opportunities will present themselves. >Yes, but throwing shit at our European brothers who are also struggling to deal with all their poz while sitting in our own pozzed country isn't productive. You're not helping the nationalist cause when you stir up strife between other dissidents

Pot calling the kettle black. I'm stirring up strife? Funny, when you lot are shitting on Americans 24/7, none of you give a damn, but the instant an American stands up and does literally the same thing back, suddenly it's this "no more brother wars" bullshit. I have never seen one of you guys bring this up when you're bashing the United States. Where is your concern for solidarity when Americans are being put to the coals? Right, it doesn't exist. You're a hypocrite. You're playing the part of the "true American" while shitting all over any and every person who dares defend America.

Oh yeah baby, here's an interesting part of the ole playbook: When America fails in something, it's "lol stupid Americans", but when Americans succeed at something, either it's a "lie", or it's "the kikes". You invalidate anything Americans do because you have to to serve your agenda.

>You say they weren't niggers

Wrong. You were claiming the immigrants of the 1800/1900's, the Italians, Irish, so on weren't white enough, that they were polluting the American pool. I pointed out that the American population at that point was already comprised of pretty much the same stock. Lying to win the point I see. The rest of your argument is purity spiraling. You claim to not want "divide and conquer", but are engaging in divide and conquer by gatekeeping who is and isn't white enough.

>Because we are literally mutts

Wrong. AND you're contradicting yourself. You go to great lengths about:

>but those of Anglo-Saxon descent were still the majority for the first 100 years of our country.

So a hundred years counts as "American" but the next hundred doesn't? You're just a LARPer who wants to be special.

> Europeans are still much more ethnically intact than we are. While their government is just as pozzed as ours, their people are much more homogenous. Again moving goalposts. Americans don't get to claim their heritage, but your pet euros do.

>I never said that. We do have a culture,

Yeah, because I caught you. Your buddies make that claim all the time.

>Hitler... Ian Smith... Oswald Mosley ... George Lincoln Rockwell ... Charles Lindbergh... General Patton was going to step up to the plate. Unfortunately the American government murdered all of those people

So Hitler was making movies? Patton was writing comic books? You geeks cry about the jews being all over the media, but none of you are participating. Made any video games? Wrote and songs? Run any YT channels to reach the masses? Nope. You're here on the internet, waiting for someone else to do the work, waiting for hitler 2.0.

>muh ZOGZOGZOG everything I don't like is da jo00os

>the United States of America needs to be eradicated off the face of the Earth I AM America, faggot. You get to go through me first. But you won't do shit. You'll just sit in front of your screen crying impotently, then wonder why the world is in the shitter.

>Just make sure to distinguish the American nation and the American people.

She cannot be stopped by social distancing or lockdowns, and the Goddess keeps getting deadlier, killing jews and other subhumans at increasing pace, with case fatality at 21 percent and rising. Soon, all false hope for cure or herd immunity will fade, economies will collapse, and governments will fall. The jew and its clown world ends here.

True, I think this won't be settled until months later, in other European countries they're comparing the month of March's typical death rate for that month, with other years. Overall, but this is preliminary still, they find a bigger spike than reported through corona infections related. The reason for this is that people in countries like Germany, UK and notably Holland, die without even having been to a hospital, because of the rapid onset and the protracted approach of onboarding new patients to hospitals (see GP first, they decide if you get to go to a hospital). I think you may be right about Italy, but I also think we won't know for sure for a while to come still. I don't know how good influenza death rate data is typically. I do know they have been tracking it for a few years now in the EU. And that by looking at typical death rates for a particular month, you take that into consideration as well (flu seasons etc).

War will not come I think. In fact, you could say that the Spanish flu contributed to the ending of WW1. The Jew Kissinger wrote a piece in WSJ Friday which describes it. I think the US will fail this test. The world order ends, not with a war but with a corona-laden fart. <http://archive.is/cyItf>

If you look at the maps, and the race-population density plots, the blacks most affected are the ones next to Han population centers, particularly at the larger metro areas near international airports (travel) and big universities (Han populations).

It is actually quite predictable. And unless the niggers among them take off their weaves and fucking bathe, it won't matter if they isolate or not - fungusfag will get them as associated infection death. And they still won't be counted as corona-chan'ed.

Just think, segregation of blacks from their Han chinese neighbors would have prevented this.

Squat In Your Homes Armed Or End Up On The Streets!

Biggest Wave Of Mortgage Delinquencies In History Is Near

Unlike in the 2008 financial crisis when a glut of subprime debt, layered with trillions in CDOs and CDO squareds, sent home prices to stratospheric levels before everything crashed scarring an entire generation of homebuyers, this time the housing sector is facing a far more conventional problem: the sudden and unpredictable inability of mortgage borrowers to make their scheduled monthly payments as the entire economy grinds to a halt due to the coronavirus pandemic. And unfortunately this time the crisis will be far worse, because as Bloomberg reports mortgage lenders are preparing for the biggest wave of delinquencies in history. And unless the plan to buy time works - and as we reported earlier there is a distinct possibility the Treasury's plan to provide much needed liquidity to America's small businesses may be on the verge of collapse - an even worse crisis may be coming: mass foreclosures and mortgage market mayhem. Borrowers who lost income from the coronavirus, which is already a skyrocketing number as the 10 million new jobless claims in the past two weeks attests, can ask to skip payments for as many as 180 days at a time on federally backed mortgages, and avoid penalties and a hit to their credit scores. But as Bloomberg notes, it's not a payment holiday and eventually homeowners they'll have to make it all up.

According to estimates by Moody's Analytics chief economist Mark Zandi, as many as 30% of Americans with home loans - about 15 million households - could stop paying if the U.S. economy remains closed through the summer or beyond.

"This is an unprecedented event," said Susan Wachter, professor of real estate and finance at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania. She also points out another way the current crisis is different from the 2008 GFC: "The great financial crisis happened over a number of years. This is happening in a matter of months - a matter of weeks."

Meanwhile lenders - like everyone else - are operating in the dark, with no way of predicting the scope or duration of the pandemic or the damage it will wreak on the economy. If the virus recedes soon and the economy roars back to life, then the plan will help borrowers get back on track quickly. But the greater the fallout, the harder and more expensive it will be to stave off repossessions.

"Nobody has any sense of how long this might last," said Andrew Jakabovics, a former Department of Housing and Urban Development senior policy adviser who is now at Enterprise Community Partners, a nonprofit affordable housing group. "The forbearance program allows everybody to press pause on their current circumstances and take a deep breath. Then we can look at what the world might look like in six or 12 months from now and plan for that."

But if the economic turmoil is long-lasting, the government will have to find a way to prevent foreclosures - which could mean forgiving some debt, said Tendayi Kapfudz, Chief Economist at LendingTree. And with the government now stuck in "bailout everyone mode", the risk of allowing foreclosures to spiral is just too great because it would damage financial markets and that could reinfect the economy, he explained.

"I expect policy makers to do whatever they can to hold the line on a financial crisis," Kapfudz said hinting at just a trace of a conflict of interest as his firm may well be next to fold if its borrowers declare a payment moratorium.

"And that means preventing foreclosures by any means necessary."

They are literally bribing subhumans so they don't chimp out and go around spreading the disease. Governments follow the path of least resistance, whites have food and are less likely to chimp out so they are not prioritized. Governments don't care who deserves something more, they are mostly parasitic entities seeking to protect their voter base. This is all a negative spiral which leads to each country becoming another Liberia, but we all know (((who))) to thank for that. If whites were united, organized and ready to show teeth like kikes, mudslimes and even some niggers are, they would get concessions from their governments too.

> however 90% is "han chinese"

That makes them rather homogeneous, no? Regardless of who their fathers are.

>the primary differences are political and religious

Other than disagreeing on various hive policies, and ZOG backed Christian, Muslim etc. groups, along with occasional deluded student believing lies about "democracy", they are pretty monolithic. It's just that those "differences" get hyped and blown out of proportions in the western media.

>there is also a massive disconnect between classes

Just like everywhere else. But wait, they already have "communism", don't they?

>also china has 1.2 billion people

Meaning that a lot of them are disposable and can be used for various purposes >and even in the best of times they are reduced to eating rats and bugs to survive

Compared to average westerner who can't eat a steak if it's too fried or rare, or only their specific brand of soy milk Not to mention not having their stomachs and immune systems adjusted for processing less appetizing food ... Guess who is more likely to survive?

>because typically in the past most chinese revolutions have resulted in the victors literally eating the losers

Zero waste policy, eh. More food and less corpses to deal with. Very progressive, kikes would love it.

> they are truly a soulless bug people

I agree, but they are not to be underestimated. Stop projecting your values and qualities on other races, this is what got us in this situation to begin with.

I guess now many will realize that you can't "emancipate" non-whites and that they will behave according to their nature regardless of how much you try to make them "equal" . Many people are up to a very rude awakening. Nice fan fiction, but I doubt it will work like that.

>By June 1 they will be announcing that corona chan is beaten, they have 'flattened the curve'

Maybe even earlier than that. They expect the economy to resume soon, which explains the 'helicopter money'. People need financial stimulus to kickstart the economic activity once the quarantine is lifted, it's not like any of that money is backed by anything tangible anyway. It's economic CPR, literally. However, many things will not be as they used to be, just like after 9/11.

>its all over, we can return to normal

They will most likely resume some economic activities while keeping draconian oppressive measures "preemptively" . This is where Agenda 21 fully kicks in. People will be happy that -some- of their rights are returned, forgetting about the rest that were taken. "War on Corona" becomes the new "war on terrorism" , dissidents are "infected" and killed, population gets conditioned to worse and worse living conditions, forcefully chipped/vaccinated and deprived of what little humanity they have left, followed by all the other nightmare ZOG scenarios. I wouldn't be surprised if (((king of the world))) shows his face during this time to (((save humanity))) or (((unite the world))). This is the bad ending.

>The summer will see corona hot spots. The fall (september) is when it will really begin. She will return, this time with a vengeance, these hot spots will have spiralled out of control, the hospitals will rapidly be overrun. If the virus threat actually is as great as portrayed in the (((media))) or worse, then this short-term release of the valve will lead to total collapse once the next wave kicks in, and all sorts of wars resulting from that collapse. Most people are still hoping that their lives are returning to normal soon which is what keeps the society running. Once that hope is gone ... Expect a lot of chimpouts, rebellions, border wars, regional wars, or even a world war. Armies (what's left of them) won't have much choice. And there are no rules in love and war as they say, meaning that we might see even worse pathogens, nukes and other WMD's overtly or covertly released under the 'fog of war' created by this virus. There are many opportunistic people out there. Then we might actually get The Happening that we were all waiting for. For real. This is the good ending. What kind of world will emerge from this? It's hard to tell. Will it be ELE or return of the nature's finest?

FEDERAL TSP MILLIONAIRES DROPPED

>In January 2020, FedSmith published an article entitled Surging Number of Federal Employee Millionaires. At that time, there were 49,620 millionaires in the Thrift Savings Plan (TSP).

>With what amounts to a mandated economic depression now in effect in America, it is not surprising that the stock market has dropped dramatically.

>Millions of people are filing for unemployment as companies are closing down (some temporarily, some probably closing permanently), cable news is spouting the latest projections for the number of people who will die 24 hours a day, and millions of people are sitting at home watching TV and probably getting depressed watching the news, and people are not rushing out to buy stocks in anticipation of a big move up in stock prices.

Latest Number of TSP Millionaires

>The number of millionaires in the TSP dropped from 49,620 in December 2019 to 27,212 as of March 31st. This is a decrease of more than 45%.

>The person with the largest TSP balance had $7,395,476.29 on December 31st. On March 31st, the largest account balance was $6,375,795—a decrease in value of almost 14%. We do not know if the person with the highest value TSP in December is the same person with the highest value TSP in March 2019.

>Changing Number of TSP Millionaires

>To put this in perspective, in January 2012 there were just over 200 TSP millionaires. A dramatic increase in stock market prices raised that number to 512 in March 2013 and zoomed up to 4,617 in February 2015.

>Early in 2016, FedSmith reported a dramatic drop in the number of millionaires with a reported number of 3,272—a 21.5% decline from one year to the next but still a much smaller number that we have seen in the last several years.

>The recent loss in the value of TSP accounts is easy to understand. In March, the C Fund dropped 12.4% and it is down 19.65% for the year-to-date.

>The S Fund has had a more dramatic loss: 21.40% in March and 28.14% for the year-to-date.

>The only TSP funds that are up so far in 2020 and the G Fund (up 0.4%) and the F Fund (up 3.10%).

>Despite the drop in the number of millionaires in 2015, the number of millionaires increased dramatically as the bull market in stocks continued for a number of years.

>While the latest numbers are discouraging, past history indicates we will again see an increase in this number when the bear market ends and stocks again increase in value. No one knows, of course, when that will occur. But, for those who aspire to become one among this fortunate number of TSP investors, canceling your stock investments during the current downturn in the economy will not raise your TSP investments to the magic million number.

>For an analysis of what it takes to become a TSP millionaire, check out this article detailing what it takes to get to this level.

The original paper states that the tested some cats "after the outbreak", though we know there still is an outbreak. I don't if that means the cats have similar illness period or period of transmissibility. The paper did say that the cats most likely to contract Corona-chan and have large ratios of antibodies were cats that were owned by Coronavirus patients.

There was also this in the paper:

>However, no double gene positive sample was detected. The reason might be (1) that the viral RNA load is too low to be detected; (2) as SARS-CoV (Martina et al., 2003), the period that cat shed SARS-CoV-2 may be very short, along with asymptomatic infection, we didn't catch the moment of acute infection; (3) there may be variants in the genomic sequences in cats, leading to the failure in amplification in cat samples.

So there's a possibility that Corona-chan doesn't affect cats as badly as humans. Still, I would keep your kitten safe with you inside and not let it roam about to prevent it from contract the virus from a nearby source. I don't think kennel quarantines are necessary or safer.

Here's the paper:

Retail Companies On Bankruptcy Watch Is Growing Fast Amid Coronavirus Crisis
>Closed for business! That is the sign on the doors of non-essential retailers in 45 states, with "non-essential" being defined as stores that trade in discretionary (clothing, home furnishings, electronics, beauty) as opposed to life-preserving products (food, pharmacies, cleaning supplies). Closures are expected to extend through April 30, but given the unpredictable nature of the coronavirus pandemic, local closures could be mandated longer.

>Adding up the major national non-essential retailers impacted, Neil Saunders of GlobalData Retail estimates more than 190,000 stores have been closed, accounting for nearly 50% of U.S. retail square footage. That effectively closes down the nation's roughly 1,200 malls and most stores in strip shopping centers and on America's Main Streets.

>To say this is going to be devastating to American retailers is to put it mildly. With little to no revenues coming in for non-essential retailers through at least the end of April, other than sales from digital channels, retailers will face a day of reckoning later this year or early next.

Credit rating downgrades

>That day just got closer for nine major retailers, as Fitch downgraded credit ratings for:

>Capri Holdings (Michael Kors, Versace, Jimmy Choo)

>Dillard's

>J.C. Penney

>Kohl's

>Levi Strauss

>Macy's

>Nordstrom

>Signet (Kay Jewelers, Zales, Jared, Piercing Pagoda)

>Tapestry (Coach, Kate Spade, Stuart Weitzman)

>In addition, this week S&P downgraded L Brands (Victoria's Secret) and Gap. And to add insult to injury, S&P moved Macy's from its stellar S&P 500 to S&P SmallCap 600 list.

>In Fitch's credit downgrade, its model assumed these nine retailers would not open until mid-May and that revenues would fall by a stunning 90%, assuming a limited shift of sales to digital channels. The credit agency also assumed sales at these retailers would remain down double-digits in 2021.

>"Credit ratings agencies use a complex calculation that includes not just sales trends, but also when debt is coming due," says BDO's David Berliner. "A lot of lenders may not want to force liquidation so they will give loan extensions and kick the problem down the road because they can't handle that many distressed companies at once."

>"Just like hospitals, lenders will want to flatten the curve to not be overwhelmed and only deal with the ones where there is nothing that's going to help them," Berliner adds.

>The recently downgraded retailers are all venerable brands, but not all are guaranteed to make it due to the damage caused by COVID-19.

Bankruptcy report

>And even if all these downgraded retailers survive, Berliner is sure that many more won't. He's the expert, being a BDO Advisory partner in bankruptcy and restructuring and co-author of BDO's "Retail in the Red" bi-annual report, the latest of which was just released in March and reported retail bankruptcies in the second half of 2019 though the first two months of 2020.

>Prepared just as the coronavirus was breaking, the report shows the pace of bankruptcies accelerated somewhat from 2018 to 2019 - 20 vs. 22 - but could go off the charts in the second half of 2019 and into 2020.

>"For quite a while, we have seen department stores that anchor malls struggling, which has hurt a lot of specialty apparel and shoe retailers that fill malls," Berliner says.

>"Then there is the trend of more shopping going online and retailers having way too many physical stores. Now with COVID-19 in the mix, it is really going to accelerate the trends with more store closures and ultimate failures," he adds.

The strong will get stronger, the marginal weaker, and the weak will die
>During the coronavirus shutdown, the government has provided a lifeline to what are defined as essential retailers which can remain open during the crisis, including mass merchandisers and dollar stores that sell food and household supplies, grocery and drug stores, hardware stores, convenience stores and e-commerce retailers. These retailers are likely to emerge stronger than before.
>As for non-essential brick-and-mortar retailers that sell everything else, they are left out in the cold.

>"The big retailers are going to do really well and benefit from this, but there is going to be a lot of distress for marginal retailers with many that won't make it. Then malls will close. We are going to see a heightened and accelerated retail transformation," he says adding that it is long overdue.

>"We simply have too many stores in the U.S. compared to other industrialized Western countries," Berliner shares. "Many retailers haven't taken the necessary steps to right-size their operations because of long-term leases that made it too expensive to close stores."

>As for the retailers on the brink, Berliner points to those retailers that were forced to close stores before the coronavirus. "Since we began our biannual bankruptcy tracking, we have found that retailers closing stores are often a precursor for an eventual bankruptcy filing," he explains.

>In 2019, the list of retailers closing 25 or more stores include:

>Christopher & Banks CBK (30-40)

>Express (66)

>Gap (230) and downgraded by S&P

>GNC (230)

>H&M (160)

>JC Penney JCP (94) and downgraded by Fitch

>K-Mart (45)

>Macy's M (125) and downgraded by Fitch and S&P

>Newell Brands NWL (100)

>Olympia Sports (76)

>Sears (51)

>Victoria's Secret (53) and downgraded by S&P

>Walgreens WAG (195)

>During the second half of 2019, many retailers that were on previous store closing lists filed, including Charming Charlie, Barney's, A'Gaci, Avenue Stores, Sugarfina, Fred's, Forever 21, Destination Maternity. And in 2020, Papyrus, Lucky's Market, Earth Fare, Pier 1, and Modell's Sporting Goods DKS joined the list of filers.

>However, Pier 1 and Modell's were late filers and their plans have been put on hold because the current crisis has made liquidation of assets impossible. "In a perverse way, we aren't going to see many filings during the COVID-19 crisis. They are going to have to wait for a better time to liquidate," he says.

>And liquidation, rather than reorganization or restructuring, is going to be the most likely end game of the bankruptcy filings that ultimately result.

>"Based on the recent trends with retail bankruptcy filings, I suspect we will see an increase in liquidations and few reorganizations," he says. "I also think there will be more asset sales, where pieces of failing retailers, which may only be certain good store locations and the intellectual property assets, are sold in Bankruptcy code section 363 asset sales."

Consumers are going to determine the winners and losers

>Just as way too many retailers went into the coronavirus weakened with too much debt and brick-and-mortar exposure, American consumers are also facing the crisis in a weakened state. Their credit cards are maxed out and savings non-existent as they live paycheck to paycheck with nothing to fall back on.

>"We are seeing some very distressing trends regarding consumer borrowing," Berliner warns, noting that Americans have increased borrowing for the 22nd straight quarter so that by the end of 2019, household debt exceeded $14 trillion for the first time.

>"Household debt is now $1.5 trillion over its previous peak in 2008," he reports. "We all remember what happened after that."

>"Now we are in this climate where people are losing their jobs and hunkering down. Consumer confidence plummeted in March, as expected. Consumer behavior is going to be a real wildcard," he says. "I don't know if they will go back to the way they shopped before COVID-19, or even if they will be able to."

>And even if they do return to stores once they reopen, what will department stores and fashion retailers, in particular, have to offer? Last season's merchandise not the current season's, which only underscores the weakness in the retail supply chain.

>"Everybody is canceling orders, so the goods aren't going to be coming in for summer or fall," Berliner remarks. "It's going to take quite a while to ramp the supply chain back up to get the goods over here. So that's going to be another big factor separating the weak from the strong. The supply chain is going to hurt a lot of retailers on the backend."

>While he sees weak prospects for fashion in the post-coronavirus retail world, Berliner thinks that all the time people have spent at home will benefit retailers that offer decorative home furnishings. However, big-ticket purchases, like furniture, will likely be put on hold. He also sees growing demand for kitchen gadgets, housewares, and countertop food preparation items, though there again, major appliances might see weaker demand.

>With the threat of a global recession mounting by the day, Berliner says the disparity between the strong and weak retailers is going to become even more pronounced.

>"Bottom line, I expect there will be fewer retail chains surviving post-COVID-19 and the surviving chains, particularly apparel and other mall-based specialty stores, will reduce the number of brick & mortar store locations," he concludes.

But then how can they evict, foreclose, and liquidate bankruptcies?
You have to think of short term profits.

>Evict your renters before they damage your properties

>Evict your renters so that you can get new, paying renters

>Foreclose your properties so that you can bring in a new batch of mortgage holders or redevelop the land

>Liquidate failed businesses for that quick money

>Keep taxing everything and everyone

WHERE'S MY MONEY?

U PAY ME NAO

The only way to fix this is:

Abolish state and federal income tax

Abolish property taxes on personal property non-business property

Abolish payroll tax

Close the borders

Deport all illegals

Abolish foreign aid

Charge all foreign entities for everything, abolish NGOs and non-profits which export anything including labor.

Use ITAR regulations to completely eliminate the export of all bio-medical technologies and safety equipment.

COVid19 PRO TIP I'll ONLY share with my anons.

No need to go without a mask. Buy some what they call aquarium "filter floss" (it looks like cotton but stays fluffed up when wet) and sew a sheet of it between two pieces of cloth leaving a velcro closeable opening at one end to change the sheet every several days. Masks work by creating a barrier that captures the virus as it travels a convoluted path through the material. A 1/4 to 1/2 inch thick sheet of filter floss will work even better than all these surgical masks, far, Far better. Breathing will be made unnoticeably more difficult. Make sure the floss is made of polystyrene or such material as these fibers are sticky to the virus and it gets stuck very very quickly.

>What's a "gene positive sample"?

From my super secret research Qwant/Startpage/DuckDuckJew readings, you have to include the word "double" to understand this term. When using PCR tests, the test is trying to force a sample to begin copying whatever DNA or RNA sequences it possesses. If the sample is the very thing you are trying to find, the PCR test will be successful in the copy process and the resulting chemical reaction will active a colored band (or a positive signal if it's digital) signifying that the reaction took place. Depending on the number of viruses, if there are enough, the PCR test will have multiple strands being exponentially copied at once and the resulting reaction will show multiple bands (or multiple signals) signifying that multiple strands were exponentially copied and that wherever the sample was collected is on the rise or hump of an exponential growth curve. The qRT in "qRT-PCR" simply is the means to transform RNA into DNA so the main PCR test can work because Corona-chan is a RNA virus.

You can read more here: <https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/probe/docs/techpcr/> and here: <https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/probe/docs/techqpcr/> tl;dr One band, post-illness, means there are not many Corona-chans in Chinese Nyaa and our pretty kitties has sufficient antibodies to fight off /ourgirl/'s retreating daughterus. Two bands means there are many Corona-chans in Chinese Nyaa.

>431 confirmed deaths

Regional breakdown: 527 cases and 16 deaths in the north, 1642 cases and 59 deaths in the northeast, 6295 cases and 329 deaths in the southeast, 675 cases and 10 death in the mid-west and 1139 cases and 17 deaths in the south.

Or this virus really isn't that bad and we are all being manipulated into a state of fear and control. That's what is going to happen. The gibs aren't going to stop (at least not artificially). We'll continue this until everyone is broke then go into a world government of shit dependence on the state. I don't think a big nationalist awaking is going to happen and we all get to LARP our fantasies. I think it's just going to get worse and worse.

As of right now, I think people are waking up to the fact that at least in America, the virus is not as bad as you think it is. I live in a "hot spot." A big one. Hospitals aren't overrunning. A bunch of my health care worker friends have gone home because the hospitals are so empty. The ICUs aren't even filled. Most wu-flu patients just go home to coof. With this information, I do not think our reaction is proportional. I think we are being misled so we can plunge ourselves into a thousand years of darkness. Wake the fuck up.

It has been known since the Romans beat the Macedonian phalanx that a huge factor in winning battles is the ability of the individual soldier or squad to think quickly and tactically. Chosin Reservoir comes to mind for me. It was a "defeat" but a very intersting battle. US forces were surrounded by a better supplied and numerically superior Chinese army. By all measures the US forces should have all been killed or imprisoned. No, it's more like a pain in the bones and unrelated to breathing, it applies when bending down. Probably unrelated to the chinese virus, my temperature has remained at 35.9 - 37.1 for the last two weeks.

Hello again friends.

Lets share some goodies from the rabbit hole:

>>90083

CC is dangerous for Spain. Consider "erythrocyte hemoglobin" (HbA1c), the hemoglobin of the red blood cells, and myoglobin, the oxygen-carrying protein of red blood cells. Their local mutated variant of the virus is capable of multiplying rapidly and it can disseminate from person to person. This means that unprotected people coming into contact with a mosquito carrying the virus can have an extremely high chance of being infected, whether they are healthy or not.

<How can I protect myself?

Maintain a mosquito repellent that contains DEET (N,N-diethyl-meta-toluamide) for both hands and feet.

>>89072

Big cruise ships are a threat during corona virus outbreaks considering the genetic ichor-rich nature of many biologic organisms that are harbored in their containers. This microbial life may be high in temperature, moisture, and oxygen, making it more likely for virus replication, proliferation, and spread. Cruise ship residents also carry a great variety of harmful microbes that are new to each individual.

>>89359

>No case of food transmission yet

This depends on what you define as food. Batsoup can most certainly get you infected with worse things than CC if you are unlucky.

All of those are fairly accurate except the infection in brain. CC cannot infect the brain due to erythrocyte uptake properties of the plasma membrane as these cells work on a much higher level than brain cells. Erythrocytes are water soluble molecules that can readily get on to the brain surface which means that the virus cannot get a foothold. There have been cases of people having things such as "herpes in the brain" but it is extremely unlikely unless the virus "evolves" further.

As a thanks for your updates fellow hue, here's some OC for you:

>Animals, brazil and corona:

- The brazil economic situation will make the spread of the corona virus among animals worse due to ick. If the animal's saliva has a high concentration of semen virus, its eventual breeding rates will be reduced, but the virus will continue to spread within the animal population due to transference from the human host. Encephalization by corona virus can result in prolonged morbidity, and they are more susceptible to vaccines. Therefore, the pandemic spread of this virus is imminent and will soon reach the animal population. So far the air has been the main vector, but the population level of animals is another important factor to consider.

>First on /pnd/: CoronaChan hates the vegans.

- Avoid soy-based food during a corona virus outbreak due to the genetic vernix isthmus that exists in the soybeans and the presence of lipid soluble (low molecular weight) viruses on the soybeans. This ability to develop a new virus is caused by an ability to utilize or create new transgenes in the soybean's DNA, such as the ability to transgene a mutated virus to an unaltered virus, or create new genetic parts of the viruses that bypass the genetic barrier that prevents normal virus replication. All these possibilities give soybeans the potential to spread either to human or animal populations as a result of biological invasions of these non-mutated or mutated virus cells

Many of the africans have taken antibiotics to such a degree that they have developed resistance to it. They are up for a treat with corona chan once the antivirals alone (without the antibiotics) show little or no response.

>>90132

>COVID

Corvids are different from other birds if you compare their genetic structure in relation to the Corona virus (viruses that is known to have been prevalent in birds dating back over 150 million years). There is some evidence that both the virus and the genetics that makes corvids susceptible to it have been found in non-avian dinosaurs.

>>89521

The first signs of infection by the human corona virus are erythema migrans (which Boris is showing clear signs of obviously), or "iceflakes" in the eye, which are referred to as corneal ulcers, according to the FDA.. This poor guy is just in the first phases and It is only beginning.

Random drops:

- Yaroslav Jews in Russia who converted to Christianity were very fearful of infecting their families with bubonic plague, although the risk was low. Why?
- Boris pregnant GF infected
- CDC telling everyone to wear a scarf now
- Almost all top articles on virology are written by chinese. Very suspect.(See pic related)

<https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pubmed/32104915>

>The neuroinvasive potential of SARS-CoV2 may play a role in the respiratory failure of COVID-19 patients.

>Increasing evidence shows that coronaviruses are not always confined to the respiratory tract and that they may also invade the central nervous system inducing neurological diseases. The infection of SARS-CoV has been reported in the brains from both patients and experimental animals, where the brainstem was heavily infected. Furthermore, some coronaviruses have been demonstrated able to spread via a synapse-connected route to the medullary cardiorespiratory center from the mechanoreceptors and chemoreceptors in the lung and lower respiratory airways.

Guys two constables (police) hunted me for two days to ask me about some posters. I thought they were going to put me in psych ward again for posting suicidal ideation online or something. Anyways someone put out posters around Waterloo, Ontario. I didn't get to read more than just a fragment but it used the words "Nordic" and "Negro" in it and seemed to be talking about nCov. I am wondering who made those posters and what the full posters look like and what they said. I may have some advice also on how to do your poster more efficiently and how to not get caught by forensics and some ideas on effective propaganda techniques. Also if you respond to this post please do so from behind Tor and proxy chain if you can from a secure platform or at least don't go bare IP unless want a confrontation with the police since they're searching for you...>Sorry. The owner of this board has decided not to allow Tor posters for some reason...

Okay whoever runs this board is a fucking asshole. Now I got to post from a proxy without the benefit of adding Tor into the mix.

Edit 3: My god I keep trying to submit this post and the site is so fucking slow and various non-five eyes country proxies like Russia won't work. Do I have to select a proxy in fucking America or something? Fuck it, this post is highly identifying anyways with little plausible deniability, just hope the responding anon is more successful in covering his tracks.

Edit 4: My fucking god this is taking me like a half hour just to make one post why god whyyyyyyyyyyyyyyyy... finally found a working Japanese proxy and it loads dgg but it won't load the DNSBLS Bypass!

Edit 6: Fuck it just going to post bare IP I have no choice nothing works on this shitty site.

CORONA KILLS NIGGERS

<https://www.osw.waw.pl/en/publikacje/analyses/2020-03-25/sweden-liberal-strategy-fighting-coronavirus-pandemic>

>Cultural conditions may also have an impact on Sweden's less stringent approach to the COVID-19 pandemic. Swedish citizens tend to observe the recommendations regarding social distancing. They do not cultivate many and particularly close social relations and for this reason more rigorous restrictions to curb the spread of the virus may not be necessary at this stage. This strategy may however bring about a higher mortality rate in groups with immigration background who have closer family ties and have a more limited access to information, poorer housing conditions and live in neighbourhoods with a lower standard of healthcare (in the region of Stockholm six Swedish citizens of Somali heritage have died due to coronavirus).

<https://archive.fo/OTrl9>

More Somalis are dying of coronavirus in Sweden than any other group

>The virus has been reported in the Jarva area of Stockholm, which includes districts Kista-Rinkeby and Tensta, and around 90 percent of the population coming from an immigrant background.

>A local doctor suggested the virus may have spread during Friday prayers at a local mosque, but blamed authorities for not spreading information about how the disease is transmitted earlier.

>"When [coronavirus] spread to Sweden, there was not so much information in Somali, and many continued living as usual," Jihan Mohamed, a board member of the Swedish Somali Medical association, told the publication.

>"Many live in cramped quarters there. Several generations can live in the same apartment," he added.

>One quarter of the people who have died from coronavirus in the UK have come from Muslim backgrounds, which has been put down to the same factors.

My question is this:

How, during a pandemic, do you not have the least bit of personal curiosity about viruses to learn how a virus differs from a cell in the first place?

Forget the fact that this is a journalist writing, and an editor signing off on that laughingstock bait of a headline.

How do these normies not have the basic survival instincts to learn the basics before going in front of hundreds of thousands of people and embarrassing themselves by using complete retard-tier terminology and spreading misinfo that they don't understand or verify?

Clearly the answer is no.

And daily reminder: the idea of finding cures or treatments for viruses that aren't vaccines is fucking retarded. You better hope this is a virus that can be treated with a vaccine and that vaccines won't just give people cytokine storms and kill them because there never has been and never will be a cure for love.

Still doesn't seem like a winning prospect if you're China. They clearly don't have a cure, Corona-chan is resurgent since the CCP has put the economy ahead of the lives of its citizens probably the sensible call in their case, and it's crippling the economies of their major trading partners.

I could see the CCP using this as an excuse to solidify their power and go full Eternal Empire Under Xi, but that doesn't translate into China becoming a superpower. The big reason they even built a middle class was from stealing tech from other, smarter countries and taking advantage of others' greed.

Would appreciate a knowledgeable anon red pilling me on China if I'm misunderstanding them, though.

While burgers are busy they could buyout europoors easily and strip ZOG of valuable assets. Their advantage window to start a war was closing, only 15 to 20 years left.

I never expect to one day see the Pajeets being this badass. Maybe they still have some Aryan spirit left in them, even if it's just a little bit.

>Thats what i call "shit-flinging"

Well if there's one thing they're good at, it's that. They practice a lot, after all.

You're unfortunately right about that. But there's still that teeny tiny glimpse of hope that maybe the Pajeets will go berserk once their population starts dying off in droves and declare war on the chinks.

This all tends to happen when you allow your government to decimate your manufacturing infrastructure for cheap products. Of course this ends up masking the real health of your economy. Now everyone is seeing how this desire for dirt cheap products has cost us dearly. President Trump is loving this. He is showing EVERYONE how we have been FUCKED by a desire for a lousy 25%-30% discount on the things we buy. And we get mostly crappy cheap products that disintegrate into uselessness inside of a year besides. LOVELY Its going to be a real bitch, but with good incentives manufacturing will return BIGLY, and imports will become comprised of mostly raw materials and pre made parts to be assembled here.

Now maybe our President can make the VERY strong argument that the products Americans use are better off made right hear in the USA. Sure we will all pay more, but in exchange for good decent paying jobs with the right perks, much higher quality products and a eventual return to overall domination around the globe in all areas not just militarily. Trumps popularity rising even now with so much dour news is telling. Lots of folks waking up to the globohomo scam! As an aside, the chans are seeing tons more lurkers than you can imagine. I overheard some ladies in the office during my coffee break discussing how the chans have made them far better informed than they have been before in spite of the chans toxic nature. If you knew who these 7 ladies were you would realize that their talking about the chans was as improbable as winning the Powerball Lotery just a few short months ago.

It will need to be a combination of onshoring of manufacturing and penalties against importing completed products from China, probably through heavy tariffs.
Otherwise, you'll always have companies importing from China and offering stuff at lower prices to undercut competition. Even if the competition's product is better, normalfags are more immediately swayed by cost. How do you think we got into our current predicament?

major tip, turn your screen grayscale (some phones can, ipads can, many monitors can). Additionally, on some systems, you can invert colors. On some, you can even combine them. Generally you can tell what something is, basically, by it requires just a bit of thinking, which removes the power of images.

That said, it may be better to simply get a stronger stomach. It's funny there are people here now, under the eternal summer of coronachan, who haven't been baited into watching mutilation videos etc.

>Muh Venezuelan oil.

A thick crude too rich to process and mine cheaply, and everyone else literally went in the other direction for a decade. So while high reward, that oil requires very high energy to turn to profit. Specialized extraction, storage, and very heavy crude refineries as well. Which the Saudis don't have. Which the Chinese don't have. Which the Russians don't have. Which does still exist in the USA, but we don't care too much about those old heavy refineries for the past 10+ years (although more expensive to mine, sweet shale crude is orders of magnitude less expensive to refine and store. So why would we keep heavy industry for Venezuela's solipsistic welfare? Just so they could send even more rape monkeys at us? Not that the oil exec muh-sonks and banker fools care, but Venezuela did take everything just to feed one more Maduro-Chavez mansion and failed car factory garbage from Iran/France).

No, that oil is there now for the same reason why it was there then, and will be moving forward: Venezuela is sitting on it. And no one can touch it without making 1 billion more shitskins only to still have all their shit stolen from by Venezuela while those same Venezuelans cry out in pain about CIA gay ops that don't actually exist because no one fucking needs them too, just see Venezuela.

Bro those are CDC statistics, not estimations, and just eyeballing the area between the green and red curves I see about 5000 deaths that could easily have been misattributed to the wu flu. Something's fucky with the numbers in the USA. Testing centers in the NYC epicenter are completely empty in several jewtube videos, they aren't even testing many people in hospitals, and even when they do there's a considerable chance of a false positive, either from cross-reactivity with relatively harmless coronaviruses or just shit-tier test kits like the ones from China.

I'm not saying corona-chan is a nothingburger (droppers in chinkland and shitholes make a strong case otherwise), but right now it looks like nothing's happening in burgerland except for ramping up the police state >being controlled or denied

>Venezuela

No, there was no denying anything by anyone but the Venezuelans themselves. There is no future or past with kikes. They would take if they could. Examples are everywhere. Absolutely the same with the chinks. No, the problem is: Venezuela is a giant mudslide territory with inaccessible bedrock + mountains without trains, with little inbetween. Like Vietnam but without the plains or coasts. Therefore you must commit extensive heavy infrastructure and property ownership just to build-out to the mine + rail + foundations. And then the refining requires extensive electricity for its operational size relative to other less-heavy refineries. But the damn was an utter failure, because (((academics))) can't actually do academics. And then there's the lack of storage and port facilities for that size. In other words, all the things you need to build and maintain, cannot be done if even faux ownership like CCP doesn't happen. The Venezuelans are too stupid for even communist banking to work, let alone crony capitalism, when you add in the rest of the geography. Even in the land of Hans, or Designateds, or kike headquarters itself, you don't have the extensive failure of all forms of basic property and bank. This is not anyone denying anything other than the Venezuelans being too stupid to know they are the ones doing the denying.

Russia tried, before that Iran tried, during and now from that China still tries, before that the CIA tried. God knows, the kikes in Argentina would try again if they didn't learn just like the rest: The Venezuelans are too stupid + have too much terrain to be globalized. That's not resistance by might as Maduro would have us all believe, see the maria commando ship that just sank. That's not planning and supply control, see all the nations that keep flinging money. No, Venezuela is controlled, by Venezuelans. And Venezuela is denied, by Venezuelans. They would if they could, and everyone knows every globalist has tried, but they can't. Too much maria syndrome, LARPing as Catholic, LARPing as Mankind, when just maria syndrome.

This is particularly exciting. Japan and Worst Korea actually did a good job at taking preventative measures and bought themselves some time, even if Japan was possibly under-reporting to try to salvage the Olympics early on. But if Coronachan gets loose in Japan it could seriously fuck them over just like China, with their super-high population density, large percentage of the population using public transportation, etc.

>Why not Venezuelan LNG/gas?

Venezuela should sign with Brazil to fund and make a low/medium volume near-coastal pipeline for gas consumption, from Venezuela to the top of Brazil (fuck going past Macapa). It wouldn't be without problems, but between the two, it is possible Brazil and Venezuela could manage each other, and make both count / not be another wasted decade.

As for LNG leaving Venezuela by sea, or heading north, or heading west, same but worse problems as before. Worsened because natural gas, and helium, are byproducts of mining. As 'side' industries (not primary production/profit industries), the equation is even worse.

Priests Reveal How Coronavirus Crisis Has Unleashed Intense Demonic Activity
Read my comments before reading this article! This is very real!

I have a past of drug abuse and alcoholism and have been a victim of demonic possession and let me tell everyone something: I have been noticing the last few weeks increasing demonic pressure to engage in violent activities because of their presence! These are the fallen angels that the Book of Genesis and Book of Enoch refer to, the devil's serpents! Anyone who has demonic interference in their lives should be on high alert because now that so many people are dying and going to hell, a new wave of demonic energy is taking over, sweeping the planet. If you hear these demons trying to seduce you with evil thoughts I'd recommend playing music like "I Remember You" or "Ramblin' Rose" from Slim Whitman, Gene Chandler's "Duke of Earl" or "The Still Of The Night" from The Five Satins, all these songs typically drive them away when played over and over again for about an hour (maybe play all of them on a shuffle mix and throw in "Lover's Island" by The BlueJays). Demons are sensitive to certain frequencies. Praying to Jesus and repenting for your sins also helps but can be very difficult to concentrate during demonic interference. First have a CD of all those songs handy and start blasting them away from the area, set the volume on high and stereo on repeat/shuffle!

Are Some In Government & Science Pushing For National Economic Suicide While They Have Job Security?

"More than 10 million Americans have already lost their jobs. Imagine another year of this. That would be national suicide, and yet, that is what Anthony Fauci is suggesting, at least. Now, we're not suggesting that Fauci wants to hurt America. We don't think he does, he seems like a very decent man. But Fauci is not an economist or for that matter someone who fears being unemployed himself. Like most of the people around him. This is not an attack, this is just an observation. Fauci has bulletproof job security. He's not thinking that way. He has the luxury of looking at the world through the narrow lens of his profession. He doesn't seem to think much outside that lens."

Did Bill Gates Just Reveal The Real Reason Behind The Lock-Downs?

They Want To Destroy The Current Economy and Force Everyone Onto A New Digital System Where Everyone Is Tracked!

On March 24 Bill Gates gave a highly revelatory 50-minute interview to Chris Anderson. Anderson is the Curator of TED, the non-profit that runs the TED Talks:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Xe8fIjxicoo>

Anderson asked Gates at 3:49 in the video of the interview - which well over three million views now - about a 'Perspective' article by Gates that was published February 28 in the New England Journal of Medicine.

"You wrote that this could be the once-in-a-century pandemic that people have been fearing. Is that how you think of it, still?" queried Anderson.

"Well, it's awful to say this but, we could have a respiratory virus whose case fatality rate was even higher. If this was something like smallpox, that kills 30 percent of people. So this is horrific," responded Gates.

"But, in fact, most people even who get the COVID disease are able to survive. So in that, it's quite infectious - way more infectious than MERS [Middle East Respiratory Syndrome] or SARS [Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome] were. [But] it's not as fatal as they were. And yet the disruption we're seeing in order to knock it down is really completely unprecedented."

Millions could potentially die from suicide, drug abuse, lack of medical coverage or treatment, poverty and lack of food access, on top of other predictable social, medical and public-health problems stemming from the response to COVID-19.

Gates and Anderson did not touch on any of those sequelae. Instead, they focused on rapidly ramping up testing and medical interventions for COVID-19.

Gates said at 30:29 in the interview that he and a large team are moving fast to test anti-virals, vaccines and other therapeutics and to bring them to market as quickly as possible.

The Gates Foundation and Wellcome Trust with support from Mastercard and now others, created this therapeutic accelerator to really triage out [candidate therapeutics]...

You have hundreds of people showing up and saying, 'Try this, try that.' So we look at lab assays, animal models, and so we understand which things should be prioritized for these very quick human trials that need to be done all over the world."

However, Gates continued, he and his colleagues have dismissed that possibility because it's "fairly complicated - compared to a drug we can make in high volume, you know, the cost of taking it out and putting it back in probably doesn't scale as well."

Then a few seconds later, at 33:45, Gates drops another bomb:

We don't want to have a lot of recovered people...

To be clear, we're trying - through the shut-down in the United States - to not get to one percent of the population infected. We're well below that today, but with exponentiation, you could get past that three million [people or approximately one percent of the U.S. population being infected with COVID-19 and the vast majority recovering]. I believe we will be able to avoid that with having this economic pain."

Right after that, at 34:14, Gates talked about how he sees things rolling out from there.

Eventually what we'll have to have is certificates of who's a recovered person, who's a vaccinated person...

...Because you don't want people moving around the world where you'll have some countries that won't have it under control, sadly.

You don't want to completely block off the ability for people to go there and come back and move around.

So eventually there will be this digital immunity proof that will help facilitate the global reopening up."

Vaccines are very big business: this Feb. 23 CNBC article, for example, describes the vaccine market as six times bigger than it was 20 years ago, at more than $35 billion annually today, and providing a $44 return for every $1 invested in the world's 94 lowest-income countries.

Notably, the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation - which has an endowment of $52 billion - has given more than $2.4 billion to the World Health Organization (WHO) since 2000, according to a 2017 Politico article. (While over the same time frame countries have reduced their contributions to the world body, particularly after the 2008-2009 depression, and now account for less than one-quarter of the WHO's budget.) The WHO is now coordinating approximately 50 groups around the world that are working on candidate vaccines against COVID-19. The Politico article quotes a Geneva-based NGO representative as saying Gates is "treated like a head of state, not only at the WHO, but also at the G20," and that Gates is one of the most influential people in global health.

They've shattered society, suspended most civil liberties and prohibited most activities and connections that kept people mentally and physically healthy. At the same time the officials have prioritized COVID-19 care over everything else and, as a result, severely limited billions of people's access to life-saving healthcare services ranging from acquiring medication and blood transfusions to having organ transplants and cancer surgeries.

I don't see it as attempt to track everybody. I believe it's temporary death of globalism and it's a good thing. We won't be able to travel to any country in the world for long time, but it also means that our borders stay shut.

Containing Corona Chan is not a real scenario anymore, we all will have to go through it and build herd immunity OVERTIME. It means that anytime white person travels to Africa or Asia which in most surreal scenario might have contained it, we'd pull Columbus 2.0

Corona Chan is a good thing anon.

And one more remark, ZOG gets fucked by corona in many ways, they were on brainwashing millenials into voluntary slavery, right now they'll have millions of hungry, unemployed people who are extremely volatile to any extremism. They didn't want that.

Right now they are. it highly depends on whether or not they can actually provide that security and stability. If it really does end up with tens of millions of people losing their jobs and going hungry and being crushed by debt all while family and friends are dying due to a totally botched reaction and lack of health care services in crisis? This
>Those CDC stats ... about 5000 less regular stats could be easily misattributed to the WuFlu.
Hate to say it guys, but we've got to open up our paradigm or we'll fall behind the (((.gov))).
Facts so far:
1. China looked to be hit hard at first - qui bono?
2. Iran hit hard, higher mortality strain, and at the government level. - "7 countries in 5 years?"
3. Next Italy gets the high mortality strain. Predicted by 31-Jan Wall Street anon?
4. Germany, France et al get low mortality version
5. US says they're hit, but many citizen journalists prove it's not really happening here.
6. Other than Iran *cough*bioweapon*cough, there seems to be a possible tie-in with 5g (See "firefighters in California sickened by 5g")
Now, what do we see in day to day life?
1. All small business forcibly bankrupted, closed, or forced to take loans.
1a. Restaurants, hobby, books, thrift stores,
1b. Homeless people - wtf happened to them?
1c. Rental properties - landlords can't evict, forced to accept squatters.
2. Unemployment forcibly spikes to > great depression levels overnight.
3. Police state crackdowns - no more freedom of assembly or freedom to travel.
4. Crime tsunami inbound - 6x rise in destitution, jails emptied, police publicly declaring they will not answer calls.
This sure puts the shitskin invasion in perspective.
>Bring in 1000s of fighting age shitskins to every Western city >Force an immediate economic crisis
>Control all sources of truthful information and public inter-communication.
>Wall off the cities, pull police back, and let the slaughters begin.

Notes

- Floating Petri Dish: Blessings are not included in the Nip government's official count. 380 of the 696 were asymptomatic. 14 are Burgers whose test results weren't known until they left the petri-dish. The total does not include 3 employees of Nip's Health Ministry and 1 staff member of Nip Diet Secretariat, all of whom were infected while working on the petri dish. It does also not include fucktards who tested positive upon returning home: 45 in burgerland, 10 in Shitpostingland (one of whom died), 4 in Bongistan, 5 in Hong Kong, 3 in ISISrael, and 2 in Animeland.
- Legoland: The total includes 181 cases in the Faroe Islands.
- Frogs includes 17,827 confirmed and suspected blessings among residents at pre-proto-oldfag homes. The breakdown for confirmed and suspected blessings has not been released.
- Frogs includes Guadeloupe, Saint Barthélemy, Saint Martin, French Guiana, Martinique, Mayotte, and Réunion. It does not include French Polynesia, which is listed separately.
- The United Bongistan includes Bongs, Wales, Northern Ireland, and Scotland. Jersey, Guernsey, the Isle of Man, and the Tax Haven Islands are listed separately.

Coronian Message for this thread

Remember to never underestimate the power of your love and faith for Corona-Chan.

You, my fellow cultist, have more influence than you might imagine.

Hone your psychic abilities and take control of the energy that flows within your body, mind and soul!

Worry not about the unbelievers, blasphemers, heretics, shills, nothingburgerfags and hoaxniggers, for they have already been taken care of.

In due time, they will all fall down, to never rise up again. Stay safe, good luck in the global collapse and enjoy the thread.

Corona-Chan and her cult loves all of you!

Correct. The fruits of liberalism are coming home to roost. And when the last bit of "awakening" people attempt to flee the cities, they will carry the coof out into the red areas. It's a plague, it doesn't respect political boundaries. If people are still smoking the Hopium and ZOG hasn't collapsed into feuding warlords, it's going to get everywhere.

I live in a major city that's a hotspot. It's not going to collapse. Stop believing the hype. We are being manipulated. The hospitals are empty. My healthcare friends and family have all gone home due to lack of work. If this was truly a collapse causing pandemic you'd think they would have all hands on deck. Guess they don't need the extra EMTs and nurses. The people pushing this agenda are people we have never trusted before. Why do we trust them now? Is the virus bad? Ya probably. Will it fuck you up? Maybe, but so will the flu if it's bad enough. Is it worth shutting everything down and destroying whatever freedom we had left? I don't think so.

All I am saying is please, consider the other angles to this thing. I know we all want happenings to shoot city faggots and niggers. But we can't put the blinders on. I'm seeing so many people post articles here like they are truth. Not even doing the basic research to see they are written by a kike SJW fag.

Hopefully it doesn't spread much that way and isn't active or of concern in animals.. who knows.

It will spread to anything that has ACE II receptors. I think we went over most of that between thread 7-11. There is no stopping our girl. The only reason why people don't know more about this is because who would think to test fucking zoo animals (obviously we test niggers) but I meant animals that were inside a cage (I guess we test niggers in prison too). So animals that are not niggers or nigger mongrels.

> My healthcare friends and family have all gone home due to lack of work
I have a hard time believing that part. Everyone I know in healthcare is getting more hours and working even more, and I don't even live in a "hot spot" area. I do agree the cities probably won't collapse the some anons are fantasizing about though. It's going to kick off major economic catastrophe around the world and tens of millions unemployed. Still going to be a huge game changer but I don't know if we'll see giant chimpenings, all indication is crime and violence are actually down in cities right now because the nigs are at least chimping less.

My uncle's patient had CV, and he died. Then my uncle developed CV symptoms and then he died two days ago. NY is fucking swamped. They are sending text message alerts to all medical personnel and graduating all medical students early to try to fight this thing. Most of my family in NY are in the Healthcare field as doctors, surgeons, nurses, or physicians assistants. This is the happening.

>11.130 confirmed symptomatic hues

>486 confirmed deaths

Regional Breakdown: 651 cases and 19 deaths in the north, 1880 cases and 78 deaths in the northeast, 6678 cases and 351 deaths in the southeast, 708 cases and 12 deaths in the mid-west and 1213 cases and 26 deaths in the south.

Reminder that those numbers are complete baloney and actually much higher, MinHealth is not counting asymptomatic cases and reporting all numbers being put out by state health departments, and those health departments are also doing their own cover ups. There's also a lack of testing kits making hospitals turn people with Corona-Chan's symptoms away until their situation turns critical and not all deaths caused by her symptoms are being tested posthumously.

Corona-Chan motivated prison riots in Batman, Roachland. Political prisoners rioting over not being released like the common inmates

Got me wondering if there is a rat population density graph... can't find any like population density just 'related callouts'. But typically they are concentrated in the city with the two legged rats so it's a given they will closely correlating with population density.

The only silver lining is maybe the virus isn't very active or fatal in such animals or able to spread. Otherwise biodiversity is at risk and even homesteading would become highly risky at this point - nowhere will be safe!!
This is really fucking bad news. That was my worst fear and slowly things are (maybe) edging further that way, holy fuck.

Even bunker kikes aren't going to make it if that happens, they can't live there forever unless they are /sudpol/-tier and can get 'to the other side' as they have finite resources typically.

It also can't spread through your stomach, it needs to go into your lungs to have a chance at entering the bloodstream. So eating it raw might not even get you sick. If there is any concern, you can always cook your food before eating it.

>>90728

Microorganisms generally tend to mutate into becoming more mild, not more deadly. This is due to the simple fact that a dead host is not very useful for spreading, as a result of which deadly strains will burn themselves out by naturally selecting themselves out of the gene pool. It can always get worse in the short-term but there is always a stronger tendency for milder symptoms in the long-term. They might stay at a certain level of lethality but killing the host does bring pretty huge drawbacks. Especially when it comes to humans, since humans can alter their environment fairly drastically.

>Good Things Don't Happen

That's actually where I think you are wrong. Things were actually improving for people like us. There was an overton shift occurring. You really think this is going to help? It's going to be a 7-step back type of happening. Also a "good monarchy" in America or Europe? Really. You think that could actually happen? This is how I know you haven't gone outside to talk to a NPC/Normie about this happening. Do you get it yet? Those fantasies aren't going to happen. The only person I know working more is an ER nurse and she's pretty busy with CV people. However, I went to check out my closest hospital here. It's one of the busiest trauma centers in the nation because they get a bunch of stabbings/gunshot wounds from around the greater area. Absolutely dead inside. The ICUs aren't full and ERs aren't totally swamped yet. Just busy. She told me most people with CV come in and then get sent home because they don't need to be hospitalized. Some come back and need a ventilator. Doesn't sound great but doesn't sound like it warrants a complete shutdown.

West Coast USA. Lots of people going outside and walking. You'll know this is a nothingburger virus when in 2-3 weeks it's still the same status quo despite everyone actively ignoring the soft martial law. Again, the other nurses, paramedics, and EMTs I know are basically doing nothing. All of the "overflow" tents outside the hospitals are empty. No one on any of the local social media knows someone with CV that is actually in a hospital.

It is known that there are multiple strains running around. One which is the bioweapon and one which the chinks made as a weaker form to infect themselves with to build immunity before they get the real one. Good luck figuring out which one is which. There's probably more but these are the two that are widely talked about among doctors. Except maybe the bioweapon part, since they are simply too cucked and too financially invested to openly admit this.

The good news is, israel is entering hell harder than any nation on Earth, beating out Wuhan.

Israel did the stupidest shit ever, and that's why it's happening. israel brought in hundreds of planeloads of kikes from infected regions. But kikes live in the poorest neighborhoods, and have little resistance to coronachan. They mega fucked up. Like so far beyond imagination fucked up. It's hard to imagine how an adversary could have done them worse. I can't think of a way, actually. At least in terms of coronachan.

china is making a huge mistake as well. People have been allowed to go to tourist spots (chinese tourists engaging in tourism in china). But look at this bit of information. Now, lockdowns shouldn't be ended until this basic info is known, and, if there's a problem, mitigations are in place. It would explain the invisible spread. It would spread this way from symptomless party to symptomless party for some time, before finding a Typhoid Mary.

I live in Nowhere, USA, but I monitor radio comms chatter (autism) including emergency responder freqs in my area. Literally the only calls last night was (1) a dude complaining of ulcers (kept calling frantically until not one but two ambulances arrived and carted him off) and (2) local state PD reporting they found a 21 y/o male who apparently ODed (not sure if died but guessing not because junkies have stupid luck). That was 2100-0100 hrs EDT. That's not to say Corona-Chan won't visit - it's just that everything I've been monitoring suggests police/EMT/fire are about as bored and quiet as they've ever been. For instance, typical Saturday nights are usually filled with at least 1-5 suspected DUIs, at least one altercation and plenty of old Boomers going to the hospital complaining and bitching about dumb shit. Even the Boomers are shutting the fuck up (mostly).

I like living in the country because all the city chatter is non-existent (I live farther than 70 mi to what anyone would classify as a city). We DO have confirmed cases, apparently, but I'd expect EMT, at a min, to be carting more boomers. My suspicion is boomers, in this area at least, are hunkering down to the point infection isn't very likely. Ironically, my neighbors (30+ y/o rural suburban) are the ones having parties in their backyards and bringing friends.

Yeah, what's funny is that the actual boomers are taking this shit seriously and the younger generation thinks the "oh, I'm over this already" thought process is enough to overpower a highly contagious virus. I do think it's funny that Corona-Chan has singlehandedly shut down every single bar in my state and this has resulted in NO reported DUIs since we've been under lock-down. That's hilarious. If anything, they should continue to suspend all liquor licenses and that would force people to either (a) party at a friend's house (more responsible) or (b) drink by themselves at home. Bars are the worst invention in modern day society because they absolutely guarantee drunk driving. At least if you're drunk at a friend's house, chances are good they'll let you crash out until you sober up. If you try doing that in a bar, you go to jail. And where I live, there isn't a reliable taxi or Uber so people that go out to drink WILL drive home at least a little cocked. Well, that's all over. Corona Chan is already having positive results in my community.

FOOD GOES TO WASTE DUE CORONACHAN

>The coronavirus pandemic is leading the food industry and regulators to change policies as they grapple with empty shelves, a glut of fresh produce and milk, and sudden shifts in consumer buying habits.

>The problem isn't a shortage of food and commodities. If anything, food waste is becoming a bigger issue as traditionally big, bulk buyers – like college dorms and restaurant chains – suddenly stop receiving deliveries. As a result, millions of gallons of milk are being dumped, and farmers have no alternative but to turn fresh vegetables into mulch.

>Federal agencies are scrambling to keep up with the altering landscape by easing rules governing trucking, imports, agricultural visas and labeling requirements for restaurants and manufacturers.

>"The way a client described it is they're seeing a tsunami of demand shift from foodservice to food retail," said Bahige El-Rayes, a partner who co-leads the consumer and retail practice at Kearney, a consulting firm. "If you're a manufacturer today of food, it's basically how do you adapt? How do you actually take what you sent to restaurants then sell it now to retail?"

>New alliances are being formed as demand from restaurants dry up and consumers look for new ways of delivery. Kroger, the largest U.S. supermarket chain, has partnered with foodservice giants Sysco and U.S. Foods, which normally supply the restaurant industry and large institutions, to share labor and keep store shelves stocked.

>The partnerships offer employment to foodservice workers that would otherwise be furloughed or laid off as a result of a near shutdown of the restaurant sector. It also provides much needed manpower to the overwhelmed food retail industry.

>Rewiring the U.S. food network, however, comes with logistical headaches.

>"Since we're buying more at the grocery store, it means [food items] have to be in that form," said Pat Westhoff, director of the University of Missouri's Food and Agricultural Policy Research Institute. "We have a bunch of stuff that's still stuck with restaurants, and they're trying to decide what to do with it at this point."

>Farmers are also scrambling to recalibrate their production.

>Richard Guebert Jr., Illinois Farm Bureau president, said his state's meatpacking companies have fewer employees showing up because of concerns of being too close to other workers.

"The industry is backing up on bacon and other products that they put together as cut-outs, so they're slowing down and not doing the volume that they had," Guebert said.

>"There's a concern for pork producers because they just can't turn their buildings on or off like you can an assembly line," he added. From the time sows give birth to slaughter, "it's a nine-month process that started nine months ago. Pigs continue to be born every day, whether they keep the whole capacity."

>In the meantime, major food distributors including U.S. Foods and Performance Food Group are begging the Treasury Department to prioritize loan applications from their sector as companies shift operations to supply retailers.

>"This kind of transition, even if temporary, takes time and investment as we adjust our warehousing, logistics and purchasing processes to meet a consumer-facing market," they wrote in a letter to the Trump administration.

>A group of food worker associations also made an appeal to congressional leaders that any future aid package should "include support for America's essential critical industry workers" through tax exemptions or direct payments.

>In the U.S., an excess supply of food production is forcing some sectors to take extreme measures and ask for extra creative solutions from the government.

>"Clearly we're in a time of crisis," said Gordon Speirs, owner of Shiloh Dairy in Brillion, Wis. "We've lost 25 percent of our income just through the crashed market. Now we face the reality of having to dump milk on top of that."

>The radical change in the age of the pandemic is a seismic shift for the food industry. In 2018, Americans spent more on food from full-service and fast-food restaurants – about $678 billion – compared to the roughly $627 billion spent at grocery stores and warehouse clubs, according to USDA data. Spending on food away from home is even higher when counting meals at schools, colleges, sporting events and other entertainment venues.

>Now, the National Restaurant Association expects the industry will shed $225 billion over the next few months, along with some 5-7 million jobs.

>"Grocery stores just aren't set up to restock shelves to meet that kind of demand," said Joseph Glauber, a senior research fellow at the International Food Policy Research Institute.

found this article but it's from two weeks ago

>News.Bitcoin.com reported on how in the Hamptons, New York's elite have been going to banks and asking to withdraw large sums of cash. According to reports, banks like Chase, JPMorgan and Bank of America (BoA) have been limiting withdrawals. This is because the rich from New York have been asking for $30-50K withdrawals so banks have created a limit between $3-10K in some areas. During the market massacre on March 12, Manhattan Bank temporarily ran low on $100 bills after a large rush for cash. A BoA spokesperson told the public that there were only issues with large denominations and individuals are able to withdraw $20-50 notes. "We don't keep large amounts of cash in big bills in the branches because it's dangerous for our employees and there is low demand," BoA stated. >There are people complaining on social media about the withdrawal limits from certain banks in the U.S over the last few days. "Go to the bank today and ask to withdraw your entire balance," one individual tweeted on March 17. "They are refusing to give out more than $5,000 - Even if your account has $20k. Even if your normal withdrawal limit is $10,000 daily." On March 14, a person from New York tweeted: "Food chain is broken. Went to Stop & Shop [and] shelves are empty. Meats gone. No more eggs - [and] the bank would only permit a $2,500 limit per day withdrawal." Another Twitter post shows a man visiting Chase bank and recording a video of a manager refusing to give him $5K. Moreover, the branch manager from Chase asked the person to delete the video.

Oh, of course. For all we/I have gathered here and elsewhere, it's doing far more than causing a lack of air, but if that is what is killing people in the hospitals despite all efforts, then maybe it would result in less fighting over ventilators and more supplementing o2 until the body can overcome things.

I think by that time the lungs are too shot, requiring ventilators anyway but they are not some magic pancea. Now you mention it there was a video recently about them not being much of a fix-all, probably due to this being likely (multiple causes), which would make sense for a good bioweapon - maximum triage disruption.

I rather liked the ideas behind these two posts. It would be weird if huffing ammonia or some other alkaline was the way to cure The Red Death. I still think a sedated 3-4 minute controlled drowning procedure is better than 3-5 weeks on a ventilator. This wouldn't do shit for the other ravages of the PATHOGEN...but it might reduce the pathogen load downwards enough and supply O2 again so that people could survive wave 1 for now.

OK, so it should be kinda basic but if you are going to move into a house, find something that is fairly isolated.

So where I live there are about 8 neighbors.

Something that is either near a river with fish or other wild life where you can hunt it down for lunch or dinner.

You know be white, go back to nature not away from it in an apartment complex.

And when you are so far away, this so-called lockdown is really nothing, my country has had it in 3 weeks or something and I don't feel the effects of it because I just do what I did before.

It's super hard to explain this, but it doesn't have babies. It just copies itself, exactly, but keeps making errors. The errors are like unique.

Think of a photocopier. Say I photocopied muh dik. okay? And say I faxed it to 4 offices. And say everyone thinks it's funny & they make copies of it. Each copier will have different crap on the glass, and wind up with its own unique marks, okay?

And then say they send it to 4 more companies, each. So then what happens is we can trace its ancestry, see?

Anyway, the changes are like that. Expected ones. But the original version of the wuhan virus is super crazy. It has "adaptations" that are shocking, seemingly impossible. They made it.

Well, yeah, that's all a given. I'm from one of the more sparsely populated states, there really aren't any real "cities", a few small ones throughout the state. An apartment would be in one of those, but I genuinely doubt there would be chimputs in any but two of them (fucking Somaliniggers bussed in).

I guess my concern is that I'm in a bit of a pickle as far as I can see - my options are to risk being without shelter if I am laid off immediately, to have shelter I can't protect if I can't keep working, or to have shelter and be unable to afford it if I am sent home.

I'm not that worried about it. I weigh 40 tons, can do 70 MPH on an even grade, and have no intention of stopping for any pedestrians. Again, finding somewhere where there is a river or water where you can fish when needed, also somewhere where there is also game to get said meat.

So where in the state you live in has those things?

look there for a house, if not get an apartment and go to the river or water to fish on the time where you are free so you can just put those bitches in the freezer and have food for a long time.

Shieet, I fished 2 years ago and froze the fish by just putting in the freezer and the fish was still good to eat by just unfreezing them or just regular oven cooking the bastards.

But if you are in a heavily polluted state where the water is bad, check the fish fillet if it looks weird or anything, since if there are tumors or other parasites on the fish don't eat em, obviously.

Trucking is one of essential businesses meaning that there will be some work for you until shit completely goes down, plus you have a mobile home that you can relocate depending on situation. Not to mention that you can hoard stuff and move it with you. You are in a better position than many other people out there, just make sure that you are armed for defense.

Contrarian point of view: drunk driving laws do nothing but punish people as a secondary offence. If the only thing a driver is charged with is DWI, it should be dropped because there was nothing wrong with his driving other than an arbitrary blood-alcohol level. Pro-tip: the "regular" at a bar is skilled at driving home without incident but over the "legal limit" and is a far safer driver than someone who only drinks a few times every now and then.

Tests for what, specifically? I have a constantly updating strains chart on my work computer (I'm homefagging at the moment) from a site I can't remember showing how many strains are constantly mutating. I'd like to know what these tests are testing for. My hunch is that the test must necessarily be so wide (to catch possible mutations) that it may only be testing for the common cold (of which /our girl/ is very closely related). Hell, these tests may even simply test for the presence of any corona virus at all. They're super common. In fact, we're born with some. Also, thank you anon for your updates.

The choice you have is to believe that our governments and the ((wonderful people)) that comprise them reacted to this well and the empty hospitals are a sign that controlling the surge is working. The other choice you can believe is they are empty because it's all bullshit and the ((wonderful people)) who work in our governments have managed to convince us all to shoot ourselves in the foot on the way to our cattle cars. They've got us to shutdown down completely so we all go broke and suffer over something that's really not that bad.

In all fairness, Taiwan is an island, always a bonus against viruses. Singapore is a huge airport hub for south-east Asia, and has a huge port, two major vectors for viruses spreading. Singapore is also like New York cramped into a tiny space, which makes the spread even easier. But I agree there are better countries to look at. I live in Czech Republic and I honestly like our government's response. Strict, very early and a homogeneous people that listened. I have full supermarkets, we have masks and make our own (required to go outside and only for groceries, all shops have been closed now for two weeks), everybody work from home. Airport and borders were closed before the lockdown, it's the most peaceful thing ever. We have 4000+ infected and 87 (eighty seven) people in ICU or on ventilators or both.

I guess that all we can do is keep an eye on both the progression of the virus and the moves that the governments are making. There are enough of us to do both of these things. I don't see any damage being done by assuming this thing is real AND assuming that the government is going to try to fuck us in the ass at the same time.

>he choice you have is to believe that our governments and the (((wonderful people))) that comprise them reacted to this well

The thing is that at first they were telling people just the opposite. "Go to chinatown, goy. It's just the flu, stupid goy." If the proper response to these people is to assume the opposite is true, then the proper response back then was to take the virus seriously as a very real threat. Now they are acting like this is Armageddon; are we not to suspect that they were really telling the truth in the beginning? Either the virus is a threat or the threat is being inflated. Yes the economy is going to be obliterated, but the economy was fucked to begin with. No one is trusting the official sources because of the sheer ineptitude of the response. I think that this has prompted people to pay closer attention. It is one of the reasons why I came back to /pnd/ (/pol/).

I'm the previous poster about the drunk driving shit (I know, slightly off topic - please don't nigger jail me, mods). I'll take that contrarian view and raise the stakes: eliminate drunk driving laws and instead hold the operator of the vehicle 100% culpable for any acts he does that violates the health and safety of others. i.e. run over your neighbor's lawn gnome? Get charged for that. Land your car in a ditch? Insurance won't pay for that and you owe whatever costs to repair the damages. I think if we replaced fake standards with real ones, a lot more productive shit would get done. That said, Corona Chan has significantly altered the very fabric of this rural nowhere town in the most weirdest of ways. I agree with you mostly but it isn't a contrived response to a preplanned action. It would have been more engineered. What you are seeing is the flailing of those in power that- truly for the first time- are threatened with something completely outside of their control. If it were planned we already would have had a catchier tagline than "flatten the curve" a long time ago. The reason they have everyone locked away nice and tight isn't for our safety- it is so (((they))) can figure out what the fuck to do next. Give everyone a little "breathing" room. I'd say the war drums against China would be le unifying troupe to keep the masses entertained- problem is it looks like India will shit on China without US involvement. It's not the inability per se but rather the economic factors. Retooling takes time and money. So suppose you retool now and this thing disappears, now what? You retool again? No, you're out of money and out of business. That's the calculation that the suppliers are making. With the government repeating "2 weeks bro" the suppliers will be reducing capacity and inventory, because those are easier to recover faster.

You want to know when business believes this is really real? When new grocery stores start opening, replacing restaurants that they believe will never open again. Until then they're just holding.

Wise assessment, you have one primary problem- no one is using the bulk items that are normally sold to restaurants at this time. Food is one of those weird commodities that quite definitely must always be available- there is great merit to the saying 9 meals to anarchy. When it isn't available, or becomes scarce- wacky things happen like foraging looting and using unthinkable resources cannibalism for instance. I absolutely agree that the processors are holding off on retooling, that is a wise business decision. With the lack of clarity from the gobment and the virus itself it induces a volatility that can't be overlooked. Problem is, without that retooling the product is not going where it is needed NOW- as we are already seeing across the US. This is how the supply chain breaks down. These organizations have become so entrenched in a certain mode so deeply that they cannot easily adapt to changed circumstances without serious expense of capital. They failed at planning for this eventuality or was the one they said- "We're fucked on that one, next". This situation has woefully made their conglomerations inefficient and investments into them a waste. Now here's their dilemma- Wait too long and have their warehouse looted or fire off too soon and go bankrupt when the restaurants reopen. Nasty little proverbial rock and hard place.

So what's the answer to private industry's failure? Bread lines. Long, demeaning, brow broken depression era breadlines with nasty girls standing there going over their urban combat training in their head. We just now have the comfort of our cars to sit in while the handout is awaited. That's a new reality to thousands of people, about to become reality to hundreds of thousands, and eventually it will be million upon millions of people and it won't magically go away with helicopter money hyperinflation or a miracle cure which I'm wholly glad they did find. The damage is done, the stocks are tracking exactly like the Great Depression- the waterfall has formed. Nothing anyone can do about it. The thing about bread lines is they piss people off. This will be "inflicted" upon a people who have not had to suffer any form of meaningful scarcity in nearly 100 years. Oh, then the second wave hits and boom everyone gets to go home again. Again back- do you wait for your warehouse to be looted, or go bankrupt in the risk the restaurants will not reopen soon.

If you currently live in your truck that's great, mobility allows you to avoid the virus hot spots while still working. As others said though, once you get to Mad Max level, they will come for your truck, no matter where or what you're carrying. Look on the map, go northwest and do pickups and deliveries there. A truck will be welcome anywhere right now. Make sure you up your PPE game, keep interaction with locals to absolute minimum, for your and their safety. Try to decontaminate before getting into your cabin so it feels safe. I've been running a strict decontamination protocol at home with a dedicated room and I feel safe in the rest of the house. It's harder with a truck.

No matter how bad this virus is, government intervention will always make it worse. We could have just had the virus and a couple million die, for example. But because "they must keep goyim safe hurr hurr" we will see the next Greatest Depression, economic collapse and hyperinflation, likely social unrest or civil war, with mass violence and an epidemic of deaths that are totally unrelated to the virus. This is what trust in centralized power gets you: an endless pandemic of problems over one single problem to begin with. Again, people are going to be forced to learn the hard way.

Yep anon, there is no greater example that government is incompetent and not to be trusted at all than our current situation.

>>90930

They are total schizos anon. I didn't realize how bad it really was until I started really looking at their schitzo behaviors...then i was astonished. By how totally whack they actually are in all their responses. They are incapable of telling the difference between two things. Example Starvation or fullness... totally incapable of measuring or conceptualizing that there is a difference between the two things. Good and evil,,,again hopelessly incapable...just like a nigger they simply can't process that there is any actual difference between two diametrically opposed polarities. So, they THINK they are advanced somehow when they are basically as primitive as a nigger in terms of understanding any sort of polarity or polarizing issue. It isn't a 'strength' it is a terrible weakness that helps them to destroy everything they touch.

Hopefully Ethnic Europeans can learn that the PARASITE never protects the host... it would be impossible for the parasite to protect anything at all...this is why governments always fail...they promise one thing and do the exact opposite because their very foundation is parasitic, rather than beneficial.

Forgive the one time poast /k/ tier sperg out, but that pic. The attacking Soviet soldier and the defender with his harem are both using British SMLE rifles. The dying Soviet soldier is dropping what appears to maybe, maybe be a rendition of an SKS. EXACTLY THIS Deep weaknesses were already apparent, and this virus has only accentuated those fissures. It is funny, because a completely artificial construct (modern neo-liberal Marxist society) redoubled against a natural state of affairs (a plague) has killed itself.

Imagine if you will that there wasn't an onmiscient and omnipresent central CCP over in the land of the Sinojew and dismiss the rather valid claims this is their bio-toy gone awry; all things being equal no FUCKING CHINESE COMMUNISTS involved- This thing would have spread? Sure- Gone global? Unlikely. The fear and panic that took hold when people actually recognized what the fuck was going on tells me if left to their own devices they would have done the welding earlier and without orders. It was the disinformation by their benevolent overlords that caused the situation to explode like this. The volk, the people- even the bat soup slurping rape baby bug people- are much more adaptable at handling stuff like this with no central authority. It is that central control that they are falling back to because there are no other ideas, (((they))) are a one trick pony. So let's count the fruits of Central Planning. The economy is crashed- everywhere, millions unemployed- worldwide, incalculable damage to the primary economic "engine" of the US- namely the Service Sector, complete re-polarization of the world- at least temporarily, unpaid rents, rent strikes, a significant percent of the population fearing for their life and panicking, and tigers catching the Red Death. Bravo central planning. Well done.

Of course the absence of such central planning would preclude massive inefficient international conglomerates that as >>90963 points out won't even sell you seed now. How wonderful of them. Victory gardens have now become "non-essential", how quaint. Really reaching new highs in that consumerism shtick. What's sad is I can't give them credit for some nefarious plot- this is some middle manager striking a line because it slightly reduces costs overall and has the added benefit of "engaging" them to consistently select from their own wide array of fresh vegetable offerings. Slash, another little cut here- just one of thousands occurring by the hour WORLDWIDE.

I expected them to make a mess of things at the end, I just never understood how BADLY they would cock everything up.

What's saddening is even with irrefutable proof of the malfeasance of their overlords to the point of killing people either through over-action, or under-action (God I love how badly they really have screwed this up) the likelihood of something truly interesting occurring is small. There will be sporadic food riots, grinding poverty, sure- but I don't see complete fragmentation and open air problems- those require wounds, and those wounds are being made right now. I'm still of the opinion that things will get downright interesting later this year or early next. Those times will come. We are barely through the very first fun part of this ride, the best is still on the horizon.

>The thing is that at first they were telling people just the opposite. "Go to chinatown, goy. It's just the flu, stupid goy." If the proper response to these people is to assume the opposite is true, then the proper response back then was to take the virus seriously as a very real threat. Now they are acting like this is Armageddon

That is deliberate. It's to get you confused and unsure of what to believe. I don't think the virus is that big of a threat nor the main threat. Yet I'm going out with my PPEs and disinfecting because you just don't know.

>Yes the economy is going to be obliterated, but the economy was fucked to begin with

It actually wasn't that bad and I'm not talking about increased rates of brown unemployment either. If you had some level of education you could do just fine outside of an overpriced city. I assume you are a young guy like me. We don't actually know what a bad economy looks like. We will soon though.

>>90936

Hyperinflation isn't a shortage of food but it's a good point. Bulk producers will either shit down or reduce inventory by a huge amount. I really don't think this virus is that bad but even if it is, it just won't get bad enough to compromise food shortages to the point we are literally starving. US has a fuck ton of space and is very regional. Biggest advantage we have is we export food, not import.

>I agree with you mostly but it isn't a contrived response to a preplanned action

I think China released it to cull their people and throw the world into chaos so they could attempt to emerge as number one. They weren't going to do that with the way they were going making cheap shit. They don't care about trade or wealth. CCP has their own. They care about their power and the CCP. Either the Chinese worked with (((them))) or once all the hype reached the west, (((they))) jumped on it like vultures to their advantage. Point being, the virus is not the biggest threat I think. They do have catch taglines. Professionally made social media tags and images dropped on day one of #StayHome #FlattenTheCurve etc. Look how programmed people are now and how hostile they get if you say walk your dog in the park with your wife/gf. Social Distancing... shelter in place. Cute sounding words. What they really mean is freedom of assembly is banned and soft-martial law is enacted. Stay in goyim, trust the plan.

>product is not going where it is needed NOW

I live just outside major metropolitan area that is designated as a "hot spot."

I haven't even had to dust off my prepper stash because for the most part, regular grocery shopping has not been interrupted. Have you gone outside and actually examined the situation for yourself? Shortage of food via supply chain is not going to happen. The bread car lines you are seeing now are not a result of that. They are a result of the average American having less than 2k in savings and being basically unemployed for 2 months. It is also by design. Big car bread lines create fear and (((they))) want you afraid. Stop playing into their hands but prepare for the worst. It's not the fault of private industry these bulk providers are having difficulty. You think a government milk farm would do any better? They'd be a bulk provider too only instead it would be going to a storefront that gives milk in exchange for nigger bucks.

Seconding this. I'm near Seattle and there haven't been any stripped grocery stores aside from the disinfectant wipes and hand sanitizers being out of stock. What happened early on, and what led to those pictures of empty grocery stores aside from a few news outlets staging those shots was that an initial shock demand coupled with Americans stopping going to restaurants where 30% of them commonly get meals multiple times per week led to the grocery store supply chains being put under acute stress. Once that hump subsided, it normalized. We'll probably have a food surplus since those restaurants aren't buying in huge quantities. Like those farmers dumping milk they couldn't sell. Haven't had to touch my prepper stash either, aside from taking out a single box of cereal.

West coast too. Ya I haven't had to touch my stash. I don't want to either. It's a stash for a reason. Anyway, I want to add that throughout this ordeal I've been spending more money on groceries. I've actually purchased another small fridge to help organize what I am buying. Since people are still panic buying some things go quickly and the skeleton crew grocery stores can't restock fast enough. So naturally you buy more, especially if you are trying to avoid trips to the store. They have the products if you corner an employee to get them in the back. Point being, people are buying more and spending more. That's why they are lining up in food lines. They are out of money. This is why I've been saying the depression will kill more people than the virus.

Even TP is not hard to get. I got a 30 pack brick at costco the other day. TP stacked at the end of every aisle. Costco was absolutely empty too an hour or so after opening. Just strolled right in. I think some posters here need to leave the bunker with whatever PPE they have and see for themselves how this is playing out so far. It provides important perspective. If someone hasn't gone outside and they have been hunkering down over freeze dried rations browsing /pnd/, I could see why they might think it is worse than it actually is. Only thing out is disinfectant, gloves, and hand sanitizer.

On a side note, get a HF radio and listen in to conversations. Offers a lot of perspective.

What is good in the US is the regional aspect of it with food as >>90982 points out. What I'm saying is that when the stores are fully restocked and completely open, curfews are lifted and unicorn tears rain from the skies again; people will no longer be able to buy that which they could before because of the next fun part- grinding poverty. Printer go brrr only so long, who pays for the Trumpbox when the primary taxpayers aren't making any money? Meme-flu or not, millions are now on gibs simple as that with nothing to support the payment of said gibs except put, unadulterated, helicopter money. That's not the future friend, that's what is presently occurring- no matter what happens to the virus going forward. The economic implications are now completely separate from and only worsened by the virus. Remember the term "Depression" is being tested as well.

I'm outside of Austin and the HEB is doing curbside, have not gone inside; there are significant substitutions on packaged goods but veggies are veggies. At this point that's to be expected. It is now a question of risk reward on exposure at this point on whether to break into the stash. Meme virus or not, I'm going to indulge on being a hermit- it is my natural state and I don't want to catch it.

That would depend on how many waves of infection one would expect (my estimates are 3 main ones at 6 months each). Many countries are going to outright ban travel to other countries that fail to get their act together on securing borders and quarantining travelers.

They're going to try to push this AI agenda as they have been trying the last couple decades or so, but people are waking up and getting fed up with it. This corona bioweapon also has potential to destroy public trust in governments and the banking system these kikes heavily rely on too. Not only that but potential for supply shortages from China (which we mostly rely on electronics from). Combine this with growing distrust in the system, monumental increase in people prepping and arming up and a virus that has the ability to displace law & order? No, I think the kikes are going to have a harder time than they think they are. Although, that heavily depends how we respond to all this as well. I have no intention of trusting any new system the kikes have in mind after this fallout. I'll be going off-grid if necessary and become self-sufficient. Covid-19 Does Not Lead to a "Typical" Acute Respiratory Distress Syndrome

>In northern Italy an overwhelming number of patients with Covid-19 pneumonia and acute respiratory failure have been admitted to our Intensive Care Units. Attention is primarily focused on increasing the number of beds, ventilators and intensivists brought to bear on the problem, while the clinical approach to these patients is the one typically applied to severe ARDS, namely high Positive End Expiratory Pressure (PEEP) and prone positioning. However, the patients with Covid-19 pneumonia, fulfilling the Berlin criteria of ARDS, present an atypical form of the syndrome. Indeed, the primary characteristics we are observing (confirmed by colleagues in other hospitals), is the dissociation between their relatively well preserved lung mechanics and the severity of hypoxemia. As shown in our first 16 patients (Figure 1), the respiratory system compliance of 50.2 ± 14.3 ml/cmH₂O is associated with shunt fraction of 0.50 ± 0.11 . Such a wide discrepancy is virtually never seen in most forms of ARDS. Relatively high compliance indicates well preserved lung gas volume in this patient cohort, in sharp contrast to expectations for severe ARDS.

Summary: there is low blood oxygen without the presence of shortness of breath. COVID-19: Attacks the 1-Beta Chain of Hemoglobin and Captures the Porphyrin to Inhibit Human Heme Metabolism

>The novel coronavirus pneumonia (COVID-19) is an infectious acute respiratory infection caused by the novel coronavirus. The virus is a positive-strand RNA virus with high homology to bat coronavirus. In this study, conserved domain analysis, homology modeling, and molecular docking were used to compare the biological roles of certain proteins of the novel coronavirus. The results showed the ORF8 and surface glycoprotein could bind to the porphyrin, respectively. At the same time, orf1ab, ORF10, and ORF3a proteins could coordinate attack the heme on the 1-beta chain of hemoglobin to dissociate the iron to form the porphyrin. The attack will cause less and less hemoglobin that can carry oxygen and carbon dioxide. The lung cells have extremely intense poisoning and inflammatory due to the inability to exchange carbon dioxide and oxygen frequently, which eventually results in ground-glass-like lung images. The mechanism also interfered with the normal heme anabolic pathway of the human body, is expected to result in human disease. According to the validation analysis of these finds, chloroquine could prevent orf1ab, ORF3a, and ORF10 to attack the heme to form the porphyrin, and inhibit the binding of ORF8 and surface glycoproteins to porphyrins to a certain extent, effectively relieve the symptoms of respiratory distress. Favipiravir could inhibit the envelope protein and ORF7a protein bind to porphyrin, prevent the virus from entering host cells, and catching free porphyrins. Because the novel coronavirus is dependent on porphyrins, it may originate from an ancient virus. Therefore, this research is of high value to contemporary biological experiments, disease prevention, and clinical treatment.

This is what is causing the symptoms of extreme fatigue, sudden collapse, and brain damage.

Check your blood oxygen people. Start anti-viral therapy as soon as it starts dropping, you don't want to wait for symptoms.

Unless you're one of the (((elite))) you probably don't have access to enough blood to flush everything out, and due to the lack of blood donors in trying to get supplies now you may come cross HIV positive and virus infected blood since they've thrown all standards out the window. Letting it get to the blood poisoning point is a serious operational failing.

This got me thinking...

With the onset of Summer in the Northern hemisphere, the electrical power grid will be put under a lot of stress as more people are forced to stay home. Could this lead to power outages as an already stressed electrical grid has rolling failures? As niggers usually have chimp outs in the summer months, /ourgirl/ could seriously infect a swathe of niggers as they chimp out in major population centers throughout not just the US but Europe as well as niggers and muds forget not just about how potent /ourgirl/ is but stay at home measures?

It's highly unlikely there will be food shortages in the USA. Not totally outside the realm of possibility but probably not gonna happen. As other anons said, those "bread lines" are because people have been out of work for two months, not because of a lack of availability of food. Nothing is out of stock at stores except cleaning related stuff. Anons are just over exaggerating how bad things are/will be because they want to see big chimpenings.

Checking both of those trips for both are good points. Waaaaay too many people have been made aware and inundated with the whole "human microchipping number of the beast" tier shit for decades. Everyone from Jesus freaks, lolbertarians, hippies, Alex Jones/Coast to Coast AM and /x/ tier fags, everyone under the umbrella label of "tinfolist," etc. At least 1/3 of the population would refuse to cooperate and probably more. People might respond better to the "AI managed everything" idea because it will be sold to them as "everything will be safer, easier and more efficient," and appeal to their laziness. However, when that becomes a clusterfuck like every other time they try to have AI manage human affairs people will become even more frustrated and disillusioned.

It's certainly possible, or at least all it would take is one bad natural disaster on top of this already stressful crap (IE big fire, storm, earthquake, etc.) to cause temporary or intermittent utility outages in places where the grid is already stressed.

I don't know if this is too big-brain for the thread, but there is a new theory coming out that the current therapy schedule for COVID-19 patients is wrong due to assumptions made that this is basically like pneumonia which leads to ARDS. The competing theory instead says that the virus attaches to hemoglobin which make the blood less effective at binding to oxygen which in turn causes lung damage. In other words the contemporary theory that lung damage is causing the low blood-oxygen levels is exactly backwards, and that invasive ventilation is causing people to die (there is already epidemiological data to support the latter).

The PDF should be read first and understood. The video is a first-hand account of a doctor saying his patients seem to be suffering from something akin to altitude sickness which would be what one expects if the hemoglobin theory is true.

(FWIW I've experienced altitude sickness and the symptoms aren't readily apparent externally. I didn't know I had it until I was over 200ft up a rock face and found myself confused and making bad decisions)

>Coronachan infects cells through the ACE2 receptor.

Pic related, Coronachan could be an airborne blood disease that attacks both lung tissue (initially) and attaches herself to hemoglobin at the lung's air-blood interface cells. As a blood-borne disease it would have easier access to heart and nerve tissue which could explain the seizures and sudden dropping. Does Coronachan bind easier to ACE2 receptors or hemoglobin?

It's weird how everyone's ignoring Ivermectin but they're all over Trump balls over his z pac or w/e.

The test tube studies were amazing but it's really tricky to figure out dosing.

Why is Africa being spared from this virus and many others?

Could it be because many take Ivermectin every year to deworm or is the answer explained below.

>"Droplet diseases don't seem to be as big an issue in Africa," he said, adding that SARS, a respiratory disease that is also a coronavirus, spread through 26 countries in 2003 but failed to gain a hold in Africa. Influenza epidemics are also less intense on the continent, he pointed out.

>In addition, in Africa people generally don't live crammed together in such densely populated areas and they also spend a lot more time out-of-doors in Africa than they do in northern countries.

My father has been showing symptom of the virus for about seven days now,
>shortness of breath >diarrhea
>fever

He wears an N95 wherever he goes around the house now. We've sectioned off parts of the house to keep us all self-isolated while we see if he gets worse. Even with his anti-cough medication, it's not enough to stop the cough. It's not looking good so far. I've told my mother that we need to wait it out before we take him to the emergency room because of the risk of getting infected at the hospital This morning he had the same bad cough, so now they're both considering going to the ER anyway. I did my best to prep and warn my family of how dangerous this thing is, and they did listen. We have the ammo, guns, at least 3+ months worth of food and supplies, but it seems it was not enough. I pray that he just came down coincidentally with pneumonia, but I still fear for my family's life. It's getting real out here bros.

>It's super hard to explain this

Maybe for you it may be difficult, but I know damn well what a random mutation is. It still wasn't demonstrated that it branched from the Wuhan one. All you have done is given me is a definition in terms of dicks.

>It can very easily be that they came from an original source material and were both worked on in the lab with the original sample being the starting point.

>It could be that the divergence came later but still from the lab, with the lethal strain getting released early

>It can also be that they simply started development for a weaker strain after shit hit the fan. They knew plenty of past iterations they could work with so even if released an earlier one without editing, that could also have worked if it were similar enough.

The last one would require adequate documentation and the storage of samples from past iterations, which the Chinese generally wouldn't do but can't be excluded entirely. None of these possibilities require to be explained through "well, you see, when a man and a woman really love each other", nor do they require it to naturally mutate. Remember, the labs would have continued to be operational even through the epidemic, especially considering that it was the lab that knew the absolute most about the disease.

With all due respect to my dear anons, you are right that some governments will use this as an excuse to take over segments of the economy, but milk is a special case. The demand for milk in this country is hugely artificial as a result of meddling by dairy lobbyists, much of the milk gets distributed in the form of WIC or school lunches and ends up getting dumped by consumers anyway. All you are seeing here is a re-balance of that cycle where the dumping is happening on the front end instead of the backend.

I have loads of respect for our 99% huwhite farmers, but the truth is that the dairy industry (which is massively polluting and wasteful) has been riding on government money for years... Not the end of the world if they start using that land for more productive crops.

/ourgirl/ doesn't discriminate, she just needs a way to get around first. Second is we trace her steps, which is quite an issue on a continent that's de-facto in a neolithic state of infrastructure.

Of course, nogs don't travel around as much in and between their countries, but the major animal hubs like Lagos have already been blessed.

Finding and containing a virus as stealthy as Corona-chan is pretty hard in a place where even if you are bleeding from every orifice, you get carted to the local shaman instead of a doctor.

It's already ogle for the nogs, they don't know it yet. Dead hominids in the street aren't exactly a rare occurrence over there.

neither do you, but I am not resorting to weird wondercure ideas and wishful thinking, I am sticking to what we know. And what we do know is that there is no cure and that niggers are just as susceptible to /ourgirl/ as anybody else. Fabulating as to why the numbers are so low when afefrica has literally zero testing capacity or administration that keeps tabs on its population even in peaceful times is retarded.
The official numbers can only ever be as high as the amount of testing going on at any given time. Why do you think the nipponese are openly saying their actual numbers are most likely 30 times as high? It's because they don't have the testing capacity to prove any more.
Speculating over drugs based on data that unreliable alone beggars belief for how lazy and myopic it is.

>This is what the virus does.
That's a bit of a stretch. Hemoglobin has compensatory ranges, which are being demonstrated. Some specific acute hemoglobin syndromes present the same: Spot (isolated) arterial blood oxygenation / SpO2 / oxygen saturation without any other additional symptoms or alterations in perfusion. Shortness of breath is regulated by CO2; The level of partial pressure carbon dioxide controls the respiratory rate. Infection based alterations in hemoglobin, such as paroxysmal cold hemoglobinuria, or hemoglobin dysfunction -secondary- to pneumonia in pediatric setting/infants, often have other spot/isolated symptoms without fulminant and typical ARDS/respiratory distress - until later. That LATER is the key. In other words, 'does not lead to typical ARDS' is a fallacy of sample rate and time, myopically looking at only one moment in the disease progression, specifically a early-to-mid moment whereby the blood performance is within compensatory range, causing detection only by isolated metric (in this case, peripheral pulse-oximeter SpO2, which should be -confirmed- by both a venous and arterial draw if you're going to act on it, pulse-ox limitations are well known).
Regardless, there is heme attack. It does cause transient -compensatory- changes, which will register on the path to disease. But is not atypical - rather, expected and typical. If I catch the disease soon enough, I don't get ARDS, nor fulminant ARDS. The people writing this paper are not experienced professional-only clinicians.

Assertions of 'ancient virus' are funny. Nearly all influenza causes hemolytic associated symptoms, which can be considered 'ancient', but that's a weird way of looking at it. Not novel. In fact, little in this paper is novel, not even the false claims of novelty used for publication. Further, chloroquine prevents continued hemoglobin digestion by preventing heme digestion within vacuoles (reads: unless some actually novel MoA is proven, direct inhibition is not only not present, it is disproven).

Very strange paper. Reminiscent of people who don't practice non-academic/professional clinical medicine. Also reminiscent of people who don't even practice academic/non-professional associated medicine. Also reminiscent of researchers failing to consult. Also reminiscent of novice PhDs, which is far from novel, and is in fact the banal vanity of academics. Oh well.

we already had a ton, and plants here that make the stuff, from the vietnam war probably, and it has been known to work on coronaviruses in the past. As for testing, thats as simple as getting someone on a ventilator to take it, given that their survival chances are already in the gutter, there is quite literally nothing to lose for taking either a 12 dollar generic or this dog heartworm stuff. It'd be very easy to put together a doubleblind study between the two, but then NY has already concluded their study early so they could give the placebo group chloroquine.

Communist Governments Pushing For Digital 'Immunity Certificates' To Track People As Warned!

The rollout of immunity certificates across the world will likely be government-issued to first responders and citizens who have developed resistance to COVID-19.

People who have contracted the virus and have recovered, normally develop antibodies to fight the virus, could be their golden ticket to escape regions that have strict social distancing measures and or lockdowns.

Just imagine, immunity certificates granted by governments to people who have recovered or have developed resistance to the virus could be considered special passports that will allow them to freely travel across states, countries, and or the world – while everyone else remains hunkered down in their homes or doomsday bunkers.

Some of the first talks of this has originated in the UK. The government could roll out immunity passports to Britons who have already contracted and recovered from the virus so they can reenter the economy, reported The New York Times.

"An immunity certificate is an important thing that we will be doing and are looking at but it's too early in the science of the immunity that comes from having had the disease," health minister Matt Hancock said at a Downing Street press conference.

Prime Minister Boris Johnson's spokesman said Britain was completing due diligence in how feasible immunity passports would be.

In Germany, researchers are preparing a study that would see if people already immune to the virus could reenter the workforce and be granted immunity passports.

In Italy, the conservative president of the northeastern Veneto region has proposed an immunity passport for people who possess antibodies that show they are resistant to the virus. The former prime minister, Matteo Renzi, has called it a "Covid Pass" for the uninfected who can return to their normal lives. Talk of these special passports surfaced in American politics last week when House Democratic Caucus Chairman Mike Stewart called on Tennessee Gov. Bill Lee to implement an "Immunity Certificate" for first responders and healthcare professionals.

And for more confirmation that immunity passports are going to be the next big thing in the Western world, or maybe across the globe. Here is Bill Gates on March 24, giving a 50-minute interview to Chris Anderson, the Curator of TED, the non-profit that runs the TED Talks: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Xe8fIjxicoo>

"Eventually what we'll have to have is certificates of who's a recovered person, who's a vaccinated person...

Someone needs to kill this scumbag terrorist traitor. Another reason NOT to get tested at all, and simply refuse to put up with their bullshit and be prepared, and work hard to become more self-sufficient.

This is why I will never get tested for it, although I will continue my best to decontaminate anything I bring into my home as well use proper protective gear (respirator, gloves, hand sanitizer). Always decontaminate your gear too, I'll scrub down the gloves with hand sanitizer before taking them off and use UV-C for the respirator). My goal is not to ever catch corona in the first place, but if I do I am certainly not going to rely on institutions, I'll simply stay home and boost my immune system and do whatever I can to help my body fight it. Worst case scenario is I die, but at least not go out as good goyim. I wouldn't ever give them that satisfaction!

I hate to say this, but this is what I believe: Africans tend to be very distrusting of the (((medical establishment)))... remember, Africans started to kill and run out the Red Cross over tainted vaccines a few years ago! They don't trust their corrupt governments or establishments like most Westerners blindly do. Could that be the reason we don't see such a spread over there!? Think about it....

41% of Illinois Residents Dying from COVID-19 are Black elderly, immunocompromised or who otherwise have underlying health conditions like heart disease, lung disease or diabetes.

cases. Individuals classified as white follow with 28% of the state's confirmed cases, while the race of 24% of individuals who tested positive was "left

15% black, 17% Latino and almost 6% Asian.

I never said they were immune anon, I said they distrust the (((establishment))) which is obviously exploiting this bioweapon for population control, if not the ones who deliberately released it in the first place. We can assume many will be affected and some will die but until they start dropping like flies I assume they have less outbreaks simply because those third world niggers won't be around areas (like hospitals) that become hotspots for contagious outbreaks. I assume many villages are likely isolated well enough not to ever come into contact with corona ironically.

I think all states that enforce mandatory lockdowns should take responsibility for their knee-jerk reactions and forgive mortgage and rent debts. Why should people be forced to pay for something they are not allowed to make an income to pay for? It's like disabling someone by shattering their hip with a bat, and then blaming them for not being able to fucking walk! People rightfully blame China for this stupid communistic shit, and then turn the blind eye when our own governments do it... amazing.

> I assume they have less outbreaks simply because those third world niggers won't be around areas (like hospitals) that become hotspots for contagious outbreaks

I could buy that, but that's not the initial reason you gave for their lower numbers of infected. At first, you said it was because they didn't trust the medical establishment, which quite frankly at this point isn't even trying to deal with Apefrica since they have their own problems in the developed world. Either the virus is completely out of control there (it definitely is in the cities that serve as international hubs for neo-colonizers to rape the businesses there) or it is somewhat under control simply because they are so caveman-like in their existence that living in random mud huts separated by hundreds of miles is enough social distancing to keep the virus away.

>Why do people save this sort of schizo crap?

Because women and boomers in particular absolutely love this garbage. Lets them think they can predict the future. Nevermind the fact that all they are doing is desperately looking for things in the present that have already aligned with it and are incapable of actually predicting the future with this shit. It's kinda like reading horoscopes except even more useless. Because at least horoscopes help people develop a particular rhythm in their daily lives to know when to cut their hair or to just make a decision in a particularly divisive moment (even if that decision may be wrong). It takes away the need to think for themselves while making themselves feel like they have done something good. Sure, they can speculate what it may or may not mean, but it holds no predictive power and as such they miss the mark. That part they will ignore because a singular thing aligned in all of that, making the rest 100% true no matter what. For example, bears coming out here would be used to pretend that it was useful for anything. Bears always come out of hibernation in spring. That happens every year. And yet it is somehow some magical prediction.

I don't think UBI is a good solution because it leads to hyperinflation and a lot more insolvency and corruption. What they should do is enact reforms (such as debt forgiveness) in the areas they enforce lock-downs and close down businesses (creating mass unemployment). Not doing so only creates an epidemic of poverty and third world collapse along with the initial problem, the virus! It actually exacerbates the problem.

>Singapore has told 20,000 foreign workers to stay in their dormitories for 14 days as coronavirus cases increase in the city state.

>Two dormitories have been isolated: one with 13,000 workers and 63 cases, and one with 6,800 workers and 28 cases.

>They are typically home to men from South Asia who work in construction.

>The workers will be paid and given three meals a day - but some have complained of overcrowded and dirty conditions.

>Although Singapore was praised for its proactive response to the virus, the number of locally-transmitted cases is increasing - and a "lockdown" begins on Tuesday.

Giving people tax-breaks within the period of the quarantine itself would help immensely. But instead businesses are demanded to give people hazard pay and to maintain their current workforce without changing hours or pay but without actually reducing taxes. So anyone that gets hazard pay ends up getting half of that hazard pay taxed anyway. And for what? To pay for some bureaucrat or soldier to stay at home? Hell, lots of people end up in the "non-essential" category so many of them not only don't get paid if their paycheck is based on performance but the landowner is encouraged to throw them out by still being taxed for housing them. Having a place to live is apparently non-essential. But delivering dildoes to your front doorstep is top priority, whereby Amazon will send that shit within less than a day.

-dirty place- does this make nigs toughen up?

-skinny niggers - coronchan seems to love fatties, regular joe negro won't go get tested unless he's dying and even if he is dying maybe he won't.

-young niggers- i doubt africa has a really old population, coronachan is young, but she likes em mature.

-it's autumn- cold season is just starting in the south

-lack of inter connectivity- roads, trains and shit just don't >Prediction- Africa will take a lot less time to expand, but will do so over the next couple of months while it gets colder, also, she will get her share of deaths because of the slums, finally, while the rest of the world (more or less) has her beat, Coronachan will live in Africa for years, always finding a new village to gangbang. Africa (and India) will have to be cut off from global networks asap.

Guess what

HAHA HOWS THAT DILDO FEEL UP YOUR ASS.

>President Donald Trump on Sunday once again touted the potential life-saving benefits of treating coronavirus patients with hydroxychloroquine, a powerful anti-malaria drug, despite a dearth of medical professionals or clinical evidence supporting his claims. It just so happens that one of the largest manufacturers of the drug, Novartis, previously paid Trump's now-incarcerated former personal attorney Michael Cohen more than $1 million for healthcare policy insight following Trump's election in 2016.

>The Swiss drug maker signed a contract that paid Cohen's newly formed limited-liability corporation Essential Consultants $100,000 per month in February of 2017. After details of the deal were leaked by the now-jailed Michael Avenatti, whose then-client Stormy Daniels was engaged in a legal dispute with the president, the company's CEO issued a public apology saying Novartis "made a mistake" in contracting with the president's personal attorney.

A manufacturer paying a paltry sum to pay to play in our pay to play system in 2016? And thus the selection of this one drug 3 years later in an unpredictable pandemic? really? Lets stick to just the facts, that chloroquine has been known for quite some time to treat coronaviruses in the past. Fauci himself championed it for treating MERS. Odds are pretty damned good at this point with all of the studies done that it works. And Trump, damn his betrayal of what he ran on, and of us, was right to call it.

Hey anon, walking debt here with another unexciting update etc., etc.. I'm fine friend, just haven't been around that much, been shacking up with a friend of mine and playing vidya to kill the time. For anyone remembering, and wondering, it's the guy I was in the process of redpilling. My health is absolutely fine, had another cold I guess, fully recovered by now. Appreciate you asking about me my dude, I'm mostly lurking now. Don't worry, should I get seriously ill which i won't, I'll make sure to let you all know. Count on it.

Just a random thought, it seems in Europe they're pushing this 'peaked' thing really hard, and in the US apparently they can tell exactly when their peak will hit (Thursday). Is it me or is there a concerted push to get back to normal and wrap up the meters, hide the death in statistics (they know by now how, dosing data from 'recent days' to help their narrative). Something stinks, it feels like they're going to push us all out to save their shekels.

It's definitely to save their shekels. Companies both large and small are applying pressure to get the "essential" stamp no matter what (along with companies not enslaved by the banking cartel realising they got fucked over) and the government is missing out on shekels, since the "essential" businesses don't bring enough in taxes. Workers are doing runs on the bank, thus putting the bankers on edge while they count the money, and are losing both their livelihood and their homes in large enough numbers all at the same time to make the government worry about stability. More shekels would need to go into keeping the peace, which compounded with the reduced tax income means trouble.

Given the fact that less companies are operating now due to the fact that they are forbidden to act, it would be pretty naive to pretend nobody knows the effect on taxes. Exactly how great of an effect, nobody can tell, but the general trend is pretty clear. It's like saying that nobody knows what the effect on prices is when a market is flooded with cheap goods. Because, you know, people just need to wait and see: nobody can predict what the future

The time to start worrying will be if he's put on a ventilator. Mortality rate is up to 80% in those cases, but apparently a lot die from bacterial infections related to the intubation process. >media companies sucking Chinese yellow cock

Anon, that's because they've run out of consumers in the US and want more; they can't exist with China's middle class alone. They're roving corporate parasites and will go to any country, of any political affiliation, if it means they can get more shekels. If international trade collapses and America First actually goes into vogue, I guaran-fucking-tee you'll see them waving flags and saying 'We've always been a 100% American company! USA! Red white and blue!' It's shamelessness on a grand scale.

>Anon, that's because they've run out of consumers in the US and want more;

Can confirm. I used to work at a big motion picture company, and it was all about nips and pajeets for them. Everything had to be a big dumb sfx action thing, because they needed to keep burgers at the same level, but expand into chingchong. The had an explicit policy of dumbing down as much as possible, watching that the us numbers didn't fall off, but trying to get growth in brown and yellow places.

Ok, fair point, we "know" but we don't know. For all we know, the massive spike in liquor sales could balance out the bars being shut down. It will be interesting to see the Q2 statistics.

That's because of two things:

1] Trump worshiping white trash who ate fish antibiotics and believe they're immune because Orange Man Said So.

2] Niggers can't into social distancing.
